RUSS SLAY GERMAN ENVOY

DENY WILSON DEMANDS FOR WIRE CONTROL

Senators Vote for a Vacation in Spite of His Plea.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—The senate tonight refused to agree to President Wilson's plea that it grant him immediate control over the telegraph, telephone, cable, and radio systems of the country.

Ignoring his direct request for this authority, asked as a war measure to avert the threatened telegraph strike, called for Monday, the senate, by a vote of 27 to 26, adopted a resolution to adjourn congress until Aug. 12.

The adjournment resolution was proposed by Senator Martin, the majority leader, and adopted by the votes of Democrats.

Majority Leader Kitchin offered the adjournment resolution in the house later. Confronted with the certainty of a defeat, he withdrew the resolution and the house adojurned until Monday.

Heated Debate in Senate.

Vigorous debate on the recess program broke out in the senate. On the Republican side it was led by Senator Borah of Idaho, who declared that congress should not adjourn without disposing of the wire control resolution. Democratic leaders, replying to Senator Borah, insisted that there was no pressing necessity for the measure at this time.

"We would like to know," Mr. Borah said, "something about the reported program to recess and leave important matters undisposed of. The house passed the resolution in haste, obviously on the theory that it was necessary before a recess. I don't propose to join in any move to abandon this legislation and have the blame put on the senate if any emergency arises during the recess."

Senator Martin, replying, declared passage of the resolution is not necessary. He said President Wilson now has authority to take over the lines if the necessity exists.

Says House "Passes Buck."

Mr. Borah insisted that the house would not have acted with such haste had it not been convinced of the necessity.

"O, the house often shifts responsibility that way," Mr. Martin said. "It would not have passed the resolution if it hadn't known that the senate would take its time to investigate. The house is in the habit of doing things like that."

Senator Overman said there is now a law on the statute books, passed in 1916, empowering the president to take over the wire systems if he deems it necessary, and construed this as all the authority needed.

Senator Lewis said: "We don't need to pass this resolution now, because the president, as commander in chief, can take over whatever he needs."

Pomerene Wants Reasons.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio declared he opposed any action without information regarding the necessity of the government control. He read a telegram signed by eighty Western Union employes at Columbus, O., opposing government control, and insisting that the threatened strike would not seriously affect communication.

Senator Lewis said committee hearings could be held during recess without loss of time.

Senator Sherman of Illinois denied that the strike call of the operators' union constituted an emergency and presented a telegram from 239 Western Union operators at Chicago "repudiating" the authority of union officials. He suggested that Postmaster General Burleson is "manufacturing excuses" in support of the legislation.

"Stay On the Job."

An appeal to "stay on the job" was made by Senator Johnson of California and a few persons in galleries who applauded were ordered ejected by Senator King of Utah, temporarily presiding.

"The highest duty congress can do is to stay on the job," Senator Johnson shouted. "Not on the ground that the

Big Uprising in Moscow; 75,000 Strong

BULLETIN.

MOSCOW, July 6.—An army of 75,000 revolutionary troops has begun a march on Kieff, according to delayed dispatches received here from that city. German forces are retreating before the advance.

PARIS, July 6.—Gen. Count von Mirbach, German ambassador to Russia, has been assassinated at Moscow, according to a Berlin report received by the Havas agency.

Obtaining admittance under false pretenses, two unidentified men asked for an audience with the German ambassador this morning, then attacked him, wounding him with shots from a revolver. They followed this by throwing grenades. Von Mirbach died almost immediately.

The assassins fled and have not been arrested.

ACTIVE IN RUSSIA.

Gen. Count von Mirbach had been active in negotiations between Germany and the Bolsheviki.

A dispatch July 5, from Moscow, dated Thursday, June 20, said that Count von Mirbach was that day successful in obtaining the release of six Finnish officials detained by Russia in exchange for Leo Kameneff, Bolshevik ambassador to Austria-Hungary, who had been held as a hostage in Finland.

Former Minister to Greece.

Count von Mirbach formerly was German minister to Greece. The Bolshevik government consented to his nomination as ambassador to Russia last April. In May a dispatch from Moscow said that the demands presented by the German ambassador would virtually make Russia a German colony.

On May 27 the Russian government agreed to the appointment of Count von Mirbach as an intermediary between Russia and the trans-Caucasian government. On May 31 he obtained from Russia an acceptance of the German proposal for peace negotiations between the Bolsheviki and Finland.

Was 79 Years Old.

Count von Mirbach was born June 27, 1839. He entered the army as a youth, but after three years' service during which he attained a lieutenancy, he took up the study of law. He became a member of the reichstag in 1886 and served in that body for many years, being regarded as one of the most eloquent representatives of the agrarian party. He was ennobled in 1888 by Emperor Frederick.

In and Out of Favor.

Count von Mirbach was in and out of royal favor more than once. In 1900, after several years of service as marshal of the court of the German empress, he was given a prolonged leave of absence because of dissatisfaction with his management of large sums intrusted to him by the empress for the construction and endowment of churches. The count was accused of tactlessness in taking money from people whom it was embarrassing to his royal mistress to recognize.

U. S. MAY STRIKE IN SIBERIA

WILSON TURNS TO ALLIED PLAN TO SEND ARMY

War Council Points to Silent Support of Intervention.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—Following a conference between President Wilson and his chief advisers on war policies today, it became known that the government has taken another step in the direction of sanctioning allied intervention to drive the Germans out of Russia and to reconstitute the Russian people as an allied belligerent.

Although authoritative announcement is lacking it is inferred from the guarded statements of participants in the conference that a decision was reached to acquiesce in the judgment of our allies as to the course to be pursued in Russia.

This is taken to mean that if the allies decide on intervention in Siberia, with a large Japanese army as the main force, the president will withdraw the objections he made some weeks ago when Great Britain and France sounded Japan on the proposal and Japan sought the views of Mr. Wilson.

Supreme Council for Action.

There is no doubt that Great Britain and France still favor intervention as the only means of combating the absorption of Russia by Germany and deem the move all the more propitious in view of the success of the Czecho-Slovak forces in defeating the Bolsheviki and occupying Vladivostok.

It is contended by the entente that this force should be supported with a view to establishing an anti-German government strong enough to hold Siberia and influence European Russia to rise against the Hun.

It has been known for some time that the supreme war council of the allies at Versailles favors intervention and definite plans are to be discussed by this body. The shaping of these plans will be influenced by the modification of the president's objection to intervention.

It is assumed from guarded statements following the White House conference that the United States will not give express approval to the course which the allies believe to be best in the circumstances, but will bow to their judgment and be prepared to furnish troops and whatever else may be demanded by the plan of operations agreed upon.

War Chiefs Called In.

The White House conference lasted nearly two hours. In addition to the president, those present were the secretaries of state, war, and navy; Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of the army general staff, and Admiral Benson, chief of naval operations. Two naval aids from Admiral Benson's office brought to the White House maps of the Transsiberian railway and charts of the Siberian coast.

Prior to the conference, Earl Reading, the British ambassador and high commissioner, had an interview with Secretary Baker, and he again conferred with Mr. Baker upon the conclusion of the meeting at the White House.

Up to this time President Wilson has taken the position that it would be an error of judgment on the part of the allies to send a large force of troops into Russian territory. He is credited with believing that action of that character would arouse resentment among the Russian people and cause them to take up arms, in co-operation with the Germans, to resist the allied forces.

Wilson Favors Economic Aid.

After long thought on the subject the president reached the conclusion that the best course to pursue in the desired effort to bring order out of the Russian chaos was to extend the aid to the Russian people through peaceful means. His plan contemplated sending to Siberia a commission of distinguished American civilians which would make offers of American aid to enable the Russian people to re-estab-

BOCHES BLAME WAR ON PRUSSIA

Stories of Being Forced to Fight Fail to Fool Americans.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

[Copyright: 1918.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 6.—The examination of 1,000 German soldiers captured by the Americans and classified according to the German states from which they came, has brought one absorbingly interesting result.

Practically every one of the German soldiers from states other than Prussia blame the continuation of the war on Prusia and say they do not want to fight the Americans, but do so because the Prussians make them.

Show Way Wind Blows.

The unanimity of the expression of the same sentiments by Bavarians, Saxons, Württembergers, Poles, and Alsatians as given to American officers indicates their attitude and represents something more than the expression of individual sentiments.

There is nothing remarkable about Poles and Alsatians saying they don't want to fight the kaiser's battles, but such statements from Bavarians and Saxons are to be taken with a grain of salt.

There is no disposition on the part of well informed American officers to take the statement of these prisoners simply at their face value. I have heard the opinion expressed that these Germans, knowing the disposition in high circles in America to place special blame on Prussians, seek by their statements to curry favor as prisoners of war.

Seek to Dodge Reckoning.

The real truth of the situation may be taken to be that it is a reflection on the internal German politics. So long as it looked as if Germany would win the Bavarians and Saxons fought with the Prussians in the selfish hope of world domination. Now that with America's help it appears even to German soldiers that the kaiser cannot win, the Bavarians and Saxons seek to spread among the Americans the idea that Prussia is all to blame so that when the war is ended the punishment may fall on Prussia, and not on all German states alike.

VIENNA CLAIMS NAVAL VICTORY

AMSTERDAM, July 6.—An Austrian official statement received here says:

"A detachment of our torpedo boats encountered a superior enemy torpedo force on July 2. A violent engagement occurred at short range. A large enemy destroyer was set afire; another was severely damaged. The enemy retired swiftly.

"Our vessels were little damaged; a few men were slightly wounded."

AUSTRIAN RULERS ARE ACCUSED OF AIDING ITALIANS

LONDON, July 6.—No light has yet been shed on the mysterious rumors concerning Emperor Charles and Empress Zita of Austria, which Dr. von Seydler, the premier, recently found necessary to deny when his attention was called to them by a group of Austrian deputies. The premier denounced "these base and absolutely senseless tales," and declared that any one caught spreading the rumors would be punished severely.

One report circulating among certain continental papers is that the royal pair is charged with revealing the plans of the recent battle along the Piave to the Italians. Another report is that the emperor and empress planned to flee from Austria.

The origin of the rumors is not given, but a theory advanced is that the Austrian public is indignant at Emperor Charles' peace overtures through Prince Sixtus of Bourbon which caused a sensation in diplomatic circles of the central empires.

According to messages from Vienna the visit of the deputies to Dr. von Seydler was preceded by a public meeting of the Christian Social party last Sunday, which was attended by Cardinal Piffl, archbishop of Vienna, and where the rumors concerning Emperor Charles and Empress Zita were energetically denied. The Austrian state censor prohibited publication of the details of this meeting.

AURORA-ELGIN ELECTRIC KILLS 2 GIRLS IN RAIN

Viola Bloomquist and Elsa Johnson, both of St. Charles, Ill., were both killed at 10:30 last night in the storm by a Chicago, Aurora, and Elgin car at Pinelands, an amusement park. The girls were waiting for a car in which to return to St. Charles. The electric, running between Aurora and Elgin, was coming in the opposite direction. The young women evidently misjudged the distance the car was from them because of the rain, which was falling heavily. They started to run across and were struck. Miss Johnson was instantly killed. Miss Bloomquist died a few minutes later in the car which was hurrying her to Elgin.

WILSON TO VETO $2.40 WHEAT BILL

Price Voted by Congress Would Increase the Cost of Bread.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—Congress today compromised the dispute over increasing the guaranteed minimum wheat price by adopting an amendment fixing the price of No. 2 northern spring wheat or its equivalent at not less than $2.40 a bushel to the farmer. This is an increase of 20 cents over the present minimum.

Shortly after the action was taken Representative Lever of South Carolina, chairman of the agriculture committee, announced on the floor of the house that he had been informed President Wilson would veto the amendment.

Officials estimated that if the $2.40 price for wheat is approved the price of flour would be increased by approximately $2 a barrel, with an increase of from 2 to 3 cents in the price of a loaf of bread. With $2.40 as the basic price, wheat probably would sell in New York at $2.75 a bushel, it was said.

House Vote 150 to 106.

The house adopted the amendment by a vote of 150 to 106, on motion of Representative McLaughlin of Michigan. An amendment proposed by Representative Morgan of Oklahoma, to fix the price at $2.65, was voted down without a roll call. The senate promptly concurred in the $2.40 amendment by a viva voce vote.

The amendment, as it now stands, provides that "the guaranteed prices for the several standard grades of wheat for the crop of 1918 shall be based upon No. 2 northern spring or its equivalent, at not less than $2.40 a bushel at the local elevator or the local railway market where such wheat is delivered from the farm where produced."

Urges Further Price Fixing.

Representative Lever of South Carolina, chairman of the house agriculture committee, insisted that if wheat prices were fixed similar action should be taken with regard to every basic commodity.

Representative Griffin of New York spoke against the principle of price fixing generally. He declared congress was trying to solve the nation's economic problems by "pulling on its own bootstraps."

Anticipating a presidential veto of $2.40 wheat, senators from the wheat growing states made a determined effort to eliminate part of the resolution offered by Senator Martin of Virginia, the majority leader, to continue certain appropriations for the executive departments at the same rate as last year until the final enactment of the regular supply bills. The move was defeated, however, without a roll call.

SUMMARY OF DAY'S WAR NEWS

(By the Associated Press.)

THE Italians have succeeded in clearing the Austrians out of a very considerable part of the terrain the enemy had been clinging to near the mouth of the Piave, between the new and old beds of the river.

In hard fighting the Austrian resistance was broken in the area close to the Adriatic. Gen. Diaz's troops have driven the invaders completely out of the contested district and across the new bed of the river from Grisolera to the sea, a distance of approximately five miles. Four hundred of the enemy were taken prisoner in this fighting.

Vienna admits a loss of ground here, conceding that the Austrian advanced forces were driven back on their main body.

In the northern part of this low lying sector northeast of Capo Sile, where the Austrians, although driven back, are still west of the new stream they rallied their forces and counter attacked in the hope of regaining some of their lost terrain. Gen. Diaz's troops stood their ground, however, and repulsed the enemy thrusts with loss.

Except on the Italian front, the closing days of the week witnessed little fighting of an intensive nature anywhere. For the moment the allied plan of local thrusts in the Franco-Belgian area, calculated to upset such dispositions for a new attack as the Germans might be making on any of the numerous fronts involved, showed no fresh development. Only the artillery and the aviators and raiding parties were busy.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

HARWICH, England, July 6.—A British warship cruising in Helgoland bight last week rescued from a raft a Norwegian sailor named Ohlsson, who was in the last stages of exhaustion. He was the only survivor of the Norwegian bark Eglinton, which was sunk by a German submarine while on a voyage to Norway with a cargo of coal.

For nine days Ohlsson had been tossing about in the North sea, and had seen eight of his companions on the raft perish.

"The submarine made no signal to us," Ohlsson said, "but when she got within about 200 or 300 yards she began to fire at the ship. In a short time the rigging was all shot away and we tried to launch the lifeboat, but a shot snapped the davits and the boat fell into the sea.

"One man was hit in the back, the steward had his leg shot off, and the captain was struck on the wrist by a piece of shell which ripped up his arm.

"We then launched a small raft which was lying on deck."

The submarine commander approached within about thirty feet of the raft upon which were nine helpless sailors, four of whom were wounded and one of whom was dying, and sailed around it and then went away without a word.

TROOPS GUARD CREW OF DEATH BOAT FROM MOB

Columbia Survivors Make Threats; 67 Bodies Found.

BY ROBERT LEE.

Peoria, Ill., July 6.—[Special.]—Firmness on the part of Mayor Charles Schaefer of Pekin, sixty-seven of whose citizens, most of whom were women and children, are known to have been drowned in the wreck of the excursion steamer Columbia, prevented a threatened hostile outbreak there tonight.

More than 100 men who survived the collapse of the steamer in midstream when it struck a floating log, broke in half and sank, made threats of violence toward members of the steamers' crew. The Pekin home guard troops, under Capt. O. W. Frederick, patroled the streets and did much to dissuade the angry townsmen.

"We have sensed trouble and made our arrangements accordingly," Capt. Frederick said. "It is likely that it will be necessary to close all saloons before the night is over. Many residents of this city were victims of the disaster and our men are angry. They believe the crew of the Columbia had been drinking and were negligent."

Take 67 Bodies from Wreck.

The rumor that the Columbia was running wild in the Illinois river in a place midway between Peoria and Pekin, where the current is most dangerous, was dissipated by Capt. Herman Mehl, master of the Columbia, and Thomas Williams, the pilot, but it was not until a late hour that the grumblings ceased.

Capt. Mehl spent the whole day in the wreckage of his craft, helping in the work of recovery. He has not slept in forty-eight hours. His wife was among the wounded, suffering a scalp wound.

Divers and others worked until late tonight, searching for bodies. When darkness halted the work sixty-seven bodies were in the morgue at Pekin.

Dance Floor Cleared of Dead.

Some of the divers reported many more seen pinioned in the submerged wreckage. Others said only a few remained. It is generally believed that many were drowned in leaping overboard into the swift current which bore them under.

Capt. T. A. Collins of Camp Bradley, in charge of the rescue work, said tonight that all bodies had been cleared from the dance floor, but he expected to find more on the lower floor, where it was impossible for the divers to reach them without the aid of wrecking tugs, which were on their way from Chicago. He said he thought that the list of dead would be more than 100. Chief of Police Smith of Pekin declared that the list of dead will reach 150.

When a heavy storm, accompanied by high wind, broke here tonight fears were expressed that the sunken steamer would break to pieces and release bodies still pinioned in the wreckage to be swept down stream. The government was maintaining a patrol about the wrecked steamer.

Few Men Among Dead.

It is significant to note that out of the first fifty-three bodies recovered only seven were those of men. Six were babies. This aroused the speculation that the men broke for safety without considering the plight of the women.

City officials of Peoria and Pekin tonight ordered a discontinuance of river traffic until further notice. A half dozen river steamers lay idly warped to their moorings throughout the day, showing no sign of life.

While the hunt for bodies was carried on there was activity on the part of state, county and federal authorities in furtherance of an investigation. The coroner's jury was sworn in and the bureau of navigation took action.

Boat Once Condemned.

Important among the discoveries made in connection with the investigation was that the Columbia was condemned more than nine years ago as unseaworthy. Last year Capt. Mehl spent more than $20,000 in rehabilitating the ancient craft. This eliminated much suspicion and the boat entered upon this year's business with an apparently clean record.

Neither Coroner Clary of Tazewell county nor Deputy Coroner Wilmot would make a statement affecting Mehl or Williams. Both said action connecting the officers or crew of the boat with any negligence or failure of duty must come up regularly before the inquest.

While stretcher bearers carried bodies up the main street of Pekin tonight to the hastily improvised morgues in vacant stores, scores of women and children, most of them in tears, lined the curbs, trying for a glimpse of lost relatives. Somewhere in the distance a cornet was playing "Nearer My God to Thee," and as each additional body was brought up the noise and grumbling in the saloons increased.

Family Dies Together.

Virtually all the victims were from Pekin, and the bodies were, for the most part, quickly identified.

Survivors stood about in little groups telling tales of heroism and horror. When the fate of the boat seemed sealed, according to witnesses, Clyde Wishart, a Pekin man, embraced his wife, then his two children, and the little family perished, clasped in each other's arms. Their bodies have been recovered.

In the hands of the body of another man, found late today, was a quantity of his wife's hair. His attempt to save her failed, and her body was brought up shortly after the searchers found her husband's corpse.

Loaded with Merrymakers.

The Columbia put out from its wharf in Peoria shortly before midnight. Those aboard for the larger part were members of the South Side Social club of Pekin and some friends from Kingston Mines. They had come to Peoria earlier in the evening, bringing their children with them to attend a war work carnival in progress in Peoria.

The Columbia was about 125 feet in length and of the usual broad beam of river boats, which are little more than exaggerated barges. The hull, like all river boats, was flat of bottom and regarded as incapable of being capsized. The superstructure consisted of two deck elevations. The hull deck contained a barroom and chairs and tables amidships. Aft on this deck were the boilers and engine of the typical stern wheeler.

Dance Deck Exits Small.

The next deck was given over entirely to dancing. It was entirely enclosed except for four small exits, two at each end. The exits, according to a preponderance of the testimony of survivors and others who had sailed aboard the craft, were narrow, permitting the entrance or exit of but one person at a time.

Small flights of stairs led from this deck to the upper deck, where a few chairs were disposed. Two small boats were lashed fast here.

Upon the departure of the boat, most of the passengers sought the lower deck and the dancing floor. Only a few, among them Samuel Ellmore and Roy Walker, both of Pekin, were on the top deck. Ellmore vigorously declared the vessel had been sheered into deep water after the first crash against a half submerged obstruction, deserting the safer and more shallow water for the deeper and swifter current.

Hits Floating Tree.

Capt. Mehl said his first intimation of danger was when the vessel sustained a slight shock. Ellmore declared this was occasioned when the prow struck the branches of a huge tree floating.

Mehl directed a deckhand to go below and find the extent of damage. Almost at the same time the boat began to list very slightly.

In the dancing salon a young man by the name of Bud Ray stepped toward the starboard side. The engines stopped momentarily. The orchestra quit playing. The dancers paused in their figures. Ray turned toward the musicians.

"Go ahead and play," he called; "it's nothing."

Resume Their Dancing.

Simultaneously the engines started again with the music and the dancers whirled afresh. More than 100 young women and men, of ages ranging from 10 to 20, were on the floor. Near one of the exits stood a woman with a baby carriage and a small infant sleeping in it. In a chair nearby an old woman was knitting with olive and drab yarn. A jovial boy sang aloud: "O, Boy, Where Do You Go from Here?"

The lights had flickered off and on again. There was a tramping of feet overhead where Ellmore and Walker were half dozing. Ellmore roused himself and called to Walker: "This boat is going over and I'm gonna get out o' here."

"She's Going Down!"

He ran for a life preserver. The next thing was a shout from the lower deck. Capt. Mehl megaphoned his hands and bellowed aloft. "Everybody get upstairs. She's going down."

There was a second and more violent jolt which caused the unwieldy vessel to shiver and groan aloud. The lights went out. A deckhand screamed from below: "There's two feet of water and comin' in."

There was a rush for the exits. Only four of them and each wide enough to admit a person at a time. Then came a new groaning and twisting of tortured timbers. The hull parted amidships and the whole superstructure, like a house of egg shells, crumpled into kindling and the boat sank into the mud bottom twenty feet below.

Grimly Tug for Life.

All in the briefest space of time there were a million emotions put into action. At first there was no shouting, no calling aloud. Each person silently and grimly tugged to save the thing which seemed most important at the moment. Feet thudded with ridiculous celerity across the slippery decks as the list to starboard sent men, women, and children into a furious race downhill.

Chairs and tables, parts of the ship's gear and metal buckets clattered abeam as the decks went awash. Men, women, and children clutched and gripped and held fast to each other and to fixed objects and to movable things. An indescribable chaos of things and persons swept down against the wall of the dancing salon and stuck there.

All movable things on the hull deck went with a swift slide into the river. Then the silence broke and a wild chorus of screams and shouts for help burst out. Some of the women gained the upper deck and the two small boats were launched.

Many Dead in Dance Hall.

"When the crash came the musicians in the dance hall rushed to the windows," William Newman, a survivor, said. "I yelled at them and induced them to resume playing. Suddenly the boat swung sharply about and in an instant we were flooded. My feet soon touched the floor again and I pushed up so my head was above water.

"Then I broke a window and passed out my dancing partner. With the aid of Ben Murphy, another passenger, I succeeded in passing out a few more women and children.

"The dead were thick in that dance hall."

Fishermen Rush to Rescue.

Ellmore tried to fasten his life belt about him. It was too short to accommodate even his meager circumference He clung to the cork contraption and leaped. After a time he reached the Peoria shore. He looked at his watch. It had stopped at precisely 12:30 a. m.

The screaming and calls for help now rose into a soul-wrenching medley of appeal. Then the river was suddenly and mysteriously dotted with boats. From the shanties of the fishermen along the shore there popped out all manner of nondescript craft.

The oarsmen fought with their crazy oars against a current swift almost beyond their strength. But they reached the side of the broken "beauty of the river."

Capt. Mehl stood aloft. "She's all busted in," he was saying. "For God's sake, go up and have Peoria keep any of the big boats from coming down here."

Fishermen Aid Victims.

He was prevailed upon to come down. The boatmen scurried about the splintered vessel and drew forth women and children. Such men as managed to gain the small exits swam ashore.

The cries for help died away. Then everything was quiet.

The moon shone brightly. The bosom of the river became smooth again and rippled laughingly about the ragged and broken timbers which were thrust ludicrously into the stream. At 3 o'clock this morning the rescue work was stopped. It was considered too dark for further exploration.

Those who had come out alive were given temporary care in the huts of fishermen. Those who remained had ceased to cry aloud.

Stolidly the members of the crew sat on the muddy shore waiting for break of day. Fast oarsmen had gone to tell the news in Pekin and Peoria.

Home Guards Called Out.

Before dawn a fleet of small craft was scurrying down with the current to the wreck. The river road, narrow and almost impassable in places, became a honking Michigan avenue of automobiles.

The motorists kept in the tumbledown road until they could proceed no further. Then the vast herd of dead machines stood like some jangle gathering under the drooping willows of the oozy bank, while their occupants watched and watched and never looked up from watching the crushed eggshell of a steamboat that lay holding its dead in midstream.

Mayor Charles Schaefer of Pekin immediately called out unit 53 of the Pekin home guards, under command of Capt. Frederick. Guards were placed along the river bank, about the temporary morgue in Pekin, and as escorts for the bodies recovered. Mayor Schaefer sent out a call to the mayors of surrounding cities for aid. A request was made on the chief of police of Chicago for expert divers.

Aged Woman Dies Knitting.

Dawn—The boats put out and reached the side of the Columbia. The decks were wreckage strewn. The watchers on shore saw two of the men stop and stare. Then a white sheet was placed about an inanimate form. And this was lifted into a small launch and carried away.

The rescuers peered into the careened dancing salon. A woman, dead, was clutching the twisted handle of a baby carriage. Far in a corner a small infant lay dead.

An old woman held a knitting needle in her dead hand. A ball of olive drab yarn was snarled in some broken bits of furniture.

A card case, bearing the name of Lawrence J. Duffin, a sailor of the Great Lakes Naval Training station, was found floating in the water.

Duffin has not been found. He is a Peoria boy.

"Red" Saunders, the drummer in the orchestra, had been seen to leap through a skylight. He hasn't been seen. A woman's body was taken out. Her wrist watch bore the initials, "L. L. N." Identification was difficult.

Divers Enter Hold.

Pending the arrival of the Chicago divers, the brothers Barnewoldt, divers of Peoria, went to the wreck and immediately entered the submerged hold to search for bodies.

It was at first necessary to remove a great clutter of broken wood and furniture. Twenty-five bodies were removed to the Pekin morgue on the first trip of the gasoline launches. They were ranged side by side to await inspection by friends and relatives.

In front of the morgue there gathered a solemn throng. Conversation was in whispers. Necks were stretched to gain a sight of the sheeted stretchers inside. It became necessary to double the guard at the door, and finally it no longer was possible to carry the bodies through the front entrance and the ambulances were sent around in the rear.

Second Cargo of Dead Arrives.

The second cargo of dead was landed on the wharf at Pekin shortly before noon. The crowds in the street gave way before the whirr of the motor ambulances and searchers.

An old woman, her face red with weeping, walked by the side of a young man who carried a child. The body of a young woman had just been identified as the daughter-in-law of the one, wife of the other, and mother of the third. They walked slowly home. As quickly as identifications could be made the bodies were sent to the homes of relatives to be prepared for burial. Deputy Coroner H. C. Wilmot took charge of the temporary morgue and aided relatives in the work of identification.

Coroner Clary of Pekin, which is in Tazewell county, just across the river from Peoria county, took charge of work at the wreck. It was determined early in the day that Tazewell county should take precedence in official action. A number of bodies were removed to Peoria for disposition. Coroner Clary promptly ordered them sent to Pekin forthwith. It was done.

Chicago Diver Seeks Evidence.

Harry Halderson, the Chicago diver, who recovered many of the bodies of Eastland victims, arrived late in the afternoon and began searching for bodies and also making a scrutiny of the interior of the steamer for evidence to be used at the inquest.

Coroner Clary announced the members of the coroner's jury as embracing Henry Clay, Ed L. Meyers, Patrick Flynn, Fred Siebens, George P. Nickel, and Edward Nickel. The jurors were in session only long enough to organize and postpone the taking of testimony.

John Dougherty, assistant United States district attorney, promised to make a thorough investigation in behalf of the government. Assistant Attorney General Mansfield, who is in Peoria, said he would take up the state's portion of the inquiry. Aiding in the investigation is a patrol boat from the federal shipyards in Peoria under command of Engineer C. V. Brainard, officer in charge of the district.

HEROIC RESCUES LIGHT TRAGEDY OF RIVER BOAT

Girls and Boys Save Many When Vessel Goes Down.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Peoria, Ill., July 6.—[Special.]—One of the incidents was the finding of the bodies of two women dressed precisely alike; each wore a wrist watch of the same make and each timepiece had stopped at 12:35.

Charles Whillinger, a Peoria youth, dived repeatedly without a diving suit or protection of any kind, and Kenneth Gay, 14 years old, seized a life belt when the crash came, but two women, he says, tore it from him. The lad succeeded, however, in swimming ashore.

Children Save Lives.

Kenneth's sister, Gladys, was rescued by her playmate, Mabel Rue. Gladys is 13, Mabel 12.

Another little girl, Frances Poebel, aged 15, is said to have saved the lives of four women.

One of the hardest tasks of those in charge of the rescue work was keeping off the swarms of curiosity seekers. Many of these were anxious to procure souvenirs of the catastrophe. One or two instances of vandalism were detected.

Priest Remains on Duty.

Father Sullivan of St. Joseph's Catholic church, Pekin, was one of the first to reach the scene of the wreck and refused to leave even long enough for lunch, fearing that some one of his faith might be found who would need the last sacraments. A solemn requiem high mass for the dead will be said in St. Joseph's church tomorrow morning.

One of the survivors of the Columbia is also a survivor of the President Lincoln. He is Harry Johnson, a jackie.

Joe Wilson, son of Sheriff J. L. Wilson, who was on the boat, displayed his heroism by rescuing Mrs. Stanley Everett and her two small children.

Guy McIntyre, a Pekin youth, is said to have saved seven others.

All Pekin factories and workshops were closed.

LETTER ROUSES MOTHER'S FEARS OF KIDNAPING

A Chicago postmark on a letter presumably mailed from the country led an almost frantic mother yesterday to suspect that her three children had been kidnaped and caused her to appeal to the police to search for them.

The mother is Mrs. Antonia Novicka Griwvcki of 2018 West Twenty-second place. The children are Agnes Novicka, 12 years old; Lillian Novicka, 10 years old, and Charles Novicka, 8 years old, all by a former marriage.

Until receipt of the letter Wednesday Mrs. Griwvcki supposed that the children were in the country "with a wealthy man living on Seventeenth street," who had taken them away on a vacation a year ago. This in spite of the fact that none of the children had told her they were going.

Her suspicions were not aroused until she showed Max Fischer, her landlord, a letter which she had received from Agnes. The letter read:

"Dear mamma: We are having a good time in the country, but Charley wants to come home. Don't come here, for there are no women."

The landlord pointed out that the letter had been mailed in Chicago only two hours and a half before it was received, and this aroused the mother's fears.

She notified the Marquette police and with her husband, the stepfather of the children, began a search for the "wealthy man" who had been the children's entertainer the year before.

The police believe that the children are in the country, as the mother at first supposed, and that the letter was given by them to their host, who forgot to mail it until he reached the city.

Captain of the Columbia Tells How Disaster Came

Peoria, Ill., July 6.—"I am a pauper."

Seated in a launch, Capt. Mehl looked sadly in the direction of the sunken steamer Columbia today. Only the pole which carried the gang plank was visible above the water.

"But," went on the captain, "I don't care so much about that. It is the people down in there. Pretty tough, eh?" he queried of a reporter.

Capt. Mehl said he could not tell just what opened the hole in the bottom of the steamer.

"We must have struck a solid log or something else hard," he said. "The hull is lined with steel.

Tree Branch Breaks Window.

"I first knew that we had run near the shore when a branch of a tree knocked out a window. Then I felt the boat scrape the bottom, although there was no sudden jar that naturally would come from hitting a big snag.

"I hollered to Tom, the pilot, to get the boat off shore. He swung it away and it was headed down stream when I went to the lower deck and looked over the side to see if the hull had opned up. Just then the boat listed a little and I knew it was bad off.

"I shouted to the passengers to get on the upper deck and told Tom to run ashore. The bow was downstream and he started toward the Tazewell side. He could make it quicker than he could turn and get back to the Peoria side.

Water Over Lower Deck.

"The water began to come up over the lower deck and I knew we were gone. I was in water up to my chest, but I got through to the top. I told everybody to get up just as quickly as possible, because I could see that we were sinking fast. It was not long before the boat went down, almost straight down, but afterward it settled and listed to starboard.

"On top I met Mrs. Mehl. She was bleeding from a wound in the forehead.

"'Keep cool; don't lose your head,' I said to her.

"'I won't,' she replied.

"We did everything we could to get the lifeboats away and to distribute life belts to every person. We made twenty or twenty-five trips and we got most of them off. There may be thirty or forty persons down there. I don't think there are as many as a hundred. I am sure there are not 200."

Sinks in Five Minutes.

That the boat sank within five minutes after water was discovered in the hull of the Columbia was the statement made by Allen L. Davison, second engineer on the steamer.

"We were traveling under a slow bell through the dense fog," he said. "I felt a slight shock, but paid little attention to it. It was hardly noticeable. Then I received a signal from the pilot to stop and back the boat.

"Within a few seconds I received another signal from the pilot to go ahead slowly. Henry Tripler, a watchman, then came down into the engine rom and asked that the light be thrown into the hull of the boat.

Hull Half Full of Water.

"When I looked in there I saw the hull half full of water. We were then backing away from the Wesley City shore and headed in the direction of the other shore. Within two minutes the boat listed to the starboard side and I climbed up over the railing on the other side and jumped into the water.

"It all happened so quickly that it was hard to realize the danger," he continued. "I am sure that the people on the other decks were unaware of the danger. The shock, when the steamer hit the log, was hardly noticeable, even in the boiler room."

Names of survivors have been taken by the federal, state, and county authorities for use in the investigation. Among them is Sam Ellmore, who described the occurrences of the night.

"There were two jolts that made the boat quiver," he said. "The first one was slight and knocked the lights out. That was the same time the nose of the boat hit the branches of the tree.

"Thompson, the pilot, didn't jam the boat inshore as he should have done, but he held it back and then let it go again in the deep current. Just a minute later we hit the middle of the log or tree, or whatever it was, and the old tub just busted in two.

"There was only two skiffs for life saving and they was on the top deck. I helped some women get into the boats and then I jumped with a life belt. There was plenty of life belts."

Mrs. L. Bushman said it was impossible for her to recall any of the circumstances of the disaster.

"I can barely remember that there was an awful smash of some kind," she said, "and then we were all scrambling to get up the ladders at once and I hung onto my little girl and so did Mrs. Mulker here. We got out somehow, but I don't know how it was done."

Crowd Becomes Panicky.

"It was all over in less than four minutes," said Earnest Langston, a boy employed in the boiler room of the steamer. "I can see those people yet crying and wringing their hands. They go back and forth across my eyes and I just can't brush the thoughts of them away.

"I was in front of the candy counter when the first alarm was given. It passed like an electric shock through every one, and that was what caused so many to lose their lives. If they hadn't got so excited and gone to one side of the boat many more would have been saved.

"The pilot threw his searchlight out to one side and every one rushed in that direction to see what was the matter. I got upon a barrel to get out of the way. It fell with me and pinned me under it. The water began pouring in, but I didn't give up hope for a minute. Women began sobbing and gasping for breath and the cries were just terrible. I was thrown into the water and afterward was picked up."

Praises Bravery of Crew.

A man named McKinney of Pekin, another survivor, commended the actions of the crew after the disaster.

"Captain Mehl crawled to the bridge and shouted to every one to keep cool and ordered his crew to observe the rule of the sea, 'women and children first,'" he declared.

Bud Ray of Pekin, who swam to the shore after the wreck, said that he was dancing when he felt the first shock. The orchestra stopped playing for an instant, but continued almost immediately in response to cries of "On with the dance." Almost immediately, however, the electric lights went out and water began rushing through the windows. A mad scramble for the two narrow doorways followed, being ended in less than two minutes by the plunge of the boat to the bottom of the river.

Utilities Board to Make Investigation of Disaster

Springfield, Ill., July 6.—Frank G. Ewald, chief engineer of the Illinois public utilities commission, announced today he was sending a representative of the commission to investigate on behalf of the state the sinking last night at Wesley City of the excursion steamer Columbia. Jurisdiction of the state government, he said, extends over all passenger steamers in intrastate traffic.

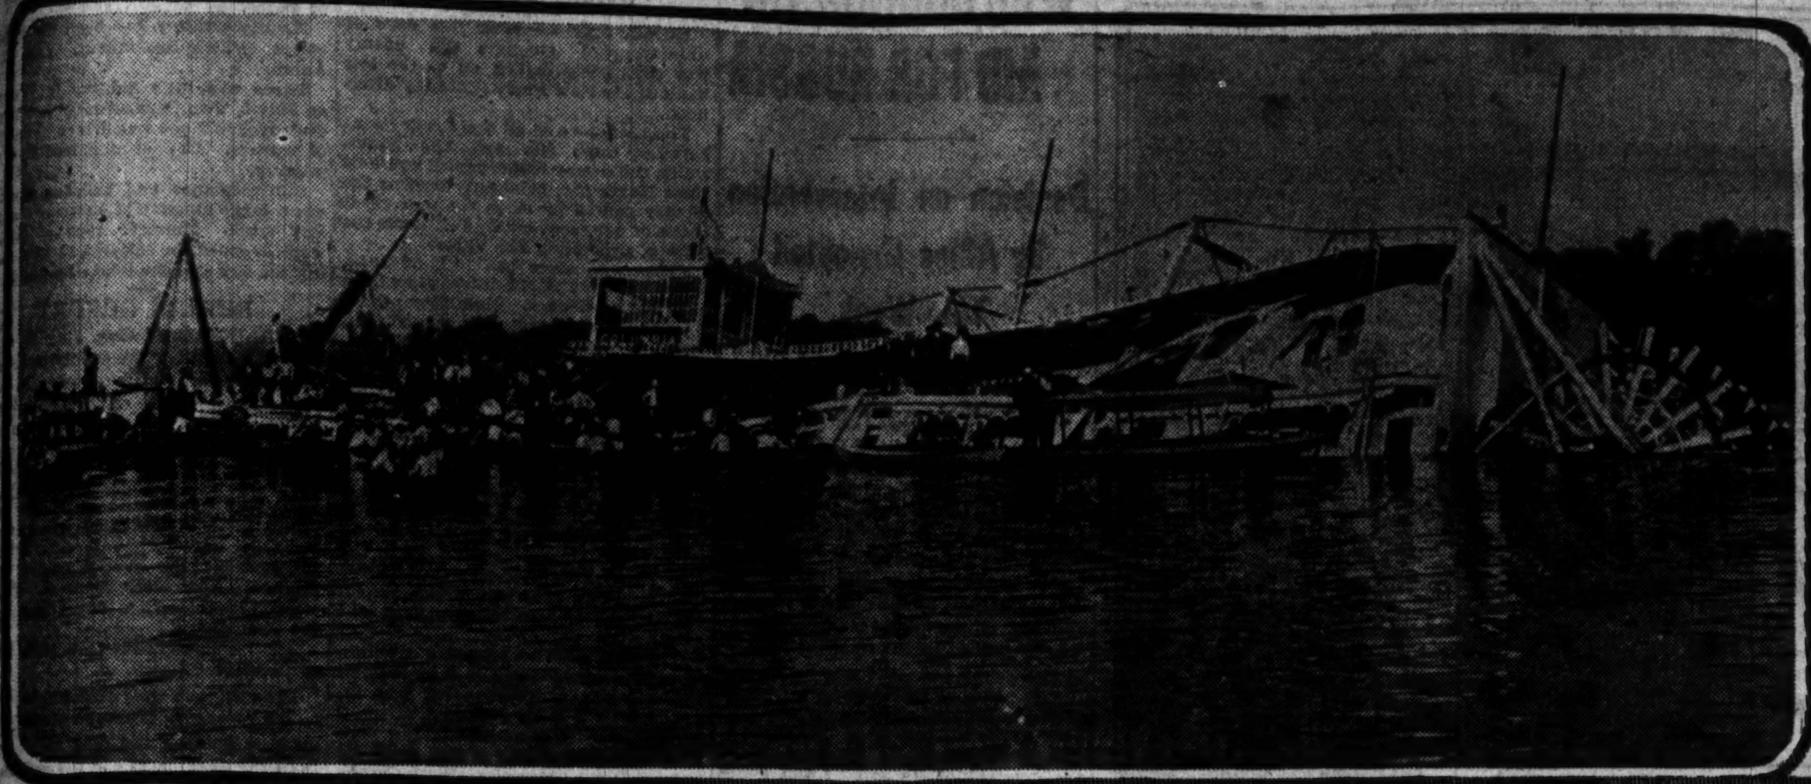
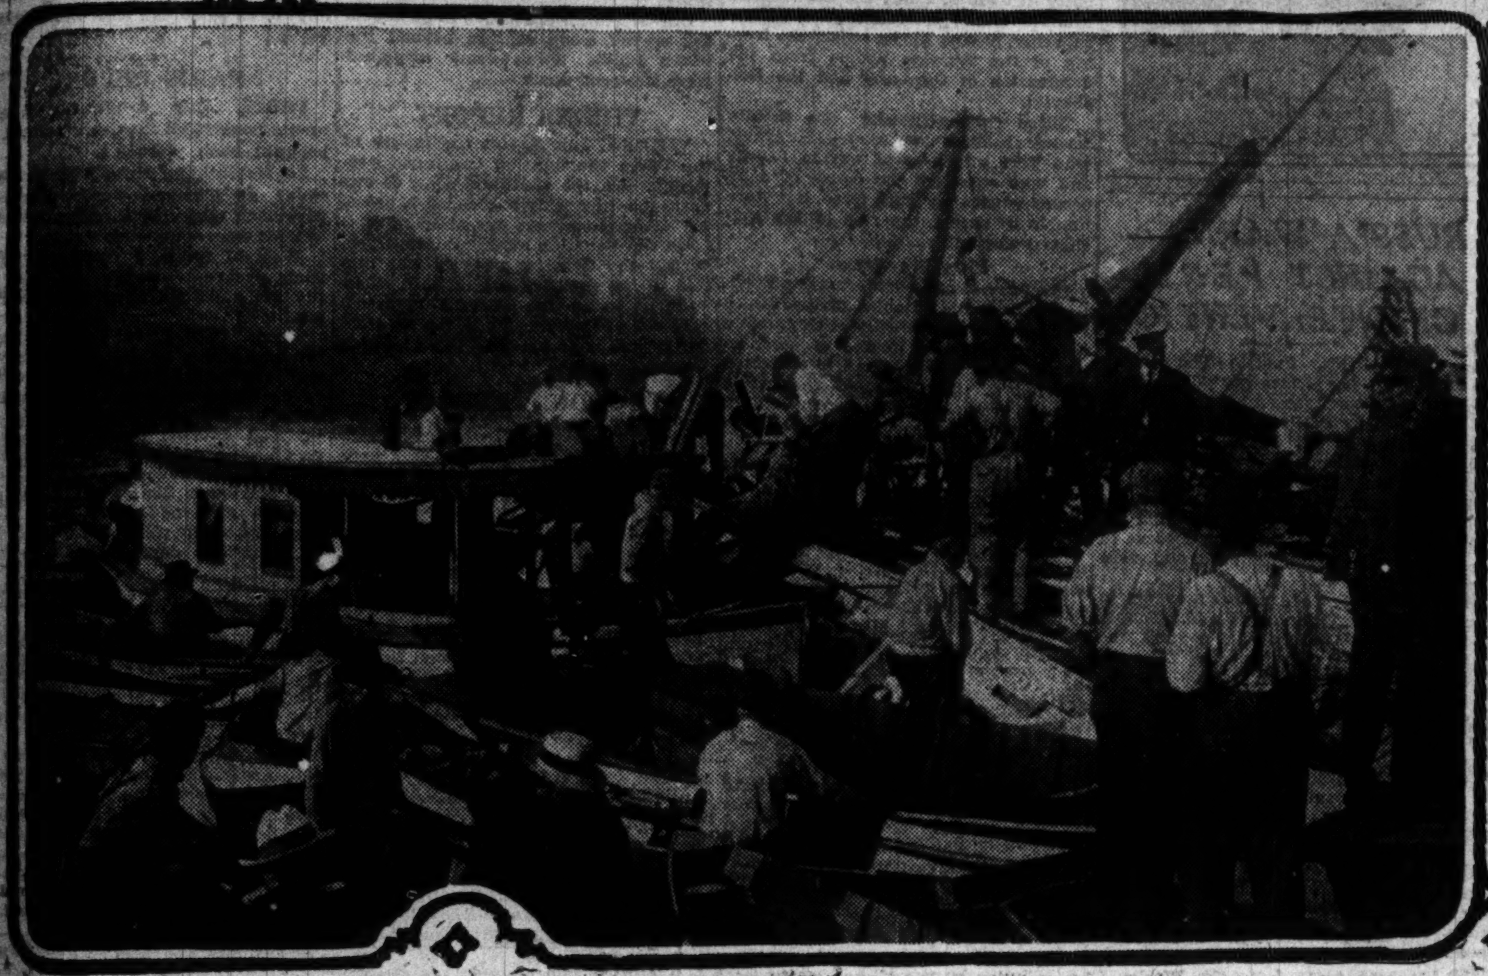
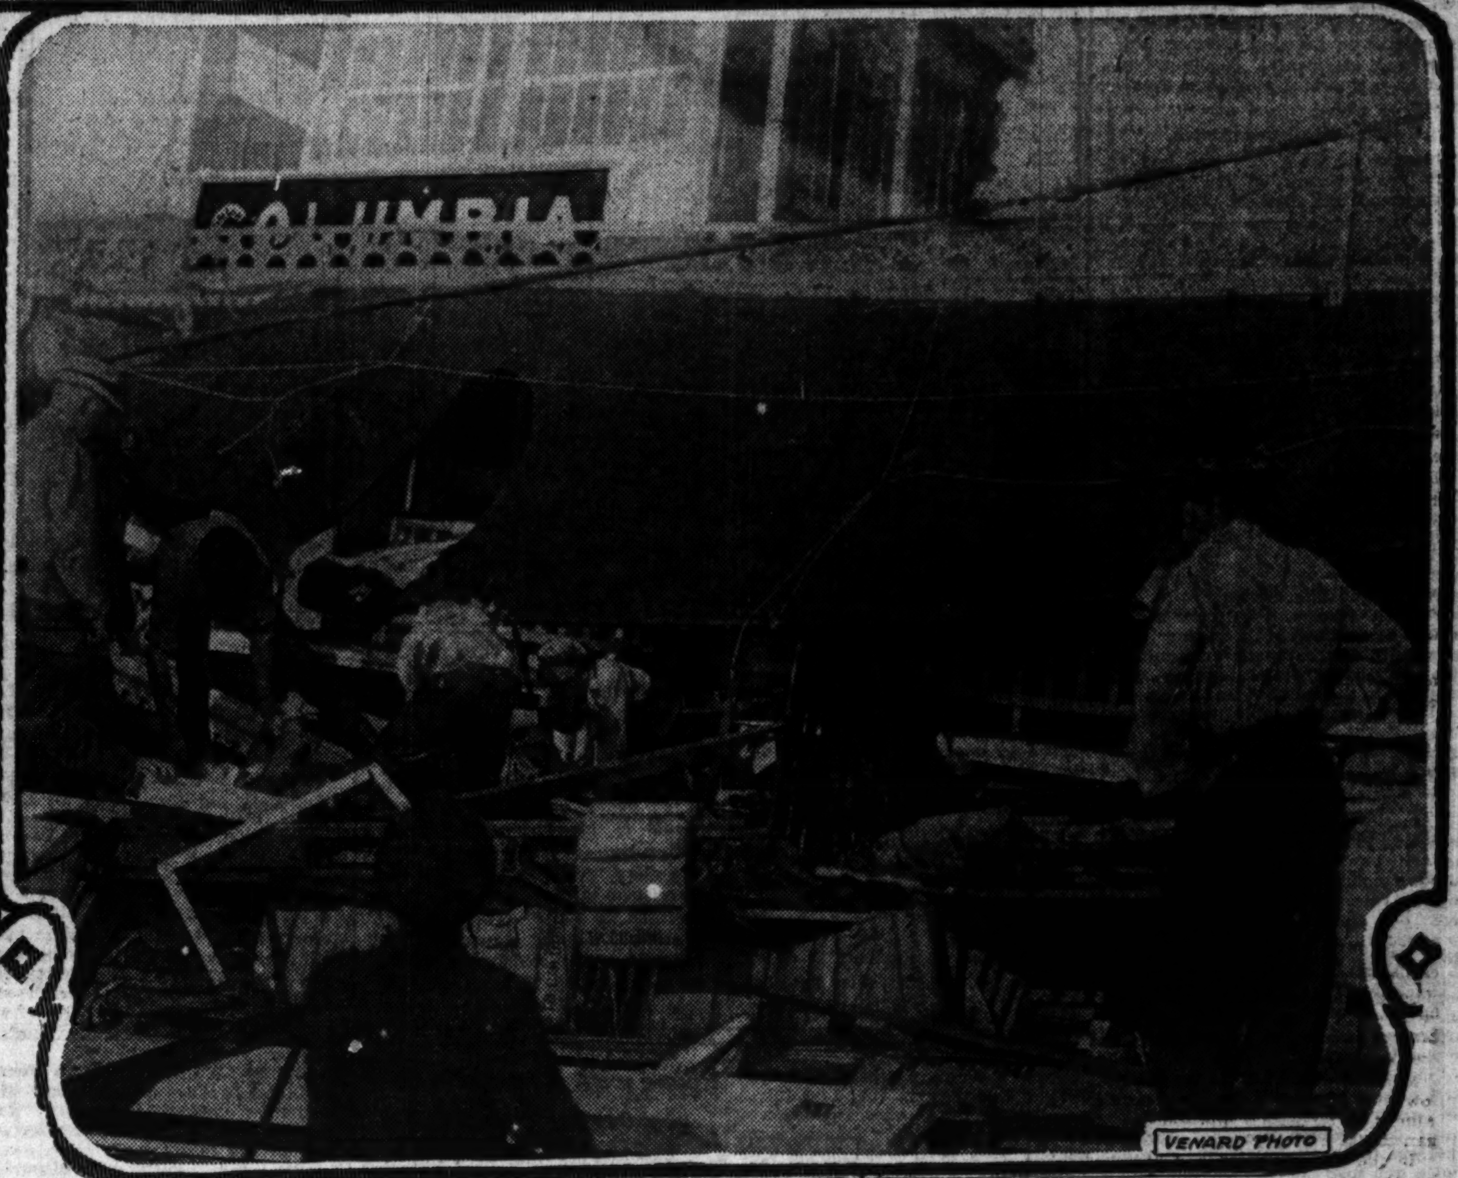
WHEN DEATH TOOK COMMAND OF THE COLUMBIA, ILLINOIS RIVER EXCURSION BOAT







Here is the camera's story of the tragic fate of probably 200 merry excursionists who went to death in the Illinois river near Peoria early yesterday morning when the steamboat Columbia suddenly broke in two and sank. The upper picture at the left shows the crumpled boat as it appeared at dawn yesterday, still loaded with its vast cargo of dead. The rescuers have just renewed their search for bodies. The Stars and Stripes still float over the wrecked superstructure and upper deck. It was below—in the enclosed dancing deck and the barroom, on the boiler room deck—that most of the merrymakers lost their lives. The picture at the left (above) shows the stern of the boat, indicating its heavy list, and some of the rescuers removing bodies. In the background is a touch of the wildly beautiful, almost uninhabited shore line of the Illinois. Below, at the left, is a graphic picture of the rescue work. The arrow points to the body of a woman being lifted tenderly into a fishing boat, at the right. Below is another scene on the upper deck. The rescuers are lifting the body of a child through a hole leading into the dancing deck, where most of the victims lost their lives.

KAISER READY TO HURL ARMIES IN NEW SMASH

Weakening Morale of the German Soldiers Soon to Force Action.

BY WALTER DURANTY.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1918.]

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 6.—All available information points to a renewal of the German offensive at any moment. Not only is it known that German troop concentrations in the rear are completed, but another factor of great importance makes it certain that Field Marshal von Hindenburg cannot afford to delay much longer—it is the rapid using up and increasing weakness of the German divisions now on the front.

From all sides one hears the same story of German divisions reduced below normal. They have been holding the line longer than usual. Their morale is dangerously low. The correspondent a few days ago was told by prisoners captured by the Americans at Vaux that their battalion was so wearied and discouraged by the abnormally long period in the front line as to be literally incapable of a worthwhile counter attack.

At another point is a Boche battalion whose total effectives of bayonets was reduced to 120 men—not counting mitrailleuse detachments—whose commander's plea for relief gets the curt response from the division commander "battalion not to be relieved; best you can do is to improve your defense organization and construct more dugouts."

Only Twenty Men in Company.

A Bavarian regiment has a company of twenty men, and such figures as thirty-five, fifty, or sixty are common. At another point the French seized an order from a divisional general reproving in strong terms the slackness of officers who report sick for trifling reasons and urging them to devote all their energies to get their men out of a state of indifference back to a spirit of activity."

It is more than probable that the coming struggle will be on a greater scale than before. Every available man has gone to swell the ranks of the maneuver divisions, which there is reason to believe are apportioned equally to the armies of Crown Prince Rupprecht and the German crown prince, with the intention of launching two big drives simultaneously.

It is generally anticipated that Flanders, Amiens, Compiegne, and Chateau Thierry will be the sectors attacked, which would give Hindenburg the choice of then concentrating his energies either towards the sea or toward Paris, should one operation be more successful than the other. At the same time, or even as a prelude, a strong diversion is likely along the Marne or in Champagne, with the object of protecting the German flank against a possible counter stroke.

Allies Are Confident.

On the allied side every precaution has been taken and every preparation made to insure a repetition of the last successful resistance. Allied confidence and morale were never higher, but no one attempts to disguise the fact that days, and perhaps weeks of very bitter fighting are in prospect.

The enemy will gain ground in some places, and there may be moments of grave anxiety, but of one thing the world can be certain: France will stand the strain unflinchingly. Even should the incredible occur and Paris be exposed to German bombardment by field guns, the determination of the French people and government will not falter.

WAIT IN FAITH

Allied Troops Are Confident That All Attacks of Germans Will Be Defeated.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Germany is preparing for a renewal of the offensive on the west front, which may come at any moment and with terrific force. This is the conclusion reached by Gen. March, chief of staff, as indicated today in his weekly conference with newspaper correspondents. At the same time he sounded this new American slogan:

"We have embarked a million men and we are now going after the second million."

To members of the senate military committee it was revealed that more than a quarter of a million American troops were at various points on the battle lines on July 1. The number of American fighting men facing the enemy is increasing every day.

Gen. March pointed out that Gen. Foch was carrying out a campaign of "nibbling" at the enemy front, the capture of Vaux by troops of the American Second division, composed of regular regiments, having been a striking example of the raids in force.

Complete confidence in the ability of the allied and American forces to hold against any blow the Germans can deliver characterizes military opinion here. No attempt is made, however, to conceal the belief that the days immediately ahead may be those of the most severe fighting of the war.

Some officers are inclined to believe that the Italian situation is still tending to hold up German operations in the west. Gen. March made it clear today that the Italians had not only succeeded in regaining all but one small salient of the ground originally overrun by the Austrian attack, but have considerably improved their old positions at several points.

PREPARING FOR TAX SALE.

Yesterday was a busy day in the office of the county treasurer. All day the clerks were balancing the books for the year in order to round up delinquent taxpayers. As soon as the records are complete a blank judgment will be asked on the entire list of names included. The tax sale will probably not take place until the end of the month.

AMERICANS AND ANZACS RETAIN ALL GAINS MADE

German Blows Fail Along Whole Line They Had Lost.

BULLETIN.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES AFIELD, July 6.—Four German counter attacks against the positions taken by Americans and Australians in their Fourth of July "show" were hurled back to defeat today. The prisoners now total 1,507.

LONDON, July 6.—Northeast of Villiers-Bretonneux, the Australians advanced their line on a 2,000 yard front, Field Marshal Haig reported tonight.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Friday, July 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—All the traditions of the United States army for valor were sustained yesterday in the attack against the Germans south of the River Somme, when, for the first time, American infantrymen took their stand beside their British cousins and fought shoulder to shoulder with them against the common foe.

It was a baptism of fire for the Yankee soldiers on this front, staged on Independence day, and they came through with flying colors.

"The Americans fought like fiends," declared one British staff officer.

They did all of that. They were magnificent, and folks at home may be proud of the part their boys took in this unique Fourth of July celebration.

American Losses Small.

It is possible to make the cheerful statement that the American casualties were small, according to the latest reports. Virtually the entire body of Americans came through unscathed.

One does not need to detract from the work of the Australians by telling of the prowess of the Americans. The soldiers from the antipodes far outnumbered those from the United States and did a corresponding amount of the sanguinary labor.

Yesterday's operations were specifically planned as a Fourth of July celebration. American troops who were to take part in this memorable event were brigaded with their Australian allies, who took the deepest interest in the forthcoming welding of the link of brotherhood. The plans were carefully rehearsed.

The Americans went over the top with the Australians, behind big tanks, as if they had been doing the same things all their lives. Then came the clash with the enemy infantry among the shell hole defenses and trenches under the gray light of the early dawn.

There was no hesitation. For a week past the British experts had been dinning into the ears of the Americans the words "Kill! Kill! Kill!"

The Americans had learned their lesson well. The British officers spoke of this after the affair was over. No drillmaster ever got better returns for his talks than the one who taught these Americans this hardest lesson of all. A great number of Germans paid the supreme price yesterday, and the men from the United States exacted a heavy toll.

Praise from the Allies.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Along the whole British front today the main topic of conversation was the remarkable success achieved in Thursday's attacks south of the Somme by the combined Australian and American troops.

Even the German prisoners were admitting ruefully that the drive had been conducted with cleverness and invincible courage. To this praise was added a telegram from Field Marshal Haig to the forces involved, including the American detachment, expressing his warm congratulations.

INNOVATION

Women Motorists Are to Carry Notifications of Casualties to Relatives.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—News of casualties overseas will hereafter be carried to the relatives and friends of the killed and wounded men by the women of the American Red Cross motor corps service.

It has been decided that this service can best be performed by the auxiliary members of the corps, who are in a position not only to convey directly to the homes the information but also to render whatever home service is needed.

The emergency drivers of Chicago, the National Service League Motor corps of New York City, Buffalo, and Atlanta; the motor messenger service of Philadelphia, and the Emergency Motor corps of New Orleans have become parts of the Red Cross motor corps, as a result of a conference recently held in Washington. The service now includes more than 6,000 women.

In conformity with the request of the war department, the new regulation uniform of the motor corps is to be of the Red Cross Oxford gray. Commanders will wear three silver diamonds embroidered on their shoulder straps; captains will wear two silver diamonds, first lieutenants one, and second lieutenants a gilt diamond. Pearl gray tabs on the collar will indicate staff officers.

ENDS LIFE BY CUTTING THROAT.

Gilbs Derenger, 52 years old, Lyons road, Cicero, committed suicide yesterday by cutting his throat. Derenger, it is thought, was temporarily insane.

ITALIAN VICTORY MADE COMPLETE; TAKE VAST LOOT

Entire Piave Coast Rewon; Captures of 24,500.

ROME, July 6.—Victory in a five day battle and recapture of the entire coastal zone around the mouth of the Piave river was announced by the war office tonight. The Austrians have fallen back to the left bank of the new Piave.

"This afternoon, after a five day struggle, the enemy was driven to the left bank of the new Piave," the statement said. "Recapture of all the coastal zone between Capo Sile and the Piave enlarges the Venice protection zone. Since June 15 we have taken prisoner 523 officers and 23,911 men."

Regain All Lost Material.

All Italian material and guns abandoned in the first rush of the Austrian offensive have been recaptured, with immense quantities of Austrian military supplies, the statement said.

Austrian stores taken included sixty-three guns, sixty-five trench mortars, 1,234 machine guns, 37,105 rifles, forty-nine flame projectors, two airplanes, 5,000,000 cartridges, thousands of shells, and a large quantity of other material.

AUSTRIAN LOSS 250,000.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Austrian losses in the recent unsuccessful offensive against Italy and during the Italian counter offensive are estimated at between 200,000 and 250,000, including at least 50,000 skilled, in an official dispatch today from Rome, based on testimony of numerous prisoners.

The message says the Austrians persist in beating the ground about positions captured by the Italians with a strong but ineffectual artillery fire. It adds:

"Prisoners taken at Monte Grappa state the Austrians had no idea they could be beaten from their strong position in twenty minutes. The enemy's losses were heavy; his rear service was badly disorganized and the troops feel the lack of baggage.

"Seven Italians who escaped captivity state that the Austrians force a majority of the war prisoners to work on the second line under our fire."

WEDDED 25 YEARS

King George and Queen Mary Observe Silver Anniversary Without Usual Pomp.

LONDON, July 6.—Today is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the marriage of King George and Queen Mary. The popular rejoicing with which such an event ordinarily would be celebrated was refrained from in consequence of the war, and the only public ceremony commemorating it in which the royal couple participated took the form of a special thanksgiving service in St. Paul's cathedral.

From the cathedral the king and queen were driven to the Guild Hall. Here a congratulatory address was read and the handsome illuminated copy of it presented to King George.

King George, replying to the address of the lord mayor, said:

"This anniversary falls at a time when the shadow of war lies heavily on the land and when the very existence of the empire is assailed by unscrupulous foes. In this time of trial it is our honest desire to share the sorrows of the people and to alleviate their sufferings.

"While hearts are heavy at the thought of the bereavement and distress which have befallen the nation we have seen with joyful gratitude the whole hearted response to the call of duty throughout the empire. Here in the presence of representativs of the dominions, the colonies and the Indian empire I warmly acclaim the noble self-sacrificing spirit with which our brothers across the seas have given their best in the united defense of liberty and right.

"Through four long years of unceasing conflict the ancient qualities of the British race have shown themselves in innumerable heroic deeds and in dogged endurance which has baffled the enemy's purpose."

Lively Artillery Fights Take Place in Macedonia

PARIS, July 6.—An official report in regard to operations in Macedonia says:

"Lively artillery fighting took place along the Vardar and in the neighborhood of Monastir. In the region of Vetrenik and along the banks of the Cerna strong enemy reconnaissances were repulsed after spirited grenade engagements."

British Casualties Show Big Drop; 17,336 for Week

LONDON, England, July 6.—British casualties reported during the week ending today reached an aggregate of 17,336, divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, officers, 140; men, 2,596. Wounded or missing: Officers, 413; men, 14,187.

[These figures show a considerable falling off in the rate of British casualties reported as compared with those of week after week during May and June, when the effects of the heavy German attacks on the British front were revealing themselves in the casualty lists. The June casualties reported, for instance, averaged approximately 35,000 a week. The total reported during May were 166,802, or an average of more than 40,000 a week.]

Roumanian Senate Unit in Voting German Treaty

AMSTERDAM, July 6.—The Roumanian senate has adopted the German peace treaty, according to Bucharest advices. The vote, it is added, was unanimous.

HOLDUP MEN ROB THEATER IN VIEW OF BIG CROWD

Holdup men made a rich haul on one of the best lighted and busiest corners of the city at 10:20 o'clock last night in full sight of hundreds of persons passing in automobiles or strolling on the boulevards.

Their victim was Charles Doll, a doorman employed by Ascher brothers' Oakland Square theater, Oakwood and Drexel boulevards. Their booty was $360, the late receipts of the playhouse.

Doll had started to take the money to a nearby neighborhood bank when three men sprang upon him. One of them hit him over the head with a blackjack and he dropped to the sidewalk. The others grabbed the satchel containing the money which he was carrying, and the three ran west across Cottage Grove avenue down Oakwood boulevard, disappearing.

Doll's injuries were not serious.

PERSHING GIVES BATTLE DETAILS; AMERICANS WIN

Reports Show How German Blow Was Made Futile.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Gen. Pershing's communique for Friday received today at the war department says:

"Section A—Our patrols again took prisoners in the Chateau Thierry region. In Picardy, Chateau Thierry region, and in the Vosges there was brisk artillery fighting. In the Vosges a hostile raiding party and two patrols, attempting to reach our lines, were driven off.

"Section B—Concerning the operations of our troops in the vicinity of Vaux, July 1 to July 2, it is stated that the enemy fled in disorder from the Bois de Roche to the Bois des Rochets before our infantry. Hand to hand fighting was of short duration. So effective was our artillery fire that communication between German battalion and regimental headquarters could be maintained only by a single messenger dog.

German Airplanes Active.

"Intense machine gun fire and a heavy bombardment of the Olerembeauts wood and adjacent points preceded the German counter attack. Some gas was used. Hostile airplanes, which made frequent flights, dropped bombs on some of our advanced positions in the early morning, and in one case fired on our lines. One of them was brought down near Torcy. In the German rear areas long columns of men and wagons moved from point to point, while during the night red and green rockets gave signals, while searchlights kept watch for our airplanes.

"In this sector between the evening of July 3 and July 4 activity on both sides greatly decreased. The enemy, however, shelled the region of the Marette wood with gas during the morning hours and put down some harassing and interdiction fire in our rear areas. Our own batteries maintained a continuous harassing fire, apparently destroying an ammunition dump in Etrepilly and setting fire buildings in the enemy's rear areas.

"It was again notable that the activity of the enemy's air forces decreased, while our own became more aggressive.

American Snipers Succeed.

"American snipers seemed to be successful in killing and wounding a number of the enemy during the day. One of our reconnaissance patrols, consisting of a corporal and two men, crawled from our front lines north of Vaux to a house inside the German lines at Bois des Rochets at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They captured a German outpost of two men and brought them back to our lines at 4 o'clock in the afternoon despite the continuous fire of German snipers.

"Our troops located along the Marne at 8 o'clock p. m. on July 1 to 8 p. m. on July 2 experienced a comparatively quiet day. There was, however, an increase in the enemy's rifle and machine gun fire, the result of our activities in patrolling. The enemy's light artillery fire consisted of shells of small caliber.

"A decrease was also noted in the enemy's airplane activity, which was concentrated on observation and reconnaissance work. These planes made flights along our lines singly and in usual patrol formations. Several hostile observation balloons were also seen.

"There was an unusual amount of movement in the enemy's rear areas, but no large groups were observed. A large number of wagons were seen in the vicinity of Charteves. The enemy's signaling continues excessive.

Some Hits Were Scored.

"There were several indications of hits being made by our artillery on the ammunition dumps in the enemy's rear areas. One of these occurred late in the evening, when a large blaze was seen in the sky, and a heavy explosion heard from a point which had just been shelled by our artillery.

"Later in the same vicinity an occasional glow was seen and reports were heard. Our guns had been firing heavily in that direction just prior to the explosion. Another explosion, probably of an ammunition dump, occurred at about the same time in another locality, where a bright light was at first observed, followed directly by a loud explosion.

"In the early morning of July 2 there was still another report of an explosion. Our guns were playing on this particular spot at the time and the report, the smoke which immediately arose, the high shooting flames, and the bursting of cartridges are evidence that this was still another ammunition dump. Still another large fire, accompanied by several explosions, was observed. This was probably an ammunition dump struck by French shells.

"In Picardy the enemy's artillery fire was the only outstanding feature of hostile activity on July 1 to July 2, noon to noon. A large proportion of his fire was employed in concentrations on our lines in the vicinity of Cantigny and the northern edge of the Bois Fontaine. In addition to these concentrations there was slight harassing fire on our front about noon July 1. The enemy's infantry was quiet during the day; we did, however, see early on July 2 an enemy patrol returning to its lines.

Cannon Duels in Lorraine.

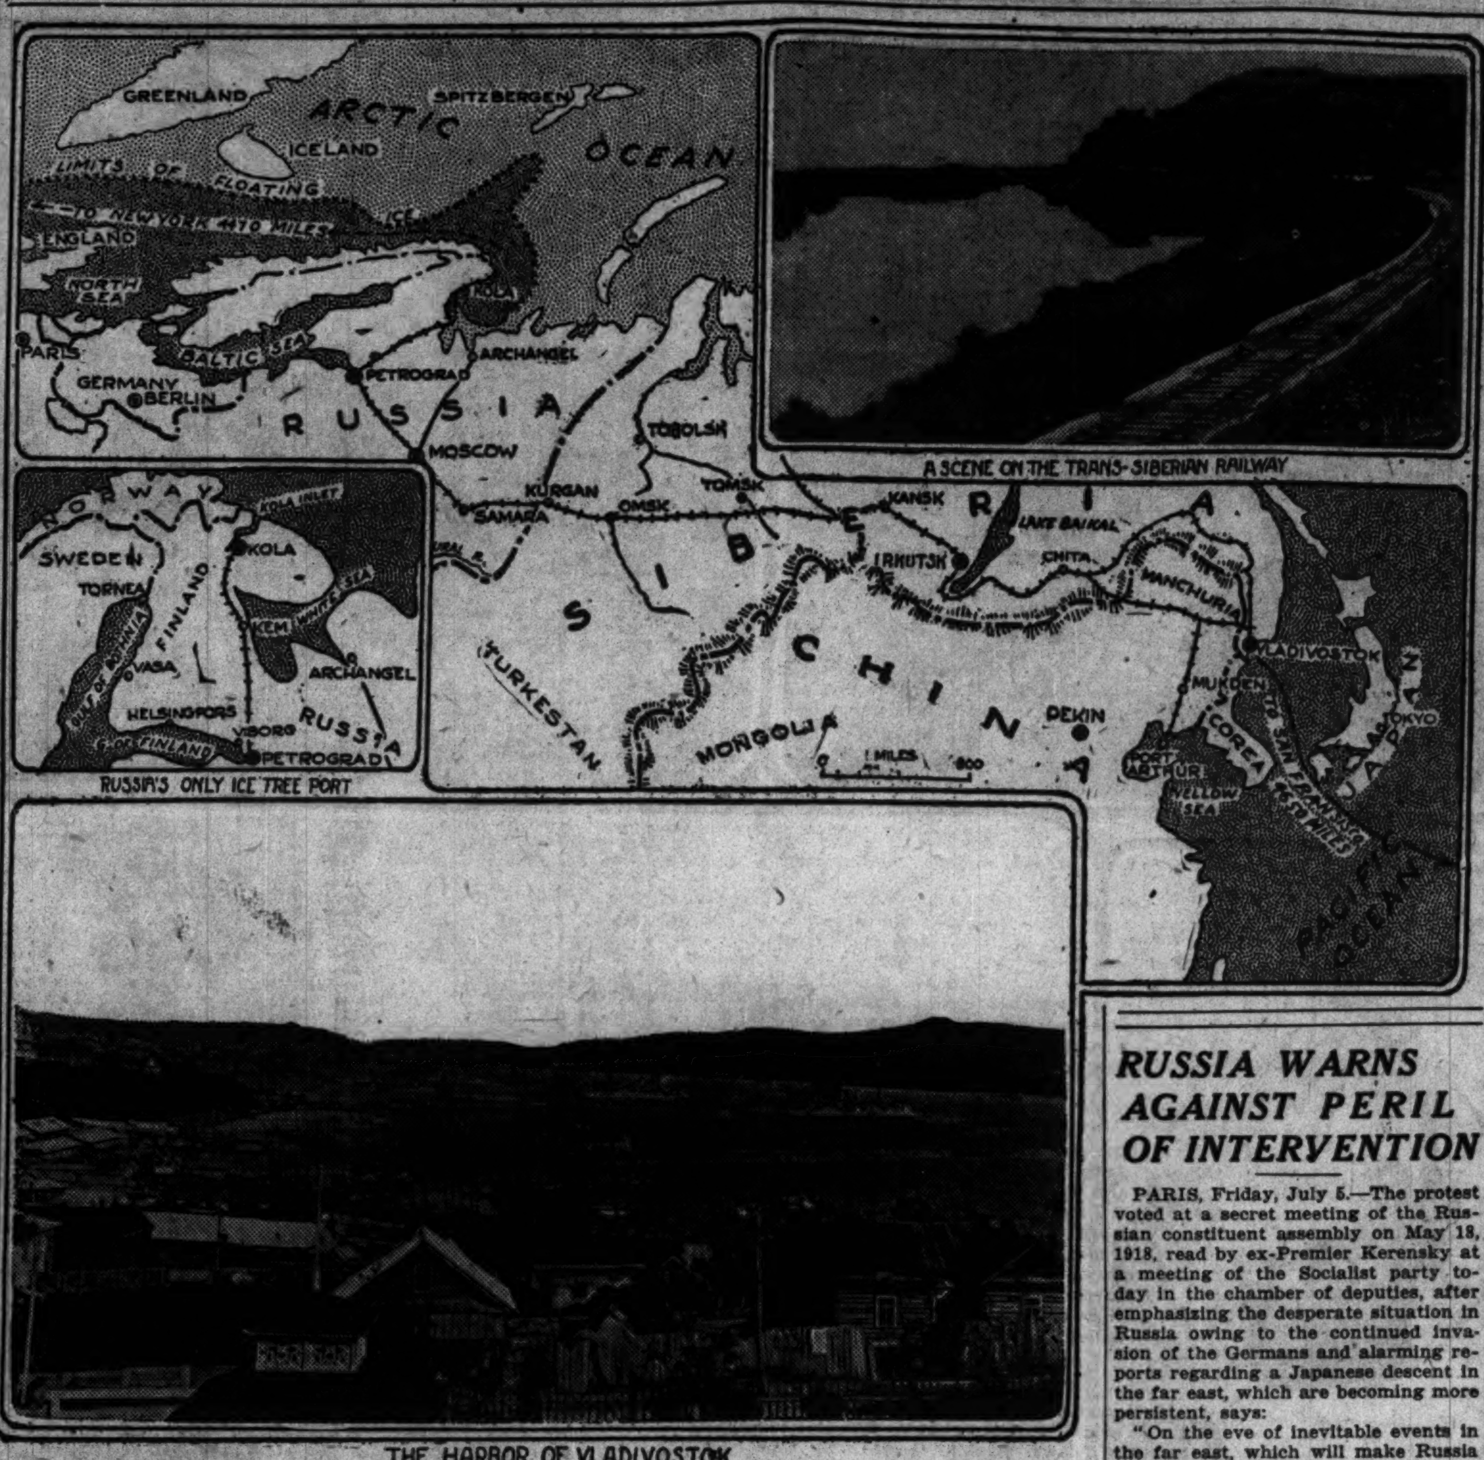
"In Lorraine, during the day extending from noon June 30 to noon July 1 there was unusually heavy machine gun fire and rifle fire on our lines. The machine gun fire doubled in the space of twenty-four hours, originating largely in the German position opposite Badonviller. The enemy's artillery fire was light and scattered, consisting mainly of small calibre shells, and including the use of some shrapnel and gas. His planes were fairly active over both our front and rear areas and at one point dropped a few bombs which did no damage. In his rear areas there was considerable movement of men, trucks, wagons and trains.

"In the same sector the day following showed the same unusual amount of machine gun fire and the same moderate artillery activity by the enemy during the morning. On the other hand the circulation in the enemy's rear areas was very notable, automobiles, wagons, trucks, cyclists and pedestrians moving along the roads at frequent intervals. Our patrols were very successful in gaining information.

"In the Colmar sector on July 1 there were no developments of note, conditions being in every case normal. An amusing example of German propaganda, designed to induce our men to surrender easily, was found. A German plane dropped in our line a postcard reading:

"Soldiers of the U. S. A. say that we kill prisoners of war or do them some other harm. Don't be such greenhorns! How can you smart Americans believe such a silly thing?"

WHERE RUSSIAN INTERVENTION PROBLEM MAY BE SOLVED



A SCENE ON THE TRANS-SIBERIAN RAILWAY

RUSSIA'S ONLY ICE FREE PORT

THE HARBOR OF VLADIVOSTOK

The problem of intervention in Russian affairs will be decided in a few days, according to Washington advices. Both military and economic aid for Russia has been reccommended by the inter-allied supreme war council. Where and how this aid shall be given is still under consideration.

While American marines have been landed at Vladivostok as a legation guard and this may be preliminary to sending a larger force to the big Siberian port on the Pacific, it is by no means certain that this will be the scene of the main American effort if military intervention is decided upon. It is probable that Japanese forces would be landed at Vladivostok with a slight mixture of American and allied troops to make the enterprise an international one.

If the United States sends any considerable force, however, it is likely that they would enter Russia by way of Kola, Russia's only ice free port. Kola is on the Arctic, but the Gulf stream keeps the port free of ice the year round. There is little difference in the distance between San Francisco and Vladivostok and between New York and Kola, but Kola is nearer the heart of Russian affairs and nearer the German frontier.

American naval forces and allied British and French troops are now at Kola guarding large military stores from threatened attacks by the Germans and Finns. This region [the Murman coast] has been declared in a state of war.

Peace with Roumania Is Robbery, Reichstag Told

AMSTERDAM, July 6.—A bitter attack on the German peace with Roumania and militarism was made in the debate in the reichstag Thursday by Dr. Cohn, Independent Socialist, according to the Rheinisch Westfaelische Zeitung of Essen.

"We reject the Roumanian treaty," he said. "Like the Ukrainian treaty, it will not produce a real peace. The Roumanian Jews still lack rights. This treaty is nothing but bartering for petroleum and railways.

"The treaty is nothing but disguised, perhaps undisguised, robbery."

Here the president called upon Dr. Cohn to observe moderation in his remarks. After further criticism Dr. Cohn explained:

"Unless militarism is overcome we cannot obtain a lasting peace."

WILSON HOLDS WAR COUNCIL ON AID FOR RUSSIA

Decision on Intervention by Allies Expected This Week.

lish themselves economically and gain strength and courage to work out their own destiny in a satisfactory way.

Modification of this policy at the White House conference this afternoon seems to have been due to urgent representations by the allies to take advantage of the present situation in Russia created by the remarkable military success of the Czecho-Slovak forces. Judged by what was learned after the conference, the president and his advisers confessed themselves greatly impressed by the advance of the Czecho-Slovaks and by the possibility of making this force the foundation for the organization of a powerful army, having for its object the freeing of the Russian people from the domination of Germany and the Bolsheviki.

These Czecho-Slovaks are mainly former soldiers of Austria-Hungary, who were prisoners of war in Russia and who espoused the cause of democracy when they were freed, but were unable to accept the rule of the Bolshevist element.

Plan Big Army.

Until more definite information is obtained as to the outcome of the White House conference it will not be possible to state with any degree of positiveness the exact course the United States will follow. It is assumed that while this government is apparently willing to be guided by the judgment of the other allies represented in the supreme war council at Versailles, it will have suggestions to make as to the best means of undertaking assistance to the Russian people.

One proposal, which has the backing of many men thoroughly acquainted with conditions in Russia and the state of mind of the Russian people, carries with it the formation of a large military force, in which all the allies would be represented. Japan would furnish most of these troops, but there would be sufficient soldiers from the United States, Great Britain, France, China, and possibly Italy to make the force thoroughly international.

The only official admission made today in regard to the military situation in Russia as it affected the United States was that the American marines landed at Vladivostok were sent ashore for the sole purpose of guarding the American consulate.

Oppose Big Expedition.

Belief among the majority of American military men that no expedition on an extended scale should be undertaken in the east apparently has undergone no change. In fact, one official more than intimated tonight that today's decision did not mean the embarkation of any great military force across the Pacific. As to whether it meant operations by an international force of Japanese, French, and British, with Americans in sufficient numbers to demonstrate the participation of the United States, no one would say.

It is regarded also as an embarrassing fact that the Czecho-Slovaks, around whom it is proposed to build an army, are not themselves Russian citizens and so may be regarded as an alien element by the native population. Those who are counting upon the Czecho-Slovaks hope that when they have clearly defined their disinterested motives the Russian people will be willing to join them in great numbers to free their country.

The American navy stands ready to meet any demand upon it in connection with the new plans, and Secretary Daniels is said to have let it be known that adequate naval convoys are to be had whenever and wherever the army requires them.

Any military measures that may be put into effect along the trans-Siberian railroad or southward from Kola will not interfere with the American plans for lending material aid to the troubled Russian people through business men and industrial leaders who are being asked to undertake the task. An announcement is expected at any time of the form which this program is to take and of the personnel of the first contingent of peaceful rehabilitators.

RUSSIA WARNS AGAINST PERIL OF INTERVENTION

PARIS, Friday, July 5.—The protest voted at a secret meeting of the Russian constituent assembly on May 18, 1918, read by ex-Premier Kerensky at a meeting of the Socialist party today in the chamber of deputies, after emphasizing the desperate situation in Russia owing to the continued invasion of the Germans and alarming reports regarding a Japanese descent in the far east, which are becoming more persistent, says:

"On the eve of inevitable events in the far east, which will make Russia a bloody battlefield, this council, the only organization representative of the constituent assembly, makes the following declaration:

"The treaty of Brest-Litovsk is not recognized by our country and Russia continues at war with Germany. The bonds uniting us and our allies are unbroken and cannot be broken by a government which is not recognized by Russia.

"At the same time this council declares that Russia will never accept the violation of her national sovereignty by the allies. She will not consent to the occupation of her territories or intervention in her internal affairs.

"The appearance of allied troops on Russian territory can only be accepted for strategic reasons connected with the struggle against Germany, a struggle which must be carried on by Russian forces and on condition that such action is undertaken by all the allies in common."

BATTLE STATEMENTS

ROME REPORT.

ROME, July 6.—After five days of uninterrupted struggle the enemy was completely driven on to the left bank of the New Piave Saturday afternoon.

The recapture of all the coastal zone between Capo Sile and the Piave, which the enemy had occupied and held since November, brilliantly crowns the victory gained by us in the first great battle of our recovery, and enlarges the zone of protection for Venice.

Altogether, since the 15th of June, 523 officers and 23,911 other ranks have been made prisoner. We also captured sixty-three guns, sixty-five trench mortars, 1,234 machine guns, 37,105 rifles, two airplanes, 5,000,000 rifle cartridges, many thousands of shells of all kinds, and a large quantity of telephone instruments, and recovered our artilleries and material which in the advanced zone had to be abandoned during the first phase of the struggle.

In the course of yesterday, having broken up most of the stubborn enemy defense at every yard, we gained more ground, reaching the right bank of the New Piave from Grisolera to the river mouth. More than 400 prisoners, including six officers, remained in our hands.

A violent counter offensive attempted by the enemy more to the north, in the direction of Chiesanova, was arrested after a lively struggle.

Renewed violent attacks on our positions on Porte di Salton and attempts to assault our patrols on Monte Corone failed.

Our aviators were active in bombarding enemy troop centers beyond the lower Piave. Two enemy airplanes were brought down.

VIENNA REPORT

VIENNA, July 6.—At the mouth of the Piave the fighting continued yesterday. On the southern wing of our positions the enemy succeeded in pressing us back towards our main body.

On the Venetian mountain front yesterday the fighting activity was limited to the artillery fire of both sides.

Early today the Italians launched renewed violent thrusts in the Solarolo region and near Asiago. The attempts were repulsed.

LONDON REPORT

LONDON, July 6.—The Australian troops advanced their line northeast of Villers-Bretonneux last night on a front of 2,000 yards.

A successful raid was carried out by Lancashire troops near Hinges; in which several prisoners were captured.

We captured a few prisoners in patrol encounters in the neighborhood of Ypres.

Hostile artillery has been active between Villers-Bretonneux and the Ancre.

There was little fighting in the air on July 5. Two German machines were destroyed and one was driven down out of control. One of our machines is missing.

Our airplanes and balloons carried out a large amount of successful artillery work. Nineteen tons of bombs were dropped on selected targets during the day and the following night.

BERLIN REPORT

BERLIN, via London, July 6.—Frequent attempts of the enemy to attack west of Langemarck failed. In the battle sector south of the Somme the artillery activity continued with increased violence throughout the day, and in the evening it revived also on the front of the other army groups.

Between the Oise and Marne and southwest of Reims there was increasing firing activity at intervals. Strong advances of the enemy against the Clignon sector were repulsed. There were reconnoitering engagements in the Champagne.

Local engagements took place west of Château Thierry.

[The Clignon river sector referred to in the foregoing German official statement is held by the American forces. Both the Americans and the French on their left recently have gained terrain and taken prisoners from the Germans there.]

PARIS REPORT

PARIS, July 6.—French detachments penetrated the German lines and brought back prisoners.

Several raiding thrusts by the Germans at Chaume wood, upon the American sector at Xivray, and in the Vosges were completely repulsed.

West of Chateau Thierry we made some progress today in the region of hill 204 and took about thirty prisoners.

From July 1 to 6 our aviators brought down or put out of action eighteen enemy planes and set on fire seven captive balloons. In the same period of time our bombing machines dropped fifty-six tons of projectiles on stations, cantonments, and aviation grounds in the enemy zone. A fire was started in the station at Chaulnes and at Amagne-Lucquy, and violent explosions followed by fires occurred in munitions depots at Neuville and Roye.

Result of Neglected Feet

FOOT troubles affect the body in many different ways: The feet swell, burn, ache and have sharp pains under the heels; the ball of the foot is sore and feels as if walking on marbles. Ankles become weak, legs cramp, and knees stiffen when ascending stairs. Pains are produced in the hips, small of the back, shoulders and neck. Poor circulation, inability to walk with comfort.

There are thousands of cases today being diagnosed and treated with no results. I can absolutely relieve you of all your foot troubles.

I have the most scientific method of curing corns and callouses in the world.

Now, let me prove to you the cause and cure of all foot troubles. No charge for examination. Telephone Central 7058. Hours, 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

LAME OFFICIALS OR RACE RIOTS TEAST ST. LOUIS

deral Investigators Also ondemn Col. Tripp and Soldiers.

ashington, D. C., July 6.—[Spe-l.]—One of the most appalling res of crimes, corruption, and im-ity that ever came to the attenof congress was presented in the e of representatives tonight.

was the 15,000 word report of the committee, composed of Repretives Johnson of Kentucky, Fos-and Foss of Illinois, Raker of Cali-
, and Cooper of Wisconsin, which tigated the race riots and murders
East St. Louis a year ago.

committee found that the riots re caused by race hatred bred by importation of thousands of south-Negroes by industrial plants and roads, the Negroes displacing white rers, who were driven to want by k of work. Union labor is absolved blame, however, for inciting riots.

Col. Clayton Praised.

or the failure to restrain the law-elements and preserve order the mittee blames "the corrupt and inpetent city government of East Louis," the connection of which h the most degraded denizens of community is traced in detail.

he committee scores Col. S. C. pp, assistant quartermaster general the Illinois national guard, as a rlor warrior," but commends Col.
B. Clayton of the Fourth infantry gallantry and efficiency.

he conduct of the Illinois guards-n, who fraternized with the mob failed to do their duty, is pro-nced a disgrace.

Paragraph to Governor.

"The governor of Illinois has a re-sibility in this matter that he can-evade," says the report. "The itia of the state are under his con-
; he can arraign militiamen for conduct; he can remove officers r inefficiency; he can institute a rough inquiry that will expose criminal and the incompetent."

The committee gives "special condation to Attorney General Brunand his assistant, Mr. Middlekauf, r their vigorous prosecution of the enders, which resulted in the con-tion of sixty-two persons.

"The attorney general," the report ys, "answered every appeal made to im by the good people of East St.
Louis and St. Clair county, and virtually without assistance from the local thorities, remedied many evils.

"Assistant Attorney General Midkauf had active charge of the proscutions growing out of the riot, and showed neither fear nor favor.
apable, determined, and courageous, allowed neither political influence r personal appeals to swerve him
m the strict line of duty."

Called a Plague Spot.

It is a revolting picture the commit-gives of East St. Louis. The deription would slander the reputation the wildest, most dissolute mining mp of the old frontier.

"East St. Louis for many years has en a plague spot; within its borders, d throughout its environs, every fense in the calendar of crime, and ery lapse in morals and public cency has been openly committed, ch day increasing the terrors of the w abiding," the report says. "Sodom d Gomorrah were model Christian mmunities by comparison. No terms condemnation applied to the men o were responsible for the appalling nditions revealed before your comittee can be too severe. In many ses they deserve the extreme penlty.

"The purpose of the politicians, of th political parties, who found East
Louis respected and prosperous,
d in a few years robbed its treasury, ve away valuable franchises, sank in the mire of pollution, and brought on it national censure and disgrace, s deliberate. They united to elect n to high office who would further ir schemes of spoliation, even when y feared to share their plunder.

"It was a conspiracy as shameless it was confident. They left nothing chance.

"The gang that took possession of st St. Louis harbored the off-scour-gs of the earth. The vag, the safe-ower, and the stickup man flocked its sheltering arms, safe from art or disturbance. The good people this sorely afflicted community were werless."

The committee traces in detail the eed that made crooks of the policians, made money grabbers of the nufacturers, who pitted white labor ainst blacks; drove organized labor m their plants; brought thousands inefficient negroes from the South, ting the white men from their itions. All this stirred the fires of hatred until it finally culminated bloody, pitiless riot, arson and wanmurder."

Vice Without Limit.

Corruption was bi-partisan, produc-
a "shameless debauchery of the ctorate," spreading from the city
"filtered through carefully laid nduits into every street and alley, the hotels where girls, mere chil-
n of 15 years of age, were violated; the low dance halls, where schools listened to lewd songs and ened in lascivious dances; and, in the rval, retired to assignation rooms h the drunken brutes who frequent-the resorts; into the gambling es where poorly paid workmen e robbed of their daily earnings;
o the 350 saloons which kept open on day, many of them running with-a license; into the barrel houses re the vilest of whisky was sold in ties; the resort of vagrants and ards; rendezvous of criminals and s of crime."

Police Called Inefficient.

Mayor Mollman, the committe pros the tool of "a gang of con-ous politicians exploiting the
, and the majority of his police had served an apprenticeship as ers at corrupt elections; as pros of lawless saloons and hotels openly as assignation houses. They criminals loose at the dictation ans and divided with grafting justices of the peace the fines that should have gone into the treasury."

Rioters jailed by Col. Clayton and his soldiers were freed by the police and numerous instances of police complicity in the rioting are given. Scathing denunciation is uttered of Mayor Mollman's responsibility for these conditions.

State's Attorney Criticized.

The committee names and describes one by one the vicious characters who controlled Mollman and their corrupt depredations upon the city, which took myriad forms of graft and legalized vice of the lowest order.

Hubert Schaumleffel, state's attorney of St. Clair county, is described as "devoid of character" and the "boon companion of the low and dissolute; the ready servant of scheming politicians; at heart a sympathizer with criminals whom he should have prosecuted relentlessly."

The day of the riot, "with the mob rushing through the streets, hundreds of houses in flames, and men, women, and children victims of the rifle, pistol, and the bludgeon, State's Attorney Schaumleffel staggered drunken along the way, heedless of the crimes that were being committed in his presence and callous to the cries of the injured and the dying."

Part Is Unprintable.

The committee describes the experiences of white slaves in the police protected dens too revolting for publication.

Coming down to the efforts to quell the riots, the report says:

"It may be well at this point to describe Col. Tripp, because he fills an important rôle in this tragedy.

"When the adjutant general's office summoned Col. Tripp he answered the call arrayed in a seersucker suit and a dainty straw hat, after having, as he informed your committee, hastily packed his handbag with a lot of toilet articles. He brought no uniform with him and although it was his duty to face and quell a riotous mob, at no time was he garbed as a soldier.

Tripp Called Hindrance.

"Evidently it was his intention to obtain some bulletproof point of vantage from which he could view the turbulent scenes in perfect safety; while, with a megaphone, he could command and dispose of his troops. After hours of consultation with his companion in timidity and inefficiency, the mayor, he ventured in the direction of the mob, and according to his own testimony saw a helpless Negro with a rope around his neck being dragged to his death.

"It is the unanimous opinion of every witness who saw Col. Tripp on that fateful day, that he was a hindrance instead of a help to the troops; that he was ignorant of his duties, blind to his responsibilities, and deaf to every intelligent appeal that was made to him. His presence in East St. Louis was a reproach to the assistant adjutant general who sent him there, and a reflection on the judgment of the governor for burdening his staff with so hopeless an incompetent.

"When Col. Tripp was asked why he spent four hours in the city hall, with East St. Louis in the hands of a murderous mob, and failed to take charge of his troops, who were sorely in need of a commander, he absolved himself of all responsibility by answering: 'The president never goes out of his office.' And so, by comparing himself to the commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States, he was perfectly satisfied with his conduct."

Cause of Riots.

On the question of the cause of the riots the committee says:

"The officers of the mills and factories placed the blame at the door of organized labor; but the overwhelming weight of testimony, to which is added the convictions of the committee, ascribes the mob spirit and its murderous manifestations to the bitter race feeling that had grown up between the whites and the blacks.

"It was proved conclusively that the various industries in St. Clair county were directly responsible for the importation of these Negroes from the south. Advertisements were printed in various southern newspapers urging the Negroes to come to East St. Louis and promising them big wages. In many instances agents were sent through the south to urge the Negroes to abandon profitable employment there and come to East St. Louis, where work was said to be plentiful and wages high.

Blame for Employers.

"One of the local railroads sent an agent to the southern states and on some trips he brought back with him as many as thirty or forty Negro men, all of them employed at their homes, making from $2 to $2.50 a day. A number of the men testified before the committee that they were promised $2.40 a day and board if they would come to East St. Louis, but when they did come they were paid only $1.40 a day with an allowance of 60 cents a day for board and were fed on coffee, bread, and "lasses" and made to sleep on sacks in box cars, where they suffered keenly from the cold.

"Responsibility for this influx of 10,000 or more Negroes into East St. Louis rests on the railroads and manufacturing establishments, and they must bear their share of the responsibility for the ensuing arson and murder that followed this unfortunate invasion."

HEROES WHO BLED FOR NATION

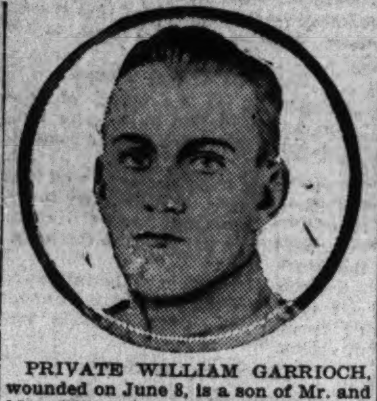
Chicagoans Whose Names Appear on Casualty Lists of Army and the Marine Corps.

PRIVATE ERNEST ADAMS of the regular army, killed in an airplane accident, was the son of J. J. Adams, a retired merchant of 1127 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

PRIVATE ELMER FOGELSTAD, killed in action with the marines, was the 29-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Fogelstad, 3743 Palmer street. He was with the Seventy-ninth company, Sixth regiment.

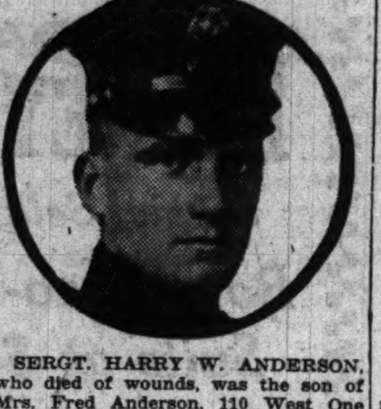
PRIVATE GEORGE F. LEDGER, wounded, is the son of Mrs. Catherine Ledger, 6554 North Robey street. He fulfilled, by enlisting, a long cherished desire to go to France.

CORP. ARTHUR J. MURPHY, on the marine wounded list, is the 19-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Murphy, 1139 West Seventy-first street.

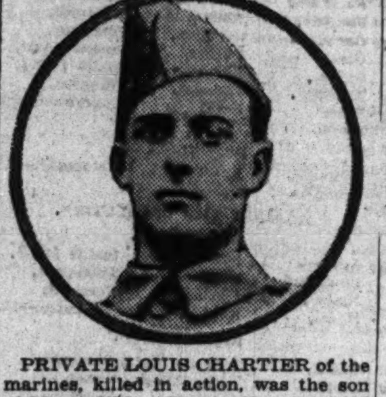


PRIVATE WILLIAM GARRIOCH, wounded on June 8, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Garrioch of 7221 Tripp avenue. He was previously wounded by shrapnel.

PRIVATE WALTER E. CAPPS, reported wounded, is 22 years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Capps of Oak Park. He is with company 82, Sixth regiment, marines.



SERGT. HARRY W. ANDERSON, who died of wounds, was the son of Mrs. Fred Anderson, 110 West One Hundred and Eleventh place, and had been engaged in thrilling action several times.



PRIVATE LOUIS CHARTIER of the marines, killed in action, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Chartier, 3605 Wentworth avenue. He was once wounded in April.

CORP. JOSEPH A. DARGIS, wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Dargis, 638 West Eighteenth street. He was born in Lithuania.

PEACE INSURANCE

Former Premier Bourgeois Says Entente Allies Must Lead in World League.

PARIS, July 6.—Interviewed regarding the findings of the committee formed to study the question of bringing about a league of nations, ex-Premier Leon Bourgeois, the president of the committee, stated that his views were identical with those of President Wilson on the object to be attained—namely, a lasting peace founded on respect for the liberties and rights of peoples.

An organization of universal scope, M. Bourgeois said, was not possible except among the entente allied powers. It would afterwards be opened to other nations when those countries furnished the necessary guarantees, possessed a democratic form of government, and expressed a willingness to place their destinies in the hands of the combine of nations, in accordance with the ideas of President Wilson and Lord Curzon, member of the British war cabinet.

Plans for the organization of the league of nations, the ex-premier added, should be studied now, for it would bind tighter the ties uniting the entente allies and also establish a diplomatic unity, something which would be indispensable at the time negotiations for peace were instituted. Acting without delay, M. Bourgeois concluded, the allies would increase considerably their moral influence on the world.

"Tight Money" His Only Excuse for Embezzlement

"Tight money" due to wartime conditions was urged last night as an excuse for embezzlement by Fred C. Starr of 4302 North Kildare avenue, a clerk employed in the Morrison hotel drug store.

Starr was arrested when Detectives Mulvihill and McGuirk found marked bills which had been placed in the drug store cash register in his possession. He had been under suspicion for some time, his thefts amounting to from $300 to $400.

Starr confessed to the detectives.

"I built two three story flat buildings just before the war and I was carrying a $1,800 mortgage on them," he said. "Money was tight and I had to get it some place."

STATE MOVES TO CHECK STRIKE OF NEWSBOYS

St. Paul, Minn., July 6.—Gov. Burnquist ordered an investigation today of conditions incident to the newsboys' strike in Minneapolis, and he reiterated his declaration of last night that he will remove Mayor Thomas Van Lear, Socialist, and Louis Harthill, chief of police, unless law and order are enforced.

Gov. Burnquist's announcement of an investigation was a reply to a statement issued by Chief Harthill, in which he declared that conditions were not as bad as they had been represented to the governor.

"If I find that the laws are not properly enforced in Minneapolis, a special meeting of the state safety commission will be called immediately to recommend definite action in the matter," the governor said.

Harthill told the governor over the telephone that the police are doing, and will do, everything in their power to prevent strike disturbances.

PLANS TO HONOR HEROES OF WAR UP TOMORROW

Samuel Insull, chairman of the State Council for Defense, and Ald. Joseph O. Kostner, chairman of the city council committee on defense, will have a conference tomorrow on plans for a memorial to Chicagoans killed in the war.

The council committee is to meet Tuesday to finish the selection of a committee to have charge of the planning.

"A number of suggestions have been made," said Ald. Kostner, "but I think it is better for the committee to pass on these before they are made public."

The committee is to plan a temporary memorial as well as a permanent one, which will be erected after the war. The memorial will contain the names of all Chicagoans in the army and navy service who were killed in the war.

13 U. S. CITIES TO HONOR BASTILE DAY

New York, July 6.—At least thirteen American cities will conduct Bastile day exercises July 14, commemorating the anniversary of the first blow for freedom struck by the French people, according to an announcement here today by the committee on allied tribute to France.

Aside from the observance in this city, at which Ambassador Jusserand of France and Lord Reading, the British ambassador, will be speakers, demonstrations will be held, it was stated, in Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Denver, Kansas City, Savannah, Nashville, Memphis, Concord, N. H., St. Paul, and New Orleans.

Government Cotton Buyer Plan to Go to Congress

New Orleans, La., July 6.—Establishment by the government of a corporation to be known as the United States Cotton corporation, with power to buy for the account of the United States government such cotton as may be offered for sale without other available buyers at a price to be fixed by President Wilson, will be recommended to congress by a special committee, consisting of one banker and one cotton producer from each of the states of the cotton belt.

Resolutions to this effect were passed at a conference of cotton states bankers and producers.

CASUALTY LISTS REVEAL STORIES OF CITY HEROES

Inspiration in Biographies of Three Dead and Ten Wounded.

The overseas casualty lists of yesterday contained the names of thirteen Chicagoans, three dead and ten wounded.

Private Ernest Adams, the only Chicagoan whose name was on the army list, was killed in an aeroplane accident. He was 29 years of age, and the son of J. J. Adams, a retired merchant of 1127 Hinman avenue, Evanston. He enlisted as an airplane mechanic last summer at Medford, Ore., where he had been a fruit grower for eight years. He sailed overseas in February of this year and has been stationed in England since.

Killed With Marines.

Louis Chartier, killed in action with the marines, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Chartier of 3605 Wentworth avenue. He enlisted on April 7 of last year, the day after war was declared, and was with the first contingent to cross to the land of his forebears. He was wounded last April. Prior to his enlistment he was employed by Reid, Murdoch & company.

Sergt. Harry W. Anderson, who died of wounds, had been in action several times before he was mortally wounded, for letters he wrote to his mother, Mrs. Fred Anderson, 110 West One Hundred and Eleventh place, told stirring tales of fights engaged in by his company.

Corp. Joseph A. Dargis, wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Dargis, 638 West Eighteenth street, and was 21 last month. He was born in Lithuania, and came to this country when 5 years old. Last May he resigned his position with the Beier Dry Goods company, 3455 West Chicago avenue, to enlist. He joined the marines in May, 1917, and was soon promoted to corporal.

Wounded by Grenade.

Private William Garrioch, another marine with the first overseas contingent, was wounded by a hand grenade in a dawn attack by the Huns on June 8, when he had just recovered from shrapnel wounds in the head. He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Garrioch of 7221 Tripp avenue. Before enlisting in June, 1917, he was a bricklayer.

At the time of his enlistment last June Private Walter E. Capps, wounded in France, conducted two dry goods stores with his brother, George H. Capps. He is 22 years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Capps, Sr., of Oak Park. He was ordered overseas duty in July with Company 82, Sixth regiment, Marine corps.

Corp. Arthur J. Murphy, reported wounded, is the 19-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Murphy, 1139 West Seventy-first street. He enlisted in the Sixth regiment of the marines three days after war was declared. He graduated from the Altgeld school, where his mother is a teacher, and the De La Salle institute, and was studying law at DePaul university when he enlisted.

Refused "Safe" Duty.

Another wounded marine is Private George F. Ledger, son of Mrs. Catherine Ledger, 6554 North Robey street. Before enlisting in May, 1917, he spent most of his time traveling in this country and Canada. His one ambition was to go to France, his mother said, and when the opportunity came he was quick to enlist. At Port Royal, where he trained with the marines, he established a record for sharpshooting and was offered a chance to remain as an instructor, but refused.

Private Charles Shelley, the son of Mrs. Carl Shelley, 3506 North Lincoln street, ran away to join the marines when he had just turned 17 years, in April of last year. At that time his mother had him released because of his youth, but upon his entreaties he was later allowed to go.

Private Robert G. Dickson, wounded, lived with his father, John D. Dickson of Gurnee, Ill., five miles west of Waukegan. He was 24 years old, enlisted in April last year, and crossed the ocean in July.

Private John W. Biggerstaff, severely wounded, 19 years old, has been with the marines four years. He enlisted as an apprentice musician when he was 15 years old and two years ago applied for admission to the regular service. He saw service in Haiti and Cuba and was one of the pioneer marines to go to France. His father, Frank W. Biggerstaff, lives at 316 South State street.

Private Charles E. Wold, wounded, was an employé of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad before enlisting in May, 1917. He is 34 years old, and has been wounded once before. A sister lives at 3848 Wabansia avenue.

JOHN P. MITCHEL KILLED IN FALL FROM AIRPLANE

Former New York Mayor Probably Fainted 600 Feet in the Air.

Lake Charles, La., July 6.—Maj. John Purroy Mitchel, former mayor of New York City and an officer in the aviation section of the signal corps, was killed at Gerstner field today when he fell from a single seater scout plane at a height of about 600 feet.

An examination of the wrecked airplane revealed that the safety belt was unfastened at the time of the accident, causing Maj. Mitchell to fall when the plane went into a nose dive. Maj. Kirby, commanding officer at the field, declined tonight to speculate as to the cause for the belt being unfastened. It is a rule, he said, that all fliers fasten themselves in the plane with the belt before ascending. The investigation has not been completed, Maj. Kirby stated.

Maj. Mitchel, accompanied by Mrs. Mitchel, came to Lake Charles from San Diego, Cal., about three weeks ago and Mrs. Mitchel was at Gerstner field this morning, but did not witness the accident. Mrs. Mitchel, with the body, will leave tonight for New York.

Youngest New York Mayor.

New York, July 6.—John Purroy Mitchel, killed in an aviation accident today, became a flyer for the army after having been defeated last fall for reëlection as mayor of New York. On July 19 next he would have been 39 years old.

Friends of the former mayor, speculating as to the cause of his fall from the airplane, recalled that he was subject to sudden headaches. At times when affected in this way while in public office here he was accustomed to isolate himself in a darkened room. The pain was said to be severe.

Born a descendant of a New York family of Irish lineage and which had figured prominently in the history of the city, Mitchel took a part in civic activities while still in his twenties.

On the death of Mayor Gaynor before the end of his term Mitchel became acting mayor, but resigned to become collector of the port of New York by appointment of President Wilson.

Mayor Sends Sympathy.

With the prestige of these offices and public service, Mitchel, running on a fusion anti-Tammany ticket, easily defeated Edward E. McCall for mayor in 1913. He was attacked, however, by John F. Hylan, who defeated him for mayor last fall.

Mayor Hylan issued the following statement this afternoon:

"The news of the death of John Purroy Mitchel is a great personal shock to me. My sincere sympathy goes out to Mrs. Mitchel in this, her great bereavement."

CHICAGO YOUTH FIGHTS AND WINS LIKE A VETERAN

Leads His Men Into Battle and Downs the Enemy.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, July 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—The correspondent today visited the clearing stations to see some of the wounded Americans who had helped the Australians in the capture of Hamel and Vaire woods.

Lying on a cot flanked by British soldiers was a Chicago lad who had been shot in the leg after a gallant fight. He was a blue eyed, round faced youngster, who looked strangely out of place among the veterans. He said he was 20 years old, but he was nothing more than a likable boy with a winning but at the moment somewhat wistful smile.

Wants an American.

The correspondent introduced himself and told the little soldier how proud everybody was of the Americans. The boy's lips trembled, but his eyes brightened.

"Are you from America, too?" he cried as he eagerly put out a hand. "O, I'm glad of that."

He was lonely, homesick, and hurt, and wanted comfort from somebody who came from home. A friendly chat began and the soldier clung desperately to the correspondent's hand. Suddently his eyes fastened on the correspondent's British uniform and a look of disappointment came to his face.

"You're not a Yankee, are you?" he asked with a quivering voice, and his eyes were moist. The correspondent assured him to the contrary. Instantly the boy brightened, and throwing his arm over the correspondent's shoulder he exclaimed:

"I'm mighty glad of that. I'm glad you are a Yankee, too."

Story of Part He Played.

Then he told the story of his part in the battle, and here is the way it ran:

"We all were very anxious to do well and were ready to fight to a finish. We knew there was trouble for us over there in No Man's land. None of our boys cared for that, but the day before the attack all the men of my company got together and shook hands and said good-by, for, you see, we did not know if we should meet again.

"I had worked very hard to learn to be a good soldier, for I wanted to be a credit to the folks back home. I guess I must have learned some things, for my commander gave me twenty-four of our chaps to lead over the top as corporal. And my men fought well."

How They Went Forward.

He paused, his face glowing with honest pride, and then continued:

"At midnight Wednesday we went forward and lay out in the open waiting for the signal to advance. Then about daylight came the barrage. It was a pretty big thing, the biggest we ever heard. It was just like a real Fourth of July celebration. The time came for the charge and we pushed out.

"A few of our boys were too anxious and they got so close to the barrage that they were hurt. My pal was struck by a shell beside me."

Again he stopped, and this time there were tears in his eyes and a big lump was working in his throat. There was silence for a moment and abruptly he went on:

"We were advancing toward Hamel village and had to go over one slope, then down into a little valley and up another hill. We got along all right, but down in the valley there was a lot of barbed wire that held us up some. I know I got caught, but not for very long.

Attacked by Two Enemies.

"Our men were fighting like anything and killing a lot of Boches who were in the trenches and shell holes. A good many of the Germans were yelling 'Kamerad' and surrendering, too.

"Two of the Boches came running up to me with their hands over their heads. I didn't know what to do with them, but an officer came along and sent them to the rear.

"Then we went on and had about reached our objective when something hit me in the leg and I went down. I tried to get up, but my leg would not let me, and I was dizzy. While I was on my knees I saw two Boches charging me with fixed bayonets. I had the butt of my rifle resting on the ground, my finger on the trigger, and I fired when they were about ten yards away. One of them fell over dead, but the other kept on coming, and was on me before I could throw in a fresh cartridge. Then I knew I had to fight him with the bayonet like a man. So I got to my feet somehow and as he jabbed at me with his bayonet I parried it with my rifle and then swung the rifle to his head as hard as I could. The blow broke his skull and he went down. That's all I remember until I woke up and found a chum beside me. He had gone out and brought me back."

Wants "Girl" to Be Happy.

That finished the personal story of this boy who had fought and killed and been wounded, but he had something else which was very much on his mind. After much hesitation it finally came out.

"I wonder if my little girl at home is happy," he said anxiously, referring to his sweetheart in Chicago. The correspondent told him she certainly would be happy and proud to know how well he had done.

"I hope she will be," he responded thoughtfully, and then added:

"Would it be too much trouble for you to drop her just a line to let her know that I am all right? I don't know when I shall have a chance to write."

That letter will go immediately, but pending its arrival the girl in Chicago should know he is wounded, but, as he himself says, all right. His wound apparently is not serious.

$12,000,000,000 Army Bill Is Ready for President

Washington, D. C., July 6.—The $12,000,000,000 army appropriation bill was completed late today by congress and now goes to the president. The conference report on the measure was approved by both the house and senate after only brief consideration.

Series of Attacks by Allies on West Front Constitute Puzzle to Military Men

By the New York Times Military Expert.

New York, July 6.—[Special.]—The last week has been marked by a series of heavy attacks by all of the allied contingents in both France and Italy. In Italy these attacks have no special significance in relation to the situation on the entire front. They have been simply to throw the Austrians back and improve local positions. In both respects they have been entirely successful.

The first attack was delivered in the mountain region about the Asiago plateau. Here the Italians, assisted by the French, retook the height at Rosso, recovered Monte Di Val Bella, and took in the operation a considerable number of prisoners. It was, however, a local thrust designed to do no more than to deprive the Austrians of advantageous positions. Somewhat later in the week, a heavy attack was delivered along the lower Piave between the new riverhead and the old.

Near New Piave.

When the Italians drove the Austrians back across the Piave in their last offensive they also crossed the old Piave at Capo Silo and recovered some of the ground which had been lost last fall. They made no immediate attempt to cross beyond this point, but satisfied themselves with establishing a bridgehead east of Capo Silo for use when the time appeared favorable.

Last week they seized the opportunity which this presented, and, striking ont from this bridgehead, advanced their lines to a point near Chiesanuova, which is close by the present Piave line.

The Italian successes are important in one particular. It is realized now that they will need no further help in man power, but are thtoroughly able to take care of themselves provided only that they are given sufficient supplies and food.

Attacks in France.

The attacks on the French front during the week have, however, had an entirely different purpose—a purpose which it must be admitted is not altogether clear. The American forces began those attacks with their advance through Belleau wood ten days ago. In this attack they pushed their lines northward as far as the southern bank of the Clignon river, where they halted for the time being. The French then took up the burden and struck against the western side of the Marne salient as a sequence to the American attack.

These two attacks may be accounted for by the formation of the battle line between Belleau wood and the Ourcq river. Moving westward from Belleau wood, the line runs along the southern bank of the Clignon, which runs due west at this point as far as Veuilly la Poterie, where it turns north towards Troesnes, the only break occurring between Passy en Valois and Marizy, where it contained a sharp bend toward Mosloy.

The first step of the French had to be to remove this salient, which was promptly done, the line then being straightened out so that its north and south course was unbroken.

Hit Two Sides.

If the French desired to remove from the Marne salient, this right angle where the battle line turns north from the Clignon, the logical step, of course, would be to attack from the two sides. This, as I have said, would account for these two attacks were they all that had occurred. The French driving eastward from the Villiers Cotterets forest and the Americans driving north from the Belleau wood would naturally be moving towards each other and so would narrow the point of this angle to such an extent that it would become untenable.

Thus the Germans would be thrown back at a point where the German lines are nearest Paris.

Hit Further North.

The next attack was still further north, between the Oise and the Aisne, where the French fell back in answer to the German pressure during the last German attack. Here, as in the previous cases, material ground was gained with a considerable number of prisoners. The resistance here appeared to be less than usual in such an attack, the French, therefore, attempting another attack in the same locality, north of Moulin-Sous-Touvent. A similar gain was made and again a number of prisoners were taken.

The next attack moved northward, and this time it was the British who took the initiative, the front involved extending from a point just north of Villers-Bretonneux to the Somme. In this attack an American regiment, which had been brigaded with the Austrians, participated. This proved the most successful of any of the attacks made. The advance was made over a front of about four miles and the German positions taken to a depth of over a mile. Over 1,200 were taken prisoners.

Hit at Thierry.

While these series of attacks were in progress the Americans again attacked in the region just west of Chateau Thierry. This was another straightening out process, the object being to obliterate a salient in the lines between Chateau Thierry and Bouresches. In a brief fight the line was drawn across the neck of this salient and its defenders either driven back or captured. All of these attacks are remarkable in exactly the same way.

Although we do not know what the objective was in each case, it seems that the allies went ahead as far as they had planned, and then came to a stop. In no case was the attack stopped short. Also it is to be noted that in every case the toll in prisoners was unusually heavy.

Many reasons occur why these attacks have been made. All would seem to hold water. But the most logical seems to be that Gen. Foch is thinking of the next attack which the Germans are certain to deliver and is wondering where it will fall.

Gauges Foe Strength.

Not knowing, he is trying to secure advance information through gauging the German strength at the various points in the line. Trench raids, of course, give certain information.

But a reconnaissance in force, as an attack of the type of these which have been going on all during the week may be called, reaches well back behind the front line and draws in to the fighting all of the Germans in the immediate vicinity.

From the results of such an action, which develops the strength of the Germans at the particular section under attack, the allied commanders can ascertain just what the strength opposed to him is at the moment.

U. S. LAUNCHES FIRST 'SKY TANK' OF GIANT FLEET

Elizabeth, N. J., July 6.—America is preparing for three more years of war, Assistant Secretary of War Crowell declared here today at the "launching" of the first American aerial dreadnaught.

This machine, a Handley-Page bombing airplane, made a successful flight, carrying six men after it had been named the "Langley" by Mrs. Harry B. Mingle, who smashed a bottle of champagne on one of its steel uprights. It is expected that this airplane, and others of its type, will fly across the Atlantic to the western front, there to participate in the aerial offensive against Germany.

The giant plane, measuring 150 feet across the wings, is equipped with four Liberty motors, can carry from two to three tons of bombs besides its crew and has a speed of 90 to 100 miles an hour. It weighs 8,500 pounds.

The Standard Aircraft corporation, which manufactured this model, plans to turn them out in wholesale quantities. There is no estimate of the exact number to be made and sent against the enemy.

A crowd of 30,000 saw the "Langley" take the air. Among officials present were John D. Ryan, director of aircraft construction; John Langley, nephew of Prof. Langley, a pioneer in aviation; Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Senator Thomas of Colorado, and Col. William Branker of the British air ministry.

RAIL MEN SAY BACKWAGESHAVE NOT BEEN PAID

Numerous inquiries have been made by railroad men regarding the arrearages of pay due them under the award of the commission recently appointed to adjust railroad wages, and approved by Director General McAdoo. In most cases these arrearages have not been paid, although a month has elapsed since the award was approved. The arrearages date to Jan. 1 last, from which time pay increases were ordered by the award to take effect.

In the cases of several of the smaller railroads the award has been paid to the men, but with the larger roads there has been delay, due to the difficulty experienced in figuring out the payments. As much progress as possible has been made, it is said by railroad officials, and it is expected that the arrearages will soon be paid, especially as Mr. McAdoo has urged the officials of the roads, in whose hands the matter of payment has been left by the government, to effect the payment as soon as possible.

Camp Dodge Lieutenant Killed at Rifle Range

Camp Dodge, Ia., July 6.—Second Lieut. Grant A. McDonald of Grafton, N. B., on duty with the Three Hundred and Forty-ninth infantry, is dead as the result of a gunshot wound accidentally inflicted while the officer was on the rifle range Wednesday.

SENATE PASSES WAR SHIPPING CONTROL BILL

Washington, D. C., July 6.—An administration bill designed to confer on the president complete powers to control shipping for war purposes was passed, after slight amendment, today by the senate. It now goes to conference, having passed the house.

The president may delegate the powers, which are now in part indirectly exercised by the war trade and shipping boards, to any agency. He is empowered to regulate ocean freight rates, requisition vessels, determine priority of shipment of goods, control charters, dry docks, loading facilities, and warehouses.

An amendment adopted by the senate forbids government purchase of any terminal or warehouse facilities.

U. S. to Build 2 Greatest Ships, with 16 Inch Guns

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Two of the 40,000 ton battle ships authorized by congress will be constructed at the Brooklyn navy yard. Secretary Daniels, it was learned today, has approved the building of ways at that yard for this purpose. The ships are included in the three years' building program for the navy and represent the largest battle craft ever planned, exceeding any existing battleship by almost 10,000 tons. Under the plans as originally approved they are to carry twelve 16 inch guns each and to have a speed of twenty-five knots.

BALLOONS CARRY KAISER'S HOT AIR TO YANK TROOPS

New Game Tried When His Soldiers Are Beaten Back.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 6.—Germany has started to try her subtle propaganda on the American soldiers. On July 4, for the first time on this sector, hot air balloons floated over our lines with an automatic attachment scattering at intervals large numbers of propaganda pamphlets and copies of the infamous Gazette des Ardennes.

One story has a conspicuously large number of surrendered Germans telling our soldiers that the Hun soldiers do not want to fight any more, but are driven on by their commanders. This at the time when our commanders know full well that with their comrades these same men in Germany are about to launch a powerful drive.

Atrocity Stories Denied.

The Gazette des Ardennes, dropped over our lines, contained scraps of news culled all over the world, and items most favorable to Germany. There was no mention of anything American, but many items dealing with trading and intended to promote discord among the allies.

One pamphlet entitled "Who Really Started the War" contains data blaming Russia and England. Many attempts are made to show that the published facts as to German atrocities were false. It reproduces a picture from the New York Tribune of October, 1914, purporting to show Belgian soldiers in the tower of a cathedral which the Germans destroyed.

Old Jokes Reproduced.

Another pamphlet reproduces a large number of pictures and jests of French papers directed against the English. Some of these are ten years old.

Judging from the reception this propaganda got among our soldiers, it is safe to say that the vaunted propaganda of the kaiser will do no better against our doughboys than his vaunted guard divisions.

There is no bolshevik, no pacifist, no irrational idealist among the American soldiers. Their thinking is confined to beating the boche, and they are perfectly willing to allow the political and economic questions to be settled after the war.

WILSON INSISTS ON WIRE SEIZURE; SENATE BALKING

Martin Says Action Cannot Be Taken Before Recess.

president permits or forbids a recess, duty of senators. There is little perhaps that congress can accomplish. I but because of the responsibility and realize we have lost our initiative and become a mere rubber stamp in government. But there is a possibility that we might do something and we ought to be ready to meet that possibility."

Senator Johnson said the military situation on the western front now is a "perilous crisis" and for that reason alone congress should remain at its post.

Simmons Chides House.

Disapproval of the action of the house was expressed by Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee.

"The house knew perfectly well that the matter ought to be properly investigated," he declared, "and the house expected the senate to make the investigation."

Senator Simmons said the interstate commerce committee should conduct an investigation while congress was in recess.

After adopting the adjournment resolution, the senate voted, 31 to 18, to give privileged status with the right-of-way when congress reconvenes to the emergency agricultural bill, with its prohibition amendment.

When the adjournment resolution was presented in the house a point of no quorum was promptly made. Later Mr. Kitchin withdrew the resolution.

May Still Halt Strike.

President Wilson's vigorous insistence on the prompt adoption of the telegraph resolution was interpreted tonight as a clear indication of his intention to take over the wires at the earliest possible moment.

Members of congress were confident that the blocking of the recess plan would make it clear to the operators threatening to strike Monday that speedy action on the measure would ensue and that the administration would then be in a position to meet their demand for recognition of the union.

With this prospect in view, it was believed at the capitol that the union leaders would agree at least to a postponement of the strike until congress could act.

SPECIAL SUMMER RATES

Are Rapidly Filling the

LEXINGTON HOTEL

Michigan Blvd. at 22nd St.

Absolutely Fireproof 450 Rooms

This is shown by the following letter, which is self-explanatory:

CHICAGO, July 6th, '18.

The Chicago Tribune,
City.
Gentlemen:-

We wish to compliment the Tribune on its wonderful pulling powers. We recently purchased the Lexington Hotel building and furnishings and are spending $100,000 putting the plant in first class condition. Most of our rooms are now in shape so we started an advertising campaign, running a 1/8 page display in the Tribune on Sunday June 30th. We followed this with a 10 inch display on July 4th, both emphasizing the reduced rates we are making for the summer, especially the rooms which we are renting for $18 to $30 per month, whether occupied by one or two persons, and as a direct result have rented permanently more than thirty of these rooms.

We still have a number of desirable rooms, both with and without bath, which we feel sure the advertising contemplated in the Tribune, will quickly fill.

We know our summer rates are lower than have ever before been offered by any first class hotel occupying an absolutely fireproof building -- but even these bargains would have gone begging had it not been for the great pulling power of our Tribune advertising.

Sincerely yours,
INTERSTATE HOTEL COMPANY.

WILSON'S SPEECH MADE PEACE AIM BY LLOYD GEORGE

British Premier Tells Pershing's Men How War Must End.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE BRITISH FRONT, July 5.—[By the Associated Press. Delayed.]—Until Germany accepts the conditions laid down by President Wilson she cannot have peace, and she can have peace tomorrow if she accepts them, David Lloyd George, the British premier, gave this message to the American troops training on the British front after he had seen them at review today.

The arrival in France of one million American soldiers has made the German emperor realize that his defeat was certain. The emperor, the premier said, has had many illusions regarding the war. One of these was that the new American troops would not be capable of meeting those of Germany, trained to to the minute.

Welcome to Troops.

Premier Lloyd George reiterated forcefully that the allies do not covet a single yard of German soil and do not desire to dispossess Germany of her rightful inheritance or the German people of their legitimate rights.

He said in part:

"Gen. ——, I desire to congratulate you on being in command of such a fine body of men. When I see them I am glad they are on our side, not on the other. We are anxious that many more thousands come across the ocean. The fact that you are here at all is a source of great joy to all of us.

"At the same time it is a source of great disappointment to the kaiser, who never quite expected you. He was assured by his advisers that America was so pacific there was no danger of her getting in. Of course, a mistake was committed.

"Chateau Thierry opened the kaiser's eyes to another mistake. Yesterday in Paris I saw your comrades who fought at Chateau Thierry carrying their flag. And they carried it high, proud of the fact they had not lowered it on battlefields of Europe. The French generals I have talked to have expressed delight with the fighting qualities of Americans. So the kaiser's advisers and the kaiser realize they have made another mistake.

Can Have Early Peace.

"We are grateful that you are here to fight, but of course you are not fighting only for America, not only for France, which has suffered more than any nation in the world has ever suffered, you are fighting for the liberties of the world. In your faces alone we have a source of great hope. We see there determination to win and we are confident.

"President Wilson yesterday made it clear what we are fighting for. If the kaiser and his advisers will accept the conditions voiced by the president they can have peace with America, peace with France, peace with Great Britain, tomorrow.

"But he has given no indication of an intention to do so. Because he will not do so is the very reason we all are fighting.

As Mr. Lloyd George concluded the countryside resounded with three cheers in regulation American style. Previous to the review the premier and his party watched American and British troops training on nearby fields.

Royal Flying Corps Man Is Missing in Chicago

The Chicago police were asked by relatives of Lieut. Maxted of the royal flying corps to try to find him here. The young man, whose first name was not given, left his home in London, Ontario, a few days ago and was to have passed through Chicago on his way to New York city. It was reported that he had not reached the eastern city and members of his family at London fear that harm may have befallen him.

WORK ON DRAFT BOARD IS FATAL TO T. J. DAWSON

Thomas J. Dawson, prominent in politics for many years, died yesterday morning at the Lake View hospital of a nervous breakdown, attributed to overzealousness in his work as chairman of the draft exemption board in district No. 55.

Mr. Dawson was born in Chicago in 1868, was graduated from the North Division High school in 1886, studied law nights while working for the Martin Dawson company, wholesale confectioners, and received his law degree from the Chicago College of Law in 1894. In 1897 he was appointed chief assistant prosecuting attorney for the city.

He served in the state senate from 1901 to 1905. While in the senate he procured the passage of the police pension law and for two years was attorney for the Police Defense association. He was a candidate for judge on the Democratic ticket in 1911. For several years he was attorney for the board of review. He was a member of the Chicago Athletic association and the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Dawson leaves a widow and two children, Mary and Kathleen. The funeral will be held tomorrow from the home, 945 Argyle street, to St. Thomas of Canterbury church, with interment at Calvary.

Lt. Small Home with Battle Field Trophy

Lieut. William A. Small Jr., son of William A. Small, chief clerk to Charles F. Clyne, United States district attorney, got back from France yesterday, bringing a trophy of conquest. It is a German Mauser rifle, which he captured at Montdidier.

Lieut. Small was gassed and after a term in an army hospital has been returned to America to teach selected soldiers how to fight Germans. He is on a ten day furlough to visit his family. He received his commission at the first officers' training camp and sailed for France last September.

Forced to Doff Uniform in United States Court

U. S. Case, 703 Belmont avenue, charged with impersonating an army officer, was held to the grand jury by United States Commissioner Mason yesterday in bonds of $2,000. Case appeared before the commissioner wearing a military uniform that Commissioner Mason had ordered him to remove at a former hearing. He was compelled to doff the uniform in the building.

KAISER BEATEN IN THREE MONTHS, BONAR LAW SAYS

Confident in Ability of the Allies to Check Next German Smash.

LONDON, July 6.—The coming German blow will not be less dangerous because of the time employed in preparing for it, but it is comforting to know that the men responsible for the command of the allied armies are confident of the result, Andrew Bonar Law, chancellor of the exchequer, declared last night at a dinner to the delegation of the parliamentary commercial conference.

"It is impossible to foresee the future," he said, "but I believe that the fateful hour of this war is upon us and if in another three months our enemies have won no strategic object, then their campaign will have failed and it will, I hope, be a decisive failure."

Germans Make Many Errors.

The Germans possessed the most perfect military machine that ever existed, but the chancellor said he believed that when the history of the war is written it will be seen that Germany had made greater military mistakes than any other power.

The chancellor spoke gratefully of American help and alluded to the wonderful organization in sending American troops across the Atlantic.

Mr. Bonar Law said he trembled to think what would have been the position of the allies after Russia went out of the war but for the help of the United States.

United the Allies Stand.

Of one thing, he said, there was no doubt, just as the allies were standing together now, so will they stand when the war is over to repair the ravages of the war. The chancellor concluded:

"I see no immediate hope of peace. There is no road to it, I fear, except the rugged road through victory. It will be fatal to the world and fatal to the Germans themselves if they are not taught the lesson that war does not pay."

McAdoo Slowly Recovering from Throat Affliction

Merced, Cal., July 6.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, with Mrs. McAdoo and Assistant Director of Railways Oscar Price, were en route from Merced to Lake Tahoe today, having concluded an outing in the Yosemite. They will remain at Tahoe for several days before returning east. Secretary McAdoo is gradually recovering from the throat trouble which forced his vacation.

TO BE CHAPLAIN

Pastor of Berwyn Church Announces Gifts of Parishioners as He Departs.

The Rev. L. L. Hammitt, for the last six years pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Berwyn, Ill., left yesterday for Camp Humphreys, near Washington, D. C. He goes as a chaplain with the rank of a first lieutenant and will receive his regimental assignment later.

In connection with his leaving Berwyn he announced a gift to the church of several thousand dollars, the interest of which will be devoted to the benefit of the soldiers and dispensed by Chaplain Hammitt.

"I have promised not to announce the name of the donor at present," he said, "but the sum is sufficiently large to build a parish house for the church as soon as the war is over. Until then the proceeds of the fund will be used to buy yarn and other material for the soldiers and the young women of the church will make up the articles."

Another gift announced by the departing pastor was that of Miss Helen Moore, who will build a church which she will give, together with the lot, for the use of the Bohemians who live in Stickney south of Berwyn.

As Mr. Hammitt has enlisted for the period of the war, it is expected a successor will be appointed by Bishop Quayle at the meeting of the Rock River conference next October. In the meantime the pulpit will be supplied by the Rev. Dr. Martin E. Cady of Evanston.

GIVE PREMIER PLAN TO REMEDY IRISH PROBLEM

Federalists Talk with Lloyd George About Way Out of Tangle.

The British Pictorial Service in Chicago yesterday received a cablegram from London which told of a conference with Lloyd George on the questions of federalism and home rule. It said:

"An influential deputation addressed Prime Minister Lloyd George yesterday on the question of federal revolution. Ireland was not represented and the deputation disavowed any intention of dictating government policy with regard to Ireland, but it insisted on the incapacity of a single parliament to handle the affairs of England, Scotland, Wales, and Ireland, together with imperial concerns, especially in view of the increasing burden of reconstruction after war.

"Lord Brassey emphasized the importance of Britain considering the opinion of her dominions and the United States in the matter of home rule. If a common ground of agreement could be reached with these countries all Irishmen would probably accept the situation.

Parliament Overburdened.

"Lord Selborne also emphasized the congestion of parliament, stating that the history of the last four years might have been different but for parliament's preoccupation with domestic affairs. Mr. J. M. Robertson asserted that the most important need of all was to settle the Irish question before entering on peace negotiations, and added that the final defense of a federal policy was that it was both a Liberal and Unionist policy.

"Mr. Adamson, representing the Labor party, agreed with the proviso that the proposal should not be made a pretext upon which to hang up home rule indefinitely. Other members, both Unionist and Liberal, urged the advisability of the measure.

Premier a Federalist.

"Mr. Lloyd George, replying, said he had always been a federalist and had agreed with the late Joseph Chamberlain as far back as 1886, when the latter asserted that Mr. Gladstone would have done better to institute federalism instead of home rule. He admitted the urgent necessity of giving imperial affairs greater prominence in parliament. This could be done only by relegating purely local affairs to local parliaments. He also emphasized the utter impossibility of adequate reconstruction after war unless the parliamentary ground were cleared here and now.

"The chief obstacles were the difficulty of meeting general consent, for a very general consent was absolutely necessary to a change of such importance. Also Ulster was an outstanding problem.

"Still the schema was most desirable as it would remove any suggestion of unfairness to Ireland in the eyes of the dominions and the U. S. A., if all proposed sections of the federation were treated exactly alike.

York Speaks of U. S. A.

"Archbishop York, returning thanks to Mr. Lloyd George, referred feelingly to his recent visit to the United States and to the growing inclination he encountered there to appreciate England's difficulties with regard to Ireland. He added that it had been repeatedly suggested to him by men who counted in America that if Ireland could not be granted dominion rights, owing to the necessity of maintaining the integrity of the United Kingdom, she should at least be granted the equivalent of state rights.

"The bishop concluded with these words: 'Therefore, it would be a very great matter if a solution could be found which not only satisfied so large a measure of public opinion at home, but also vindicated the position of this country in the eyes of those who are increasingly our friends and partners.'"

LITTLE MARIE ASKS HELP TO FIND HER MOTHER

Help little Marie Reuss to find her mother. She has enlisted every city policeman in the fruitless hunt and yesterday appealed to THE TRIBUNE to ask its readers to join in the search.

Marie, who is 18, took her mother, Mrs. Rose Reuss, to a band concert in Union park on Thursday evening. It was an outing for them, and they took crackerjack and cookies along for dinner. About 10 o'clock Marie left her just for a few minutes and when she returned her mother had disappeared. Mrs. Ruess is not entirely right mentally. She has been "like a baby," Marie says, ever since an attack of typhoid fever directly following Marie's birth. She and Marie ever since then have lived with an aunt, Nellie McCaffery, 732 West Madison street.

MRS. ROSE RUESS

Here is the description Marie gives of her mother: Thirty-eight years old; weight, 120 pounds; height, about 5 feet 1 inch; heavy black hair brushed straight back. Wore white waist with high collar and black taffeta skirt, with round side panels, and low heeled slippers with one strap.

BODIES OF SLAIN COUPLE FOUND BY BLOODHOUNDS

Jackson, Mich., July 6.—[Special.]—The bodies of Mrs. Tillie Jenkins of this city and Vaiden Bordner, Coldwater, missing since Tuesday night, were found this morning by bloodhounds in charge of Sheriff Davis, in bushes near Roots Station, six miles north of Jackson. That both had been slain was indicated by the appearance of the bodies. Bordner was lying face downward with his skull crushed, while the body of Mrs. Jenkins was some distance away, the head nearly severed.

Bordner's pockets had been rifled by hands that were blood smeared. The positions of the bodies indicated they had been thrown into the thicket.

Efforts are being made to connect Harry Bushnell, a Jackson prison convict, who escaped from the North prison farm a week ago, with the crime. It has been ascertained that on Wednesday, the day the blood-stained automobile was found, Bushnell was questioned by another inmate regarding a suit of clothes he was wearing, and stated that some one had stolen his other clothes. He told another inmate with whom he was chummy that his clothes were stained with grease or some other substance, which he could not remove, and that he had burned the trousers and shirt.

Mohammed VI. Proclaimed New Sultan of Turkey

AMSTERDAM, July 6.—Mohammed VI. was proclaimed sultan of Turkey in the throne room of the Top Kapu palace yesterday morning, according to a Constantinople dispatch received here. The burial of Mohammed V. occurred later, the coffin being transported from the palace to the Mosque of Ejub by motorboat. The new sultan followed the burial party in his steam yacht.

TELLS OF AIDING GIBBONS FROM BATTLE FRONT

Ambulance Man Picked Writer Up at First Aid Station.

The followinig letter has just been received from Private B. Partner of 1322 South Lawndale avenue by a friend in this city. Private Partner is in the ambulance service at the battle front. His letter shows he gave the first lift to Floyd Gibbons of The Tribune who was wounded recently and is convalescing in a hospital in France:

DEAR PAL:

The roads we drive on are being shelled almost continually, and my elbows are nearly worn out from diving to the ground. The most hellish, weird, and damnable sound I ever heard is an oncoming shell. It is a shriek, or like a green bough swinging through the air with death in its explosion.

We drive up as far as a flivver can go to get the wounded; the roads are full of shell holes and are in need of repairing all the times.

How He Aided Gibbons.

The American troops are fine fighters, and I know whereof I speak. They are full of pep and aggressive. If we had enough of them here this war would be finished damn quick. Possibly you have read about a CHICAGO TRIBUNE correspondent being wounded. I had a clipping, which I sent to A. F. His name is Floyd Gibbons. Well, I got him on the front seat of my flivver right at the first aid station back of the lines.

Gibbons had a bad wound in the eye and head, also a neat hole drilled in his left bicep muscle. He crossed his feet over the hood and begged a lieutenant friend of his not to let him get lost in the hospital maze. I gave him a Bull Durham cigaret, also a blanket, as it was rather chilly. His tin hat was ripped open at the top; guess it saved his life.

Two of our men have been hit with H. E. shells; one slightly and the other rather dangerously.

"Give Her Gas and Pray."

The life is somewhat different than what I thought it would be, but I would not go back to our nice, quiet, peacable base camp on a bet.

It is a joke to hear the boys tell of new shell holes and how fast they can dodge. It is not so bad when a fellow is out of the car and able to fall into a ditch, but when the engine is making noise and we are on a shelled road, it's give the flivver lots of gas and pray for a miss.

I expect some mail from you soon, as we have not gotten any for nearly two weeks. I witnessed a good sight last week.

There was an observation sausage up real close to where we are stationed, at about 7:30 p. m. I saw several planes coming toward it, and they were boches. When close they spread out and one of them made a dive for the sausage and shot several rounds of incendiary bullets into it. The thing burst into flames, but the two observers got away by jumping with parachutes just before the planes got there. It sure was pretty to witness, but we all hugged the sides of houses until the boches got away. You know they fly low to attack with their machine guns.

I heard an anti-aircraft gun got them the very next day.

Engine Dies; Shell Pays Call.

It surely is a grand life till you stop one. I was stalled on a hill yesterday, my engine died on me and as I was getting out to crank it up a shell burst in the field close by, immediately after which a fragment hit the mud guard. I pulled up the piece of shell and beat it for my objective, which was an aid station close by. I was not frightened, but had to swallow a few times to keep my heart down and also take a long drink, as my mouth suddenly went dry. Rather funny, eh? BARNEY.

ONE EYE IS GONE.

Another report just received from France is that Floyd Gibbons, while convalescing, in good spirits, and able to walk short distances near the hospital, has lost one eye completely. Mrs. Gibbons is with him.

REFORMS NEEDED IN NEW WAR TAX, SAYS SELIGMAN

With the following article "The Tribune" begins the publication of a series of discussions of war revenue with especial reference to the new war tax bill which the house committee in Washington is beginning to prepare. Writter by expert American students of taxation problems, these articles are intended to throw light on the whole subject of war taxation—and from different points of view. The problem touches everyone.

What mistakes has America made or is she in danger of making? How much should our income and profits taxes be increased? Should consumption taxes be imposed? These and other interesting questions are discussed in this series.

BY EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN.

[Professor of Political Economy at Columbia university.]

A year ago, when the country was in the throes of excitement over the war revenue bill, the first point at issue was that of the relative proportion between loans and taxes. The sad experience of the civil war had fortunately brought the public to a realization of the dangers of defraying all war expenditures wholly, or almost exclusively, from loans. Some well meaning enthusiasts, however, were vigorously advocating the plan of paying all war expenses out of taxes, and were seriously exaggerating the evils of moderate loans, while underestimating the drawbacks of excessive taxes.

Surpasses Other Nations.

Congress, fortunately, decided to occupy the middle ground, and settled upon a policy for the first year which will result in about one-third of the war expenses being defrayed from taxes and two-thirds from loans. This involves a far more vigorous tax program than has been adopted by any other belligerent. Even Great Britain proposes to raise this year almost four-fifths of the war expenses from loans, while in Germany the effort has been made only to secure from taxation the interest on the new loans, and in France even this aim has not yet been achieved. For the coming fiscal year, when our war expenses are estimated at about $24,000,000,000, it seems entirely proper that at least the same proportion be observed as during the first year—i. e., that one-third of the amount be raised by taxes, thus increasing the war tax from $4,000,000,000 to $8,000,000,000. With every succeeding year it will become both possible and desirable to raise a relatively larger proportion from taxation, even though it may be long before we are economically able to reach the 50-50 per cent program which was at one time advocated by the treasury. To the demand for an additional $4,000,000,000 of taxes there will therefore be little objection.

General Plan Good.

When we come to consider the way in which this vast sum is to be raised there will also be little criticism of the general suggestions recently advanced by Secretary McAdoo, for his suggestions are in harmony with the teachings of economic and fiscal science. In war finance there are two fundamental principles; first, that taxes should be laid in accordance with the principle of ability to pay, and, second, that all nonessential consumption, and more especially all luxurious and harmful consumption, should be reduced to a minimum. The first principle means the taxation of wealth, the second the taxation of luxury.

Wealth may be measured in terms of either capital or income. The former measure is applied in our state and local finance in the shape of the general property tax. This, for obvious reasons, is not a great success, and is scarcely susceptible of expansion. The national government is hence restricted in this respect to the inheritance tax, which seizes property at the moment of transmission.

Adjustment Necessary.

It is entirely proper, therefore, that a large additional revenue should be derived from this source. Two points, however, should be borne in mind in increasing the rates, which even now run to a maximum of 25 per cent of the state: first, that, inasmuch as not a few of the states now levy high, progressive taxes on inheritances, some adjustment should be made between federal and state taxes; second, that care should be taken to provide, as in the recent British statute, for an abatement of the tax where the same estate passes more than once in a short time.

Modern life, however, lays far more stress upon income than upon property, as the test of ability to pay taxes. It is hence not surprising that the chief source of federal revenue should be found in taxes on incomes and profits, the one representing the individual, the other the business.

Can Add Billion Easily.

The yield of the income tax can easily be augmented by another billion. But to accomplish this equitably at least six fundamental reforms are needed:

1. The rate of the normal tax should be greatly augmented. The main burden now rests upon the very rich. Even if we were to increase the maximum rate from the present 75 per cent [of income and excess profits tax combined] to 100 per cent, the yield would be far short of what is needed. In England the normal rate is now 33 1-3 per cent. There is no reason why our normal rate should not be increased from the present insignificant sum to at least 10 or 15 per cent.

2. Taxable income should be made, as in England, the family income. By separating the income of the husband from that of the wife, the government loses many of the advantages of the progressive scale. From the point of view of justice, the real income is the family income, or, at all events, the combined income of husband and wife.

Should Differentiate.

3. The principle of differentiation of taxation should be introduced. This, however, means not only the adoption of the British distinction between earned and unearned incomes, but the introduction of the still better distinction between unearned, partly earned, and wholly earned incomes. For, while some incomes are derived from capital funds and some from personal exertions, the great mass of business incomes are derived from a combination of the two and should be put in an intermediate category. Even if this is not accomplished, the present absurd system of taxing earned incomes at higher rate than unearned incomes should be abolished.

Like Tax for All.

4. The income concept should be applied not only to money but to money's worth. There is no reason why a man who owns his own house should go untaxed while the man who rents his residence should be taxed. There is no reason why the wealthy farmer who lives on his own produce should go untaxed while the man who buys his provisions should be taxed. There are many other applications of this principle.

5. Obvious defects in the law, such as the allocation of dividends to different years and the illogical treatment accorded to profits and losses should be remedied.

6. Above all, the law should be rewritten in terms of simplicity.

Three Billions on Profits.

In the case of the tax on profits, the yield of which can easily be brought to three billions, there is need of at least five reforms:

1. We have a tax on excess profits, but none on war profits. As between the two, the latter is clearly preferable. There may be a question as to the legitimacy of large profits in general; there can be no question as to the desirability of restricting to a minimum war profits, that is, profits due to the war. The minimum, of course, must be such as still to induce people to hazard their capital in war production. If we exceed this point we are cutting off our nose to spite our face; we are in danger of curtailing enterprise and thus reducing both social production and government revenue.

Present Law Faulty.

2. Even if we retain an excess profits tax the tax ought to be levied on profits and not, as in the present hybrid law, upon the percentage of profits to capital. The present law is open to criticism from almost every point of view. It is a temptation to overcapitalization; it is an extra burden upon business of moderate size and of quick turnover; it bears unequally on new concerns where capital is being built up by commanding ability. In short, it penalizes enterprise.

3. If it proves impossible to do away with capital as a basis of the tax, there is need of comprehensive revision of the definition of capital and of providing allowances for depreciation, obsolescence, and the like.

4. If the capital concept is persisted in injustice between individuals cannot be avoided without conferring upon the administrative authorities far more discretion than the present law affords.

5. The law should be entirely rewritten so as to secure the simplicity desired by all economists, accountants, and business men. A law which makes it impossible for the taxpayer to render his returns without employing lawyers and experts in itself offends against the first canon of taxation.

Urges Tax on Luxuries.

While the taxes on inheritances, incomes, and war profits would reach ability, a tax on luxuries is needed to curtail consumption. Such taxes on luxurious and harmful expenditure might take the form of either excises or direct expenditure taxes. They should be imposed not only upon jewelry and automobiles, as at present, but upon works of art (except possibly by living artists), upon household servants beyond a certain number, upon sporting goods, upon artistic furniture, upon expensive apparel of all kinds, and upon large outlays for food, especially in hotels and restaurants. In short, the tax should seek to hit the conspicuous waste of which our modern American civilization affords so lamentable an example.

Moreover, there is no reason why the progressive or graduated principle which is applied to income and inheritance taxes should not be extended to taxes on luxurious and wasteful consumption. If it did not check expenditure it would yield an immense revenue; if it yielded a small revenue it would restore the balance between social production and social consumption. In either case it would help us win the war.

ROOSEVELT ASKS FOR RETURN OF HIS NOBEL PRIZE

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Theodore Roosevelt today asked congress to return to him the Nobel peace prize fund, which he donated to assist in promoting industrial peace, and which has never been used. He said he proposed to expend it in war relief work through the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, Jewish war fund, and other relief organizations.

In a letter to Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts Col. Roosevelt recited the circumstances of the acceptance by congress of the $40,000 fund which he was awarded for promoting peace between Russia and Japan and the creation of a commission to administer it.

As nothing has been done with the money, which remains in the hands of the commission, he declared it should not be left like the unused talent described in scripture, but should be used in this crisis for the benefit of soldiers and their families.

The house of representatives tonight adopted without objection the resolution introduced by Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts providing that the fund be returned.

Screen Players Exempted from Work or Fight Order

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Moving picture players are classed as "legitimate theatrical performers" in an order announced today by Provost Marshal General Crowder and draft boards are directed to consider such players, musicians, and all skilled persons employed in creation and presentation of moving picture productions as engaged in productive employment.

Players, musicians, photographers, mechanics, and others necessary to productions will hold their present classifications under the draft law.

Bank clerks also have been exempted by Gen. Crowder from the operation of the work or fight regulations. This announcement was made tonight by the Federal Reserve board.

BABY BOY EARLY CUSTOMER.

When he arrived to open his place of business at 5 a. m. yesterday Michael Steinke, a saloonkeeper at 535 West Thirty-second street, found a blue eyed baby boy about 3 months old lying on a rear step. The infant, neatly dressed in a white coat and dress and a white silk bonnet, was taken to St. Vincent's Infant asylum.

CHICAGOANS TO OBSERVE "FRENCH FOURTH OF JULY"

Next Sunday, July 14, is the "French Fourth of July." It is the day of national freedom which the French observe, being the anniversary of the storming and taking of the Bastille. It will be observed in Chicago at St. James Episcopal church by an imposing ceremony.

There will be patriotic services and music, conducted by the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot, the curate, in the absence of the rector, the Rev. James S. Stone. There will also be a choir procession from the parish house adjacent, around the church, in which the French, British, Belgian, Italian and American flags will be carried by officers of each nation in uniform; and it is expected that the consuls of each of these nations will be present.

The American Friends of French Wounded, and other societies for allied relief, are expected to take a leading part in the ceremonies, and the address of the day will be delivered by the French consul, M. Barthelemy. The services will start at 10:45 in the morning. A special invitation is extended to Frenchmen resident in Chicago.

Woman Sues Realty Dealer for $75,000 Damages

Herman E. Sasse, a real estate dealer in Gary, Ind., is made the defendant in the præcipe of a suit for $75,000, said to be for breach of promise to wed, filed yesterday by Mrs. Anna McFerran of 1413 East Fifty-fifth street.

WOMAN DEAD IN GAS FILLED ROOM.

Mrs. Margaret Crownoiski, 51 years old, 1462 Elston avenue, was found in a gas filled room in her home yesterday. The police believe the death to be a suicide.

WILSON ORDERS SURVEY TO COVER AFTER WAR NEEDS

Executive Approval Given Suggestion of "The Tribune."

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special].—Problems of readjustment and reconstruction after the war are to be fully taken up at once, as suggested by THE TRIBUNE.

President Wilson has instructed the National Council of Defense to begin an exhaustive survey and study of the many ways in which the war has interrupted and changed the normal course of commercial and social life.

In a letter to Director Gifford the president has expressed his desire that the council make such an investigation, of gathering and studying the available data, and finally submitting a general plan which shall correlate all the scattered units of readjustment and reconstruction work which, at present, would come under the direction of the various executive departments of the government.

Facing Many Problems.

Here is a list of the problems to which the national council will immediately apply itself, as approved by President Wilson:

1. Demobilization of army and navy, including reabsorption of industrial war workers into peace industries.

It is not likely that our problem of demobilization of the army and navy will be as serious as the reabsorption of war workers into peace industries. The consideration of both of these problems involves study of possible national projects, such as flood control, water power, national highways, and public works, with a view to providing employment for labor pending its reabsorption into normal lines of activity.

2. Industrial readjustments to peace condition. Among these may be stated:

[a] Conversion of war industries to peace needs. [b] Restoration of industries curtailed by war. (The building industry is a case in point.) [c] Sale of government property. [d] Coöperation and regulation vs. competition.

The war has forced coöperation between strong competitors and it is unlikely that the same competition that existed before the war will exist after war. In the place of competition a program of coöperation and regulation will probably be necessary. This is a matter in which the federal trade commission will be particularly concerned.

[e] Trade organization.

During the war trade organization and the formation of war service committees by industries have been encouraged. The direction of the trend and activities of these organizations in peace times will have an important bearing on the industry of the country.

Foreign Trade and Tariff.

3. Industrial relations, labor and capital.

Formation of war labor boards and the more complete understanding between labor and capital brought by war conditions should undoubtedly be fostered after the war. Intimately associated with us is the question of labor standards.

4. Foreign trade problems.

These problems are closely associated with the question of continued export and import control, such as has been established by the war trade board and the encouragement of foreign trade which is now being studied by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce in the department of commerce.

5. Tariff.

The tariff problem may be affected greatly by the terms of peace. It demands study, particularly by the tariff commission.

6. Industrial and scientific research.

There can be no question of the advisability of the greatest possible progress along these lines. The bureau of standards and other government departments are working on research problems as well as the national research council, which is fostering and developing coöperation between governmental and civilian agencies.

Fuel and Railroads.

7. Fuel.

The after war relations of the government and the fuel industry undoubtedly present a problem. We have already seen that the productive capacity of our industries is closely bound up with the production and transportation of fuel.

8. Merchant marine.

After war shipbuilding and competition with other nations, including the question of rates which enable our merchant shipping to compete with other nations, will need study. The ultimate relation of the government to shipping matters will need to be considered.

9. Railroads.

The problem of increase of our transportation facilities in time of peace, the providing of the necessary funds for the railroads and the relations of the railroads and the government must be ultimately determined.

Alien Problems.

10. Americanization of alien.

We undoubtedly learned some lessons from our experience with the alien problem during war times. This experience may well be translated into action in time of peace.

11. Education.

Here again we have learned much during the war which may affect our policy in time of peace.

12. Government life insurance.

The men in our army and navy have practically all taken out government insurance and the question as to the continuance of some form of government insurance undoubtedly will demand consideration.

13. Finance.

14. State Councils of Defense.

The organization built up in each state at the request of the Council of National Defense may in some cases have affected the status of state government. Much information of interest and value undoubtedly can be obtained by a careful study of the state council activities.

As a matter of fact, the national council has already started the preliminary surveys in various parts of the country, and as a guide to the council in its new work its representatives will shortly go to Europe to study on the ground that machinery for transition from war to peace and for readjustment and reconstruction which has been set up in most of the warring countries.

Meanwhile small committees representing the various executive departments and small war commissions will be appointed to make surveys of the various readjustment problems which it is already plain will press for solution as soon as peace is declared.

There is no immediate prospect that a ministry or department of reconstruction will be established in Washington.

HERE'S ROMANCE

News of War Cross for Corporal Chase Reveals His Wedding.

Corp. and Mrs. Roy W. Chase

Yesterday's paper told of the awarding of the distinguished service cross to Corporal Roy W. Chase of the United States marines, who left for France in January with the Eightieth company, Sixth regiment. And this brought out a little romance which had been kept a seret.

On Sept. 1, 1917, Corporal Chase married Miss Loretta Prindiville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Prindiville of 127 North Lorel avenue, Austin. Corporal Chase was a general accountant for the Peoples Gas company, and his wife was in the general receiving department in the same company.

Corporal Chase is the only son of Joseph Chase of 2316 Sheffield avenue, formerly of Maywood. He was mentioned as capturing a machine gun under heavy fire in the Bois de Belleau on June 16. Mrs. Chase left yesterday for Washington, D. C., where she is to be an assistant business manager in the ordnance department.

JUDGE DODGES ISSUE ON NADINE BATHING SUIT

Hastily Refuses to Let Miss Jones Don Garment in Court.

Miss Nadine Jones of 823 Leland avenue may splash through the waves covered in part by a one piece bathing suit without fear of the law, as far as Municipal Judge Doyle is concerned.

Judge Doyle declined yesterday to pass upon the propriety of the bathing suit worn by Miss Jones and which she took into court. When the young woman asked permission to don the suit to convince the court that it was not of improper cut, Judge Doyle said:

"No, no—there's no place for you to change here. I am not passing upon the suit, but only upon the charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Policewoman Loucks."

"Well, can I continue to wear the suit?" asked Miss Jones.

"I'll not direct you as to that," said the jurist, "but if a police officer tells you not to wear it, you had better obey the officer's directions."

Policewoman in Doubt.

Policewoman Loucks, when questioned by the court as to her opinion of the suit, said:

"I don't know that I would call it indecent or improper. I arrested the young woman because she was impudent and created a disturbance on the beach."

"You ought to get married, and then you will be better able to appreciate life and understand these things," said Judge Doyle to Miss Jones.

Miss Jones, who said she had other plans in mind, repeated the statement that she had worn the bathing suit in question for three years without hearing adverse comment.

Overdressed at That.

"Really," she said, "I feel when I am wearing it that I am overdressed."

Policewoman Loucks complained to the court that Miss Jones had called her names.

"She said I was 'an old crank,' 'a cranky old maid,' and said, 'I'll go off the beach when I get good and ready,'" said the policewoman.

"Red Cross" Solicitors Free After Warning by U. S.

Mrs. John Thomas, Zion City; Miss Mildred Clark, Shanghai, and Mrs. N. A. Collins, Zion City, arrested by Oak Park police yesterday while trying to sell pictures of the Liberty bell made at Camp Dix, and who are said to have stated that the proceeds were to go to the Red Cross, were released on their own recognizances yesterday after being questioned and warned by Assistant District Attorney Elmer J. Whitty in the federal building.

HANDCUFFS HIS ONLY RAIMENT, ZALATORIS FLEES

Bank Clerk, Arrested with $31,000, Again at Large.

Without any clothes on him except a pair of shiny handcuffs, Tony Zalatoris, who in December hooked the State Bank of Chicago for $40,000, is wandering around somewhere in North Dakota. That is, he's in that fix unless he has found a clothes line, or a barrel, or something.

Thomas McFarland, detective sergeant, started from Hebron, N. D., where love's young dream got Tony captured, with Tony in his care. The authorities who pinched Tony had also recovered thirty-one $1,000 bills from him.

Sergeant McFarland took all of Tony's clothes away from him and put handcuffs on him and put him in a berth in a sleeping car. Then he watched the berth. Bye an' bye he looked in. No Tony. He'd even stolen the handcuffs!

Seized as Kidnaper.

Zalatoris, who, as a clerk and bookkeeper in the State Bank of Chicago, worked a game with one Charles Klamaus, and by doctoring an account secured $40,000, was arrested as a kidnaper while trying to elope with Miss Martha Walth, 17 year old daughter of Gottfried Walth, a farmer, near Hebron, N. D.

It appears that Zalatoris and Klamaus, after getting the money, drove overland in an automobile until they neared Hebron. There they broke down and pending the fixing Zalatoris set eyes on the beautiful Martha. Then he didn't care if the car never got fixed. In fact, with nearly $40,000 in his pocket, he gave Walth the car, and the farmer, as recompense, let him stick around for a long time.

He proposed marriage, but Farmer Walth, in spite of the car, refused to part with the daughter. So Tony dispatched Klamaus to San Francisco, there to arrange transportation for himself and the fair Martha to South America.

Assistant Arrested.

Klamaus was arrested during the negotiations and $4,000 recovered from him. In the course of his elopement with Martha the romantic Tony had got as far as Glendive, N. D., when he was arrested. He and the girl were registered as Mr. and Mrs. Alex Palmer, Chicago.

After his arrest his description and the story of the $31,000 in $1,000 bills was wired to Chicago police and he was quickly identified as Tony. Faced with his own identity, he admitted the fact.

Capitain Studies Chicago's $25,000,000 Traction Fund

Ald. H. D. Capitain, chairman of the city council committee on local transportation, asked City Controller Pike yesterday for a statement of the condition of the city's $25,000,000 traction fund. If the proposed legislation for unification of the surface and elevated lines and a subway system is approved by the voters, the fund is to be used for the constructionof cityowned subways.

RAID BY POLICE CHECK TO FREE SUNDAY DINNERS

Bountiful Sunday dinners for many families in the vicinity of the Fourteenth street yards of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad were spoiled by the police early yesterday when in a raid they captured thirty-seven persons, the majority of them women and children, who were "loading up" from cars in transit.

Dozens of baskets filled with ice, fruits, and vegetables were in process of loading when the police made the raid and carted the victims to the South Clark street station. Only one man, Tony Ambrose, 1002 South State street, 69 years old, was in the assemblage.

Twenty-one children were released when called for by members of their families and will appear tomorrow in the Juvenile court. The grown members of the party gave $25 cash bail each for their appearance tomorrow on charges of disorderly conduct.

Boy Husband Sues Wife of 37 for a Divorce

Divorce courts frequently disclose the tragedy of the girl wife and the cruel elderly husband. Yesterday the tables were reversed when Edward Engler Jr., 19 years old and married two years, filed a bill in the Circuit court asking his freedom from Mrs. Anna Engler, 37 years old, whom he charged with "cruel, unkind, and inhuman treatment."

The wife turned him out of the house in June, 1916, he avers, and forbade his ever returning. The 19 year old husband met his wife, who was a widow, through her daughter of 12 and son of 10, with whom he played. Then he fell in love with the mother and married her to keep the family together. Now there is a third child. Mrs. Engler lives at 6446 South Carpenter street.

Judge Foell granted a divorce decree to Mrs. Alice M. Burns and $75 a month alimony. Her former husband is Raymond T. Burns, son of William J. Burns, the detective.

5 MEN EXAMINED REGARDING DEATH OF SALOONKEEPER

Five men held at the Thirty-fifth street station were questioned by Capt. Michael Gallery in connection with the suspected murder of John Doherty, a saloonkeeper of 2815 Shields avenue. The names of the men were withheld.

A post-mortem examination of the body of Doberty by Coroner's Physician James Simon revealed a fracture of the skull was the cause of death.

On Friday Doherty walked into the caloon, according to witnesses, and dropped dead. The first opinion was that he had died of heart disease.

Save Sugar—Save Flour
Yet Serve Luscious Fruit Desserts

Facts to Know

In these times every housewife should know Jiffy-Jell. It means rich, fruity desserts, instantly made, without the addition of sugar.

It means supreme desserts, without the use of flour or sugar, at half the cost of pastry.

It means a way to serve fresh fruit, mixed in jell, to save many ounces of sugar.

It means zestful salads made with vegetable left-overs, and jellied meat loaves made with scraps. All delightful products.

Sugar is needed now for canning. Your supply is restricted. Wastes must be utilized, flour must be conserved. So we make these offers to let every woman see how Jiffy-Jell can serve her.

We urge you, for your own sake, to learn how folks enjoy it.

Jiffy-Jell
For Quick, Fruity Desserts and Salads
Fruit-Juice Flavors Sealed in Glass
No Sugar Need Be Added

Economical Desserts
Salads From Left-Overs
Meat or Chicken Scraps in Aspic Jelly

Jiffy-Jell is the only product which serves these uses well. It is the only gelatine dainty with true-fruit flavors, highly concentrated, sealed in glass vials.

These bottled flavors do not lose their freshness. They give to Jiffy-Jell a wealth of fresh-fruit taste. Thus Jiffy-Jell desserts and salads taste like fruit-made dainties.

You make Jiffy-Jell by simply adding boiling water, then the flavor from the vial. One package makes dessert for six. If you whip the jell it serves twelve.

To serve fresh fruit, preserved fruit or pastry for six requires 8 to 12 ounces of sugar. Pastry requires flour in addition. The average cost is at least twice the cost of Jiffy-Jell.

Or you can mix fresh fruit in Jiffy-Jell, without adding sugar, and have a double-fruit dessert.

With Lime or Mint Jiffy-Jell you can make delicious salads, zestful and green. Use left-overs in cooked vegetables. Or use fresh vegetables.

Mix in meat scraps with these flavors and you have a jellied meat loaf. This is a delightful way to save waste.

Millions now use Jiffy-Jell as a conservation dainty. They get fruity desserts and salads of the finest sort, at trifling cost, without using sugar or flour.

We want you to know what it means to you. See how it differs from old-style gelatine products. Buy two packages to try, then send us the coupon, and we will send you molds worth more than you pay for Jiffy-Jell.

Accept this offer, for it means a test at really no cost at all.

PETITIONS SENT BY MAIL TO BE TAKEN UP FIRST

Rules for Filing Given Out by Both Emmerson and Sweitzer.

Primary petitions forwarded to Springfield by mail will be the first to be handled and filed by Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson. The petitions having preference will be those that will be delivered next Saturday morning about 8:30 with the first mail from the Springfield postoffice.

This announcement was made yesterday by Mr. Emmerson, who was in Chicago. Registered letters and special deliveries, carrying petitions, Mr. Emmerson said, will be handled after the regular morning mail has been worked."

Same Rule for Sweitzer.

The same rule, according to a statement made by County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, will be followed in receiving petitions for county and sanitary district offices, which are to be filed also next Saturday.

"I have directed that the regular mail received on the morning of filing day, Saturday, July 13, shall be the first to be handled by the clerks who are to be in charge of the receiving of petitions for state, congressional, and legislative offices," Mr. Emmerson said. "This mail will have precedence over petitions that may be filed in person and handed over the counter, or that are sent by special delivery or registered mail. My assistant secretary of state, A. C. Millspaugh, is to be in direct supervision of the petitions. We will have enough clerks at work so that as little delay as possible will obtain in listing the petitions in their proper order and announcing the list to the general public."

State Candidates Rotate.

Under the amended primary law the names of candidates for United States senator and for state offices will rotate on the ballot, by senatorial districts, so that there is no advantage to a candidate for one of these offices to file first to obtain "first place," on the ticket. Expert politicians in Chicago figure that the first place on the Republican or Democratic county primary ballot is worth automatically between 18,000 and 25,000 votes to the candidate who gets in first under the wire.

Candidates for United States senator, for state treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, and for congress and for state senators and representatives file their petitions with the secretary of state. Candidates for county offices and for sanitary district trustees file their petitions with the county clerk. Petitions for judges and clerk and bailiff of the Municipal court of Chicago are not filed until thirty days later, with the city clerk.

Despite the rule laid down by Secretary of State Emmerson, the indications are that there will be the usual rush of legislative candidates to Springfield to make assurance doubly sure that their petitions are properly received and filed.

"WIN THE WAR," G. O. P. CRY IN POLL CONTEST

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—The Republican party is girding itself for a mighty effort to elect a congress next fall which will end all hesitation and pacifistic pussyfooting in legislation and insure a more vigorous and efficient prosecution of the war to early triumph over the Hun.

A "victory congress" is what the country sorely needs, in the opinion of Republican leaders who were engaged this week in a series of conferences with Will H. Hays, Republican national chairman, on the plans of the congressional campaign.

Want Helpful Men.

Mr. Hays and his associates call for the nomination and election of Republican candidates of the stamp of those Republican representatives and senators who have been the mainstay and reliance of President Wilson in putting through legislation vital to the effective prosecution of the war.

The Republican party hopes to defeat for reëlection, except in the solid south, every Democratic senator and representative who has sought to thwart important war legislation, and it does not purpose to ask the reëlection of the handful of Republican legislators who aided and abetted the pacifist Democrats in that effort.

Will Prevent Delays.

If the people sustain the war program which the Republican party presents to the voters of the country there will be no repetition in the next congress of the delays in getting the war machinery going which resulted from the disaffection of a large proportion of the Democratic majority in the house of representatives.

This disaffection, the evils of which are still apparent, was so serious that in the passage of the selective draft law the administration was compelled to call upon Representative Kahn, ranking Republican member of the committee on military affairs, to assume the leadership which Chairman Dent and other Democratic members of the committee declined or were not invited to accept because of opposition to provisions of the bill.

Republicans Carry Draft.

There was no more illuminating evidence of the weakness of the Democratic majority in supporting vital war legislation than the vote on the selective draft, which showed that it would have been lost had it not been for Republican votes and leadership.

"The fact that the party in power refused to prepare for war in 1914, '15, and '16 has not lessened the support of all war measures in congress of Republicans who so strongly urged a better previous preparation," said Mr. Hays today. "Republicans in this and the last congress have given their votes, and often the deciding votes, for the grant of every power and all the money demanded by the administration. In like manner shall every Republican congressman elected this fall support every war measure. We shall continue in the future as we have in the past. We shall be forever there to press forward, to 'carry on.'

Demand American Victory.

"The Republican party will use every atom of strength, political and otherwise, that it can muster to prevent any peace that is not based on a definite and conclusive American victory in the war.

"The Republican party will win. The next congress will be Republican. That will not lessen, but will heighten the prosecution of the war.

"We will continue in the same way to give, to strive, to fight, and to die, until victorious American arms have forever ended the intolerable arrogance of a scientifically trained brutality, and we have a conclusive peace with victory. To all of this we wholly pledge ourselves."

Republicans' Program.

In response to a request for a statement of the Republican program Mr. Hays said:

"The Republican program is very simple. It can all be placed under three general heads:

"1. Win the war and win it now.

"2. Let us have peace, but peace only with victory.

"3. Let us begin instantly a broad, careful preparation for after the war.

"We are as little prepared for peace today as we were for war eighteen months ago. Let us be forwarned. Preparation—preparation, first for war to the hilt, and then, just as adequately, for a victorious peace.

"This is not the war of any political party. It is the people's war, the war of the American nation, and we appeal to every patriot, whatever his politics, to aid us in keeping partisan politics out of the war management.

Republican War Party.

"And Republican success will aid the progress of the war, for we demand an even more vigorous prosecution of it than do the Democrats. The Republican party is a war party, has always been a war party. It remains today even more a war party than does the Democratic. The Republican party was born in the civil war, which it prosecuted to a glorious conclusion. It stood sponsor for and triumphed again in the Spanish war. It stands today as sturdily America and as stanchly militant in the world war."

"What do you say to the president's dictum that 'politics is adjourned'?" the chairman was asked.

"The administration has made its own answer," he replied. "It has gone more heavily into politics than ever. Witness Wisconsin and now Michigan. It is striving, wherever possible, to make the issue of loyalty one between Democrats and Republicans. To this we heartily and determinedly dissent.

War Is Only Issue.

"Our candidates will be of such a character that a Republican victory this fall will mean primarily and essentially one thing only—an ever increasingly vigorous prosecution of the war. Every Republican vote cast is another nail in the kaiser's coffin; every Republican congressman elected is another stone piled on his tomb. I want the November elections to be a bombardment that will shake Berlin better than any grand battery of seventy-five mile guns.

"Our coming political activity is not to be lessened. On the contrary, what we want in this country is not 'less politics' but more attention to politics. I have no use for the man who is too busy or too good to take a part in the active politics of his community.

War Also at Polls.

"We are fighting to make certain the right of individuals to govern themselves. Let us exercise that right here, where we have it. Our institutions must triumph at the polls, as well as on the battlefield. This is just as essential at the November elections here as it is on the French battlefields. One goes with the other.

"The man who is too busy to take a part in politics has no just complaint to make, whatever may happen; he is riding on another's ticket. We are freemen, not Prussian slaves. In the ballot centers everything we hold dear. If we want better candidates and, consequently, better government, we can have them, but never if we are 'not interested' in politics. Abraham Lincoln was reasonably well thought of, and from the day of his majority until his death he was never 'too busy' or 'too good' to take part in politics. If we get men and women of character unselfishly interested in politics the consequent good government is certain."

BARNUM, BAILEY CIRCUS TO OPEN HERE ON FRIDAY

The circus is one of the luxuries that the country will not have to forego on account of the war. Early in the season it was feared that Barnum & Bailey's circus might have to abandon the giving of the "big show" on account of the lack of transportation facilities due to war conditions, but Director General of Railroads McAdoo has assured the management that the movement of troops and munitions will not interfere with the movement of elephants, camels, lions, tigers, horses, and all the other things that go to make up a circus.

So the Barnum & Bailey record of more than half a century of circus giving will remain unbroken and the great canvas tents will be established at the White City circus grounds next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. There will be a street parade on Saturday morning.

Below and aloft, declared the press agent, the new production scorns all comparisons and breaks all records of the past.

The circus opened at Madison Square garden on March 25.

Century Plant Blooms, Exciting Hinsdale Folk

Folk out Hinsdale way are wondering if there is any peculiar significance in an occurrence at their cemetery. Twenty-five years ago at the world's fair the late Gabriel K. Wright bought six century plants and planted them in the Hinsdale cemetery. There they stood for a quarter of a century, growing and flourishing, but with no sign of blooming. But yesterday one of them bloomed. It gave evidence of its intention several days ago. Last Sunday it had reached the measured height of twenty feet—far higher than ordinary. Yesterday its height was estimated at not less than thirty feet; it was surmounted by a delicate pink flower, which gave forth an odor as of tulips, and it attracted village wide attention.

Quarantine of McAddams' Home Approved by City

Health Commissioner Robertson declared yesterday that an investigation had shown nothing irregular in the quarantining of the home of Mrs. Grace McAddams, wife of Maj. John McAddams, of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, formerly the First Illinois.

A 5 year old son of the McAddams died several days ago. The cause of death was given as Bright's disease. The same day a nurse, Ruth Melgaard, was stricken with diphtheria. The McAddams' home has been quarantined since.

Dr. Robertson said it was customary to remove the quarantine after ten days.

Boulevard Link Wreckers Go on Strike for Increase

Wreckers employed on the Michigan avenue boulevard link project have gone on a strike for an increase of 10 cents an hour in their pay.

M. J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, is working with the men and the contractors in an effort to settle the trouble, so there will not be any further delay in tearing down and moving the buildings in the way of the improvement.

The wreckers are paid by the contractors, and not the city, but Mr. Faherty said he had interested himself because of the delay in the work.

POLICEMAN'S WIFE SUICIDE.

Standing in front of a mirror in her home yesterday, Mrs. Nellie Fitzsimmons, 5324 Lowe avenue, ended her life by shooting herself with a revolver. The bullet pierced her heart. Mrs. Fitzsimmons was the wife of Michael Fitzsimmons, a policeman at the stockyards station.

Clabaugh Aid Puts One Over on U. S. Secret Service

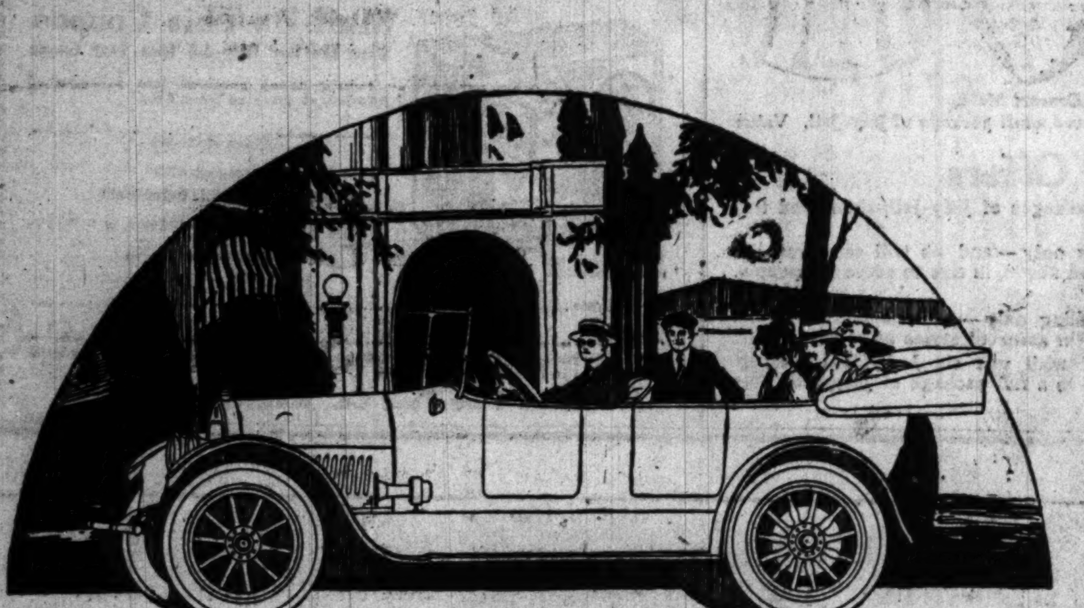
There is a romance in the office of Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief investigator of the department of justice here. "It concerns his assistant, Philip James Barry, who for years has been connected with the department. Mr. Barry, better known as "Phil," is back at work after an absence of ten days. He has been secretive about the absence, but it has become known that it was caused by a honeymoon trip, as on June 24 last he took unto himself to wife Miss Emily Elizabeth Meyer. The wedding ceremony was performed at St. Mary's of the Lake church.

Citizens Sign Petition to Rename Goethe Street

Long suffering street car conductors who have rassled with the pronunciation of "Goethe street" soon are to be relieved, if a petition now being circulated accomplishes its purpose. The city council will be asked to change the name of the street to something "less offensive to patriots." The petition was started by Dr. Eugene S. Talbot of 9 East Goethe street. Dr. D. U. Cameron of 23 East Goethe street is another signer.

Three Year Old Girl Found on Oakley Avenue

Say, you Mr. and Mrs. Somebody, who caught only a few winks last night, that cute little 3½ year kiddie you lost yesterday afternoon is at the home of John P. Golombiewski, who lives at 2653 West Forty-seventh street, and who found her wandering around crying at Forty-seventh street and Oakley avenue.



Buy Cadillac Endurance Today

The war will shortly prove a test of motor cars as well as men. The car that will last longest is the only safe purchase from now on.

Good repair men are difficult to secure. Repair parts for many cars are almost unobtainable. Even steel to make them of, in some cases, has been refused.

So with greater need than usual for a family car, the heedless man may easily find his transportation cut off by a car which cannot be repaired.

The Cadillac of today is the staunchest, most enduring, practically repair-free car in the world; and its price, considering conditions, makes it a greater bargain than ever.

Also your used car will today pay a larger part of the purchase price than at any future time. Get your Cadillac now.

THREE COMPLETE COUNTY SLATES NOW MADE UP

G. O. P. Regulars, Democratic Regulars, and Deneen Men End Job.

Three complete county slates were hammered together yesterday for the September primaries. The Republican regulars, represented by the majority of the county committee, led by Attorney General Brundage, made their slate public. The Deneen Republicans practically completed their primary selections. The Democratic regulars, following the leadership of Roger C. Sullivan, constructed the Democratic organization ticket.

Democratic harmony slipped at the last minute and broke its neck when State's Attorney Hoyne failed to accept the chief justiceship on the regular slate for Michael F. Sullivan. Indications are that a full anti-Sullivan ticket will be named tomorrow.

The Deneen Republican plans had to be switched last night, when Isaac N. Powell finally was forced to decline the slate place for county treasurer. The indorsement of the Deneen wing went to former Judge Edwin K. Walker of the Seventh ward.

One of the high lights of the busiest "real" days of the political season in Chicago was the indorsement for United States senator by the Sullivan regulars of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, coupled with the indorsement of the four Democratic congressmen from Chicago, Rainey, Sabath, McAndrews, and Gallagher.

THE REPUBLICAN REGULARS

The ticket of the majority of the Republican county committee, as represented by the Bruntage-Galpin-Weber leadership, was announced from headquarters in the Otis building yesterday at noon.

As had been the forecast earlier in the week, former Alderman Bernard W. Snow of the Seventh ward becomes the candidate for county treasurer. Former Municipal Court Judge Henry C. Beitler of the Twenty-fifth ward is the organization choice for sheriff. Edwin A. Olson, a close political and personal friend of Attorney General Brundage, is slated for county judge. The slate place for judge of the Probate court is assigned to State Representative Frederick R. De Young of Harvey, who has been one of the recognized leaders of the lower house at Springfield.

One of the new names that had not been suggested in earlier slate gossip was that of William McLaren of the Eighth ward, for president of the county board. Mr. McLaren was superintendent of public service during the administrations of Presidents Hanberg, Foreman, Brundage, and Busse. William R. Parker, former alderman of the Sixth ward, now a member of the Board of Trade, was slated for clerk of the Criminal court, another name that had not been mentioned in the winter book.

THE DENEEN REPUBLICANS

Isaac N. Powell, who had been slated unanimously Friday night by the Deneen Republicans for county treasurer, announced late yesterday afternoon that business reasons estopped his candidacy. His declination, after the slate was practically completed, caused the slatemakers to start afresh with their work.

There were several shifts which finally lead to the slating of Edwin K. Walker of the Seventh ward for treasurer, Judge Charles N. Goodnow of the same ward for president of the county board, and Ninian H. Welch of the Thirteenth ward for judge of the Probate court.

Joseph H. Macauley of Berwyn was slated for clerk of the Criminal court, and former Ald. James A. Kearns of the Thirty-first ward, who had been slated originally for that office, was listed for clerk of the Municipal court.

The Deneen forces took no action with respect to the United States senatorship or to state, congressional, or legislative offices, and the word went out that the purpose is to confine the business of the campaign solely to the nomination and election of county candidates.

THE DEMOCRATIC REGULARS

The Sullivan organization Democrats waited for an hour for a definite reply from State's Attorney Hoyne, concerning the peace proposal that had been discussed all of Friday night, based upon the slating by the regulars of Assistant State's Attorney Michael F. Sullivan for chief justice of the Municipal court. State's Attorney Hoyne had been in consultation with a representative of the regulars at noon, and something final was expected from him at 2 o'clock. At 3 o'clock the slatemaking proceeded on the theory that the harmony proposition was all off.

Municipal Court Judge Hugh J. Kearns was slated for chief justice and nothing more was heard from the Morrison hotel headquarters of the anti-Sullivan Democrats, so far as the regulars were concerned.

Backed up by an opinion from Alfred Austrian and Attorney E. D. Adcock of the sanitary district board, the regulars named a candidate for president of the sanitary district on the proposition that President Charles H. Sergel was elected for a two year term and that his time is about to expire. County Chairman James M. Dailey was slated for this office. Dennis J. Egan was then slated for bailiff of the Municipal court, which had been given to Mr. Dailey Friday night, and Frank X. Rydzewski was slated for clerk of the Municipal court, while James M. Whalen was named for clerk of the Criminal court.

By a resolution introduced by Thomas Carey, who made his formal reappearance as an organization man, Senator Lewis and the four sitting Democratic congressmen from Chicago were indorsed.

THE ANTI-SULLIVAN DEMOCRATS

The leaders in the movement to name a complete slate against the regular organization ticket were in conference most of the day at their Hotel Morrison headquarters. The expressed feeling last night was that the anti-Sullivan slate will be agreed upon tomorrow. There was renewed talk that former Gov. Dunne may be slated for county judge, while pressure is to be exerted, it is said, upon former Mayor Harrison to become a candidate for county treasurer.

LEADERS ADVISE UNITING VOTES ON M'CORMICK

Senator Dailey, Gen. Smith Deplore Foss Candidacy.

Two downstate Republican leaders yesterday warned Republicans of the necessity of concentrating the loyal vote of the state behind the candidacy for the United States senate of Medill McCormick.

They are State Senator John Dailey of Peoria, who successfully managed the recent campaign of Supreme Court Justice Stone in the Peoria-Galesburg district, and Gen. James B. Smith of Clay county, a veteran Republican of southern Illinois.

Senator Dailey's Letter.

Senator Dailey's letter to Senator Clarence F. Buck, Mr. McCormick's campaign manager, said:

"Before Congressman Foss became a candidate for United States senator, I was most emphatically in favor of the nomination of Congressman Medill McCormick. I regard the candidacy of Mr. Foss as a serious mistake of judgment on his part, which renders support of Mr. McCormick now more imperative than ever.

"No one disputes the right of any Republican to contend for this nomination. There are times when a multiplicity of candidates for office might be advisable, but under present conditions, as affects this office, there is grave danger that numerous candidates may prove disastrous alike to our party and the national welfare. The issue in this campaign was clearly defined before Mr. Foss became a candidate—viz.: unswerving loyalty to our country and most vigorous prosecution of the war, as opposed to an ill advised, unworthy policy, strongly attractive to and supported by sinister and disloyal elements.

"Mr. McCormick has been the unquestioned leader in this contest for many months. Loyal men throughout the state have aligned themselves with him and have willingly pledged themselves in honor to his support."

Letter of Gen. Smith.

Gen. Smith's letter said:

"I heartily concur in support of Medill McCormick for United States senator.

"Mr. McCormick's information on the requirements of our soldiers in Europe has been acquired on the battlefield. His acquaintance with public men and his knowledge of world politics have been acquired in every capital in Europe, in Mexico, China, and Japan.

"The momentous problems of peace at the close of the present world-wide conflict will be no less grave than are the problems of war now.

"No man in the state is better equipped to solve those world-wide problems during the continuance of and after the war than Mr. McCormick."

Field Day to Benefit St. Vincent Orphans

Helpless orphan babies will be beneficiaries of a field day entertainment to be held in the White Sox ball park under the auspices of St. Vincent's Infant asylum next Sunday afternoon, according to announcement yesterday of Sister Raphael of the asylum.

M'CORMICK WILL PASS WEEK IN 19TH DISTRICT

This week will be one of the busiest of the entire campaign for Congressman Medill McCormick, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator.

He will spend three days in the Nineteenth district, represented in Washington by Congressman William B. McKinley. Recently the congressional campaign committee of this district indorsed Mr. McCormick's candidacy for the senatorial nomination and shortly thereafter Mr. McKinley added a personal indorsement.

This afternoon Mr. McCormick will speak at the Gibson City chautauqua. From Gibson City he will motor to Champaign, where he will spend the night. Leaving Champaign early tomorrow morning, he will visit Savoy, Tolono, and Pesotum for brief stops, speak at Tuscola at midday, and go from there to Arcola, from which place he will journey on to Mattoon, where he will speak at 5 o'clock. He will close the day with a speech at Charleston at night.

On Tuesday Mr. McCormick will visit Sullivan, Bement, and Monticello. On Wednesday he will make Farmer City, Weldon, De Witt, Clinton, Maroa, and finish the day with a speech at Decatur. On Thursday he will visit Beardsdale and Mount Pulaski in the morning and end his trip with a noonday meeting at Lincoln.

SELDEN TRUCKS
Will Help Win the War

NOW is the time when all industries MUST aid the Government in every way possible TO WIN THE WAR—NOW when the ranks of labor have been thinned by the drafting of man power into military service—NOW when the freight terminals are congested with thousands of freight cars standing on the tracks waiting to be unloaded so their cargoes may be taken away and delivered.

To move this congested freight away from the terminals is the problem that confronts us today.

But man power is scarce.

Release the excess labor employed in your business. Employ motor trucks to do the same work with fewer men—to move your freight away from the terminals as fast as it arrives and to make your deliveries—in less time—with greater satisfaction to your customers—at a lower cost and, therefore, with greater profit to you. Relieve the railroads from short hauls up to 50 or 100 miles or more. Give them a chance to handle the long hauls on schedule time.

Install big, powerful SELDEN TRUCKS to do the job. They will bear the heavy burdens of war-time congestion without strain and continue to render profitable service for years AFTER WE WIN THE WAR.

Massive construction—colossal strength—gigantic motive power—abundant speed in operation—proven power of endurance, with sufficient energy in reserve—these "In-Built Qualities" of SELDEN TRUCKS give them the vitality to work under high pressure indefinitely without weakening.

There are Six Worm and Internal Drive models of One to Five Ton capacity in the Selden Line. Put your haulage problems up to our transportation expert.

MEAT RATIONS FOR HOMES MAY BE ESTABLISHED

Wheeler Warns Public Too Much Beef Is Being Consumed.

A stringent meat rationing plan that will apply to homes as well as to hotels and restaurants is likely to be adopted by the United States food administration in the near future unless the consumption of beef is greatly reduced.

This warning was given out yesterday by Harry A. Wheeler, federal food administrator for Illinois. Mr. Wheeler said that the present consumption of beef is altogether too heavy, and that it does not seem fair for the entire burden of conservation to be placed on public eating places when the homes are in reality the heaviest users.

Based on Soldiers' Needs.

"The restrictions in the use of food in this country are based on the needs of the men who are in France," said Mr. Wheeler yesterday. "The United States forces have been sent across the Atlantic at such a remarkable rate that we have had to modify our original plans. There are now twice as many men on the other side as we thought could be sent up to this time, and by January there will be three times as many as the original estimate called for. This will mean that we will have to feed from 750,000 to 1,250,000 more men on and near the firing line than we had figured on taking care of—and they all have big appetites.

"If the general public will voluntarily cut down in its consumption of beef it will not be necessary for us to take action, but if the use of meat goes on at the present rate it is probable that we will have to limit the amount that retailers can sell to their customers. We have already adopted similar plans with reference to sugar and flour.

Sugar Question Serious.

"The sugar question is the most serious problem that is now confronting us. The consumption of sugar will have to be kept at the minimum for some time. The flour situation has improved to such an extent that we are considering the advisability of closing up our flour department."

The present meat regulations call for three beefless days a week. Mr. Wheeler said it is possible this plan may be modified so as to permit beef to be served in some form at one meal every day.

About thirty large concerns that manufacture candy and other products in which sugar is used are said to have been forced to close as a result of restrictions imposed by the food administration. Large amounts of sugar have been used by makers of ink, glue, leather, and many other products.

NEW BREAD LAW, PLAN.

City Sealer Eller is preparing an ordinance to fix the weight of each loaf of bread sold. His ordinance provides a leeway of only one ounce per pound, which is in accordance with government regulations. The present ordinance for loaves of one pound provides they may weigh anywhere from twelve to twenty ounces.

Betterment of Industrial Conditions During War Discussed at Conference.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis., July 6.—[Special.]—If both employer and employé would deal with each other according to the Christian principles of the Master the labor problem would be solved.

This was the belief expressed at the concluding session of a two day conference on "Human Relation and Betterment in Industry and Transportation During the War," conducted under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Representatives of large manufacturing interests agreed that such a policy would dissipate the cloud of misunderstanding between capital and labor.

Fred C. Butler of the United States ordnance department at Washington outlined some of the government plans to improve plant and community conditions.

"When we can't get coal for our homes," he said, "we become interested in the conditions surrounding coal mines. It is time we did something about evil conditions in all cities and in all industries—for bad conditions will inevitably prevent efficient war production."

The Y. M. C. A. is endeavoring to enlarge its great program of service to industrial workers and to put it on a basis comparable to its service for enlisted men. A call was today sounded for 500 new industrial secretaries by the Y. M. C. A. for this year. To help train these men a special course will be given at the association college in Chicago beginning Sept. 3. President Frank H. Burt will be at the head of the special course.

FOOD PRICES IN UPWARD GLIDE, FRUITS PLENTIFUL

Prices on a number of food commodities took another jump upward yesterday with the full consent of the federal food administration. Some of the price raises quoted to the consumer are:

White flour, ⅛ bbl., in cotton bags, $1.50 to $1.65 a bag; in paper, ⅛ bbl., $1.44 to $1.59 a bag; corn meal, 5 cents to 6¾ cents a pound; rice flour, 10¼ to 14½ cents a pound; rice, blue rose, 10 to 14 cents; fancy head, 11 to 15½ cents; potatoes, No. 1 new, 33 to 36 cents a ten pound sack; 49 to 54 cents a peck; lard, best kettle rendered, in carton, 30 to 35½c; in bulk, 29¼ to 35 cents a pound; standard pure, in bulk, 28½ to 33½ cents.

Peaches were lower yesterday with increased supplies on the market. The bulletin showing what to buy and what not to buy reports receipts as follows:

Abundant: Peaches, raspberries, tomatoes, carrots, beets, radishes, cantaloupes.

Normal: Watermelons, cherries, gooseberries, celery [Mich.], beans, spinach.

Scarce: Currants, plums, pineapples, strawberries, lemons, oranges, peas.

Alcock Transfers 100 in New Police Order

Transfers of one hundred police officers are made in an order issued yesterday by Acting Chief of Police John H. Alcock. The order affects six desk sergeants, fourteen detective sergeants and eighty patrolmen.

HOUSEWIVES ON CONSERVATION WEEK TOMORROW

Parade Will Start with Jackie Band of 50 Pieces.

"I, John, take thee, Mary, to be my wheatless housewife, to save and conserve from this day forth, for corn muffins and rye, for beefless and porkless, forsaking all starchy foods."

The foregoing is a suggestion from the food experts for a modern war wedding service.

This week is to be conservation drive week and will start tomorrow with a great parade of housewives and moveable kitchens, which will tour the city. The parade, led by a jackie band of sixty pieces, will start from the food conservation station at 28 South Wabash avenue, and will proceed to Michigan avenue, then to Jackson boulevard, then through the loop, winding up at State and Madison streets, where a member of the food administration will speak from a truck.

Kitchen on Trucks.

The kitchens, built in those trucks, will be fully equipped with chefs and domestic science experts, who will demonstrate during the progress of the parade. The foods demonstrated will be practical dishes, showing particularly the use of wheat substitutes. Recipes and government pamphlets will be distributed during the parade.

Nearly every housewife in the Twenty-first ward group, which comprises Mrs. Charles Monroe's committee, has agreed to march in the housewives' parade with banners and slogans showing the need for food conservation and pointing the way to the food bureau, where information about it can be obtained.

When the truck kitchens have covered the loop they will proceed to the outlying districts. One is to be sent to the Hull House neighborhood and another to Eli Bates Settlement.

Speakers Before Aliens.

During the week speakers will address foreign born groups in their own languages throughout Chicago and the lessons of the food administration will be taught by the Four Minute men.

One feature of the week's program at the demonstration station at 28 South Wabash avenue will be a talk by Miss Elizabeth Wallace of the University of Chicago, who has just returned from war relief work in France, who will speak at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon on "Food and Morale." Harry Wheeler, still acting as food administrator of Illinois, will speak some time during the week and Dean H. E. Van Norman of the University of California will be the speaker Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Charles A. Munroe is in charge of the program for the week.

WOMAN CRUSHED BY WAGON.

Miss Julia O'Connell, 30 years old, 4539 Park avenue, a seamstress, sustained a fracture of one leg yesterday afternoon when she was caught between a Harrison street car and a wagon owned by Gage Brothers & Co., 18 South Michigan avenue.

CATHOLIC FUND GROWS $43,331; NOW IS $266,946

20 Parishes Report Gifts Amounting to $27,757.

Contributions amounting to $43,331.50 were made during the week to the Associated Catholic Charities, according to the report of the treasurer made public last night. These contributions swell the total sum collected up to date to $266,946.50, or more than one-quarter of the $1,000,000 called for by Archbishop Mundelein.

Of the total amount collected during the week, $27,757.30 comes from twenty parishes of the archdiocese, an average of more than $1,000 a parish. More than nine-tenths of the parishes are still to be heard from.

St. Mary's Leads.

St. Mary's parish, in charge of the Paulist fathers, leads with a total of $6,326.50. This is one of the two downtown parishes of the archdiocese. Corpus Christi, in the neighborhood of the entrance to Washington park, is second with a contribution of $3,820.

Individual contributions of $8,025 are listed, the largest being one of $5,000 by Mrs. John Cudahy, seconded by $1,000 by Thomas Burns. Miscellaneous contributions of $7,549.20 are also reported.

Camp Sparta Band Busy with Many Entertainments

Sparta, Wis., July 6.—[Special.]—The band of the Three Hundred and Thirty-first field artillery at Camp Robinson has been the busiest organization at the camp this week. Besides playing for two performance of "America Awake" at the armory in Sparta and the Fourth of July dance, they will give a concert on the courthouse lawn Sunday afternoon. Mr. Laurier has worked up a fine program.

FIGHTING PRIEST OF BLACKHAWKS TO WIELD RIFLE

All Noncombatants to Be Prepared for Hun Attacks.

Camp Grant, Ill., July 6.—[Special.]—Men in non-combatant units of the Chicago infantry brigade will be prepared to shoot with the same deadly accuracy of line riflemen when the division goes into action on the western front. Orders prepared today by Col. C. R. Howland, commanding the Three Hundred and Forty-third infantry, call for a full schedule of firing by all special duty men, members of the regimental band and of the regimental infirmary.

Stretcher bearers of the Chicago unit do not intend to turn the other cheek when Prussian frightfulness begins its attack upon the American forces placed in the front lines to give aid and comfort to wounded soldiers. When they complete the special course of fire on the range prescribed by their commander every man of the hospital unit, every orderly and clerk, will be qualified to handle an Enfield, a service pistol or an automatic rifle in time of need.

Priest to Wield Rifle.

Chaplain J. M. Lonergan, "the fighting priest," intends to shoot round for round with line officers and men on Monday and Tuesday.

"It is not probable that I will be ordered to shoot when we get over there," he said today.

"There won't need to be any orders of that kind when the regiment gets into a tight place."

All rookies of the melting pot regiment will fire for the first time on the new schedule. While the seasoned men of Gen. Andrews' brigade are carrying on their advance firing problems on the long and short ranges, the recruits and special duty soldiers will take up a graduated course of instruction on the 100 yard range. Most of the latter contingent have already mastered the hold and squeeze lessons, learning the preliminaries in their spare time, and some unusual first records are looked forward to during the first two days of the heavy firing period.

Ready for Hun Frightfulness.

Col. Howland explained today that the noncombatants and special duty men will not be equipped for active combat when the regiment goes into action, but that every single man attached to the organization will know how to shoot and to shoot straight. When the United States is battling a foe whose greatest victories are made by bombing hospitals, butchering wounded men, and blowing up hospital ships, the leader explained, every American in the fighting zone owes it to himself to learn the rifle game.

JUDSON LEAVES TODAY ON TRIP TO AID PERSIA

Will Decide on Personnel of Commission in the East.

President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago leaves Chicago this morning for the east, whence in a few days he will sail for Persia. His journey is to undertake the direction of a relief expedition for Persians under the auspices of the American committee for relief in Western Asia, formerly known as the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief.

The size and personnel of the commission have not yet been finally determined, but an official announcement concerning it will be forthcoming from New York in a few days. Ten members of the commission, whose names have not been made public, have already sailed by the Pacific route. The rest will accompany Dr. Judson, who expects to be absent about six months, during which time his place at the university will be taken by Dean James R. Angell.

Among those who will accompany Dr. Judson will be Dr. Wilbur E. Post of Chicago of the faculty of the Rush Medical college and of the staff of the Presbyterian hospital. Dr. Post will have charge of medical relief in Persia, of which there is great need, as the country is said to be in a deplorable condition, both from lack of food and clothing and because of the prevalence of disease. Means for relief are said to have been already arranged for through the agency of the committee, and the mission will have charge of its distribution and the regulation of the relief work.

JUNE 5 DRAFT MEN DISPLAY EAGER SPIRIT

With the receipt yesterday of the "master key," setting forth the order in which the numbers of registrants of June 5 last were drawn in Washington recently, members of all local exemption boards began the order of numbering young men in their districts. It is expected the June 5 men will be called into service during August.

Some of the boards, prior to the receipt of the official "master key," had already begun this work, and, in the cases of men waiving exemption or deferred classification, had proceeded with the physical examination. Many of the boards reported that there have been a large percentage of waivers filed, in some cases as many as 90 per cent of the latest registrants showing a willingness to be inducted at once into military service.

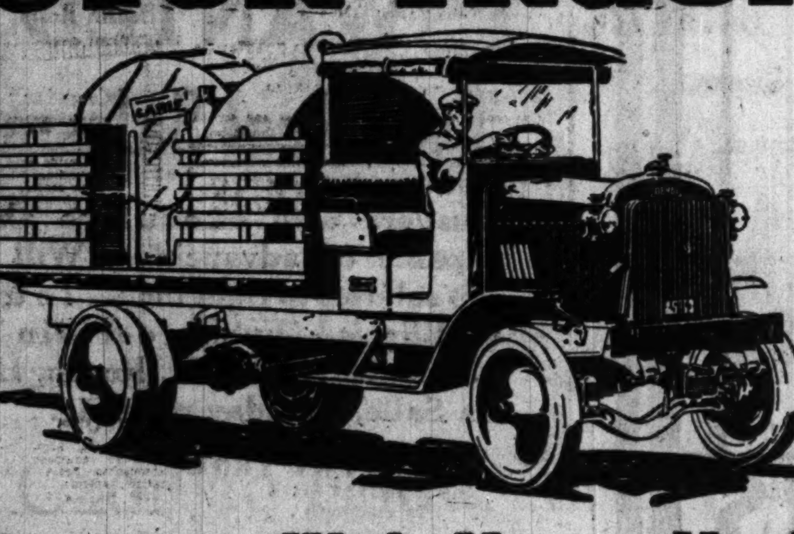
DENBY MOTOR TRUCKS



To Concerns With Heavy Hauling!

Here's a Piece of Luck That You Can Share

We've been trying for months to get a stock of Denby 5-tonners that would enable us at least to make a good start in filling the Chicago demand. We've had a man sitting on the factory door-step for weeks at a time. But the Company was so far oversold that it began to look as hopeless as a German offensive with the Yanks pouring in. For, of course, Uncle Sam's requirements come first.

Finally, however, we've managed to get an allotment of ten. Don't know when we can get more, for material conditions will probably get worse before they get better. But while they last it's your opportunity.

No need to tell you what this Denby 5-tonner has done. If you've kept in close touch with motor-truck affairs you know that all over the country it has been operating at an amazingly low upkeep and maintenance cost for a heavy-duty job—that its record has been a source of astonishment to engineers as well as owners.

We honestly believe that this 5-ton Denby is the sturdiest, smoothest, most economical truck of its tonnage ever built. We'll match it against anything you say, and prove it to your satisfaction.

Here's a chance that—take our word for it—won't be often repeated, to get the right truck for your purpose. War-time demands are getting more strenuous; and if you wait you may have to take the truck you can get, instead of the truck you ought to have.

Come in, call or 'phone and let's talk it over.

ALCOCK ADMITS QUIET ARREST OF FUNKHOUSER AID

Chief Says He Held Man Without Charge, but Hides Name.

Although denying responsibility for the seizure of Anthony Landers, a Funkhouser investigator released from solitary confinement on Friday after habeas corpus proceedings were begun, Acting Chief Alcock yesterday admitted that about a month ago he personally "arrested" another investigator who was given worse treatment than Landers received.

With the acting chief at the time he made the arrest were William H. Luthardt, acting second deputy, and Frank S. Righeimer, assistant corporation counsel, his principal aids in the effort to oust Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser from the police department. Chief Alcock and Mr. Righeimer are said to have accompanied the prisoner in the patrol wagon.

A rumor of this "arrest" was brought to the attention of THE TRIBUNE and Chief Alcock was asked about the matter. He admitted that he took the investigator into custody and that he was held for several days without any complaint filed against him and then given his liberty. But he refused to give the name of the investigator.

Arrested at Restaurant.

According to the best information obtainable the man was arrested while sitting on a bench at the entrance of a downtown restaurant. The three city officials saw him, placed him "under arrest," took him to the city hall, and put him in a patrol wagon called for the purpose.

The prisoner then was sent to the Fiftieth street station and there locked up in the "solitary" cell, in which Landers spent forty hours. This man is said to have been confined there incommunicado for three days. At the end of that time he was taken to the city hall and there questioned closely about the conduct of morals investigations under Second Deputy Funkhouser.

Following this he was told he was at liberty and the reason for his seizure was not disclosed to him.

Chief Alcock was asked whether it was true that he personally took an investigator—not Landers—into custody.

"That's true," he answered.

Alcock Qualifies Story.

"Is it true that he was locked up for three days and treated the same way Landers was?"

"I don't know how he was treated," was the answer. "He was locked up for twenty-four or thirty-six hours.

"And not booked?"

"Everybody that's taken into custody isn't booked," said the chief.

"Was he released without any charge having been made against him?"

"Yes, he was not booked."

"What was the reason for 'arresting' him?"

"That's something I won't go into now."

"Will it be brought out before the civil service commission?"

"I won't say that."

As to the Landers Case.

The acting chief was asked about the case of Anthony Landers.

"I didn't know anything about his being locked up until yesterday morning," he said, "and then I ordered his release."

Landers' statement was that the two detectives who "arrested" him told him that "the chief" wanted to see him and that he was taken to the office of Acting Second Deputy Luthardt before being locked up. Mr. Luthardt has refused to discuss the case, saying that the rules of the department prohibit him from doing so.

Landers' mother, Mrs. John M. Landers, 1100 South Homan avenue, vents her anger upon Chief Alcock every time the case is mentioned to her. She says that her attorney, F. L. Barnett, will file a damage suit for her son's arrest.

"It is clear," said Attorney Barnett, "that there is a good case for a suit for false imprisonment against the officers who took young Landers into custody and against those who directed them to do it."

The Alcock forces during the day circulated a report that Landers was convicted of horse stealing in 1901 when he was 17 years old, and that he has committed other offenses since that time. The records show that Landers was restored to citizenship by Gov. Lowden recently.

LO AND BEHOLD! ANOTHER ROHM ON CITY PAYROLL

It did not become generally known until yesterday that another member of the Rohm family has an important city position. Philip E. Rohm is first assistant superintendent of streets. He is a brother of V. C. Rohm, city purchasing agent, and Walter F. Rohm, publisher of the Republican, the city hall weekly.

Philip Rohm asked the finance committee for an appropriation to buy an automobile. The committee refused the appropriation, but several aldermen made an investigation to ascertain how Rohm got his job.

It was found that Rohm, who for years was ward superintendent of the Thirty-fifth ward, took a civil service examination for first assistant last January. He stood first on the eligible list with a marking of 80.59. E. J. Alden was second with 72.33, and Thomas F. McGrath was third with 71.95. They were the only three to pass the examination, which was open to ward superintendents and assistants.

The job pays $3,840 per year.

Two Killed as Train Hits Auto Near Camp Custer

LIEUT. AND MRS. GEORGE W. SHAW AND YEOMAN MARION MARSTON, THE BRIDESMAID.

LESTER ARMOUR TAKES A BRIDE AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, La., July 6.—[Special.]—Miss Leola Stanton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Stanton of New Orleans, and Lester Armour of New York were married at 3 p. m. today at the residence of the bride's parents here. The bride is a grandniece on her mother's side of Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore.

Only relatives and a few friends were the wedding guests. Miss Stanton has been a recognized beauty and a great favorite in younger exclusive circles here ever since her debut several years ago. Mr. Armour is a son of the late Philip Armour II. of Chicago. His mother is now Mrs. Patrick Valentine of New York. He is a graduate of Yale, class of 1917, and is a cadet student of the United States naval aviation corps at Pensacola, Fla. Lieut. Philip Armour III. of the aviation corps, stationed at Camp Dick, Dallas, Texas, a brother of the bridegroom, attended the wedding. Mrs. Valentine came from her summer home at Southampton, L. I., for the ceremony.

Mr. Armour and Miss Stanton met a few years ago during a visit of the latter to Mrs. George Q. Whitney of New Orleans at her summer home at Southampton.

The ceremony took place in the large drawing room of the Stanton home, which was decorated with palms, ferns, and Easter lilies. The mantle and tall mirror at one end of the room formed the background for candelabra, holding lighted tapers and baskets and banks of lilies were arranged in altar effect. Here the young couple stood during the ceremony.

The only attendants were Mrs. Charles Willis Wells, sister of the bride, who acted as matron of honor, and Lieut. Philip Armour, who was best man. The Rev. Father Madden, S. J., of the Holy Name of Jesus church, officiated.

Mr. Armour and his bride will spend a few days on the nearby gulf coast before going to Pensacola, where they will occupy a cottage leased by Mr. Armour until he is called for duty overseas.

Mr. Armour's gift to his bride was a necklace of pearls. Mrs. Valentine presented her daughter-in-law with a sapphire and diamond ring.

Poisoning of Dog Held Alleged Murder Motive

Walter Moylan, 2933 Shields avenue, a telephone operator for the drainage board, was accused in a signed statement made to the police by Matthew Petrie, a bartender, 2741 Shields avenue, of killing John Doherty, a saloonkeeper, by striking him with his fist in a quarrel at Shields' saloon, 2815 Shields avenue, Friday evening. The statement followed an investigation made by the police when a post-mortem examination of Doherty's body by Coroner's Physician James Simon indicated that death was caused by concussion of the brain, instead of heart disease, as at first supposed. The quarrel is said to have been the result of the alleged poisoning of a dog owned by Petrie. Moylan denied striking the blow.

WANTS A HIGH CLASS DOCTOR

The physician who is prepared to act as consulting physician and to make a safe (Bond) investment on a guarantee of 50% per annum for part of his time —or full time on salary as Medical Director of the Head NEAL INSTITUTE —formerly Chicago Hospital—811-15 East 49th Street, Chicago (Oakland 439), is invited to call or address SENATOR BRUCE, President of the International "NEAL WAY," for the treatment of

Drink or Drug Users

P. S.—As the physician we want is too busy to read advertisements, we advise "Best Friends" to call his attention to this unusual opportunity for the "Right Doctor."

WOMAN HELD AS THIEF MAKES TWO LIBERTY DASHES

Four alleged shoplifters were arrested yesterday in The Fair. At the South Clark street annex they were booked on charges of larceny.

Mrs. Mary Misrivir, 30 years old, 1606 North Ashland avenue, a scrubwoman, is accused of stealing a dress. She broke away from a house detective and got as far as State street. In the patrol wagon she made a second dash and broke away from the policeman holding her. At Dearborn and Adams streets she was overtaken.

Mrs. Louise Waldman, 1927 North Paulina street, is charged with taking a waist valued at $10 from a counter. When searched she had $250 in her possession.

Miss Gertrude Fox, 27 years old, 531 West Fifty-seventh street, a stenographer, well dressed, is accused of taking a fur neckpiece.

Miss Jennie Macrohy, 19 years old, 4919 South State street, is accused of stealing a waist.

I. W. W. WITNESS, OFTEN ACCUSED, IS UNCONVICTED

William D. Haywood, high chief of the I. W. W., was on the stand for a short time yesterday to identify documents. It was predicted yesterday by attorneys connected with the case that the defense will have its case all in in ten days.

Frank Rogers, Butte miner, was on the stand again yesterday telling of "gunmen" he had known and of the wrongs suffered by the I. W. W. during the strike last year. After he was done Prosecutor Nebeker asked him if he hadn't been arrested as a boy for stabbing a playmate, later for holding up a saloon, for robbery, conspiracy to rob, for wife beating, and a few other things.

"But I was never convicted," interposed Rogers.

One of the little jokes of the vigilantes of the western towns and villages, it was revealed, was to carve a pick handle neatly, leaving "I. W. W." in raised letters. As a result, when men were whipped they would be neatly branded with "I. W. W." on chosen parts of their anatomy.

ENOZ Kills Moths Instantly!

ENOZ is the only positive moth remedy that has ever been offered to the public. It is a powerful liquid chemical which, sprayed on the finest furs, woolens, feathers, rugs, carpets, upholstery, etc., instantly destroys all moths and moth-eggs no matter how deeply they may be hidden.

ENOZ will not stain or damage the finest goods in the slightest degree. It is non-poisonous and non-explosive. Even the odor, which is of a clean, antiseptic character, disappears utterly within a short time.

ENOZ penetrates every crack, crevice and isolated spot. It goes entirely through the weave. It is not a smoke or a smell but a liquid which strikes the moth direct and guarantees to kill. The fact has been proved by many big manufacturers and wholesale houses which have used ENOZ for some time to protect their valuable stocks.

ENOZ is in no sense similar to moth-balls, naptha, formaldehyde or any other so-called preventive. Used once a month in your home or establishment it frees you from the moth evil for all time to come. It relieves you of the necessity of packing your clothes away in trunks. Let them hang in your closet.

Sprayer and Liquid sold in combination for $1.00 at drug, department and hardware stores. Additional liquid, pint size, 75c; quart size, $1.00. West of Rockies and in Canada 25 cents extra.

If your dealer hasn't it—we will send it to you prepaid upon receipt of price.

YEOMAN IN HER UNIFORM SERVES AS BRIDESMAID

Unique Feature Marks Wedding of Lieut. Shaw and Miss Smith.

A yeoman in her uniform as maid of honor added the final military touch to the wedding of Miss Lloyda Kezzie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith, and Lieut. George W. Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Shaw of Muskegon. The wedding service was read by the Rev. Gardner McWhorter, a college mate of Lieut. Shaw, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. Chrysostom's church.

Miss Marion Marston, a first class yeoman, who is serving the government by censoring cablegrams in New York, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Joseph Frederick Cottrell, whose husband, Maj. Cottrell, is in France, was matron of honor. The Misses Marion and Genevieve Scully, Miss Zona Kezzie Morey, Mrs. Le Grand De Grand Simson of Buffalo, and Miss Marjorie McIntosh were bridesmaids.

Bride in Ivory Satin.

Little Virginia Winston, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Horner Winston, was flower girl. The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, heavily embroidered in silver and pearls, and her veil was of duchesse lace and tulle. She carried a bouquet of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Her gown was made with a court train which hung from her shoulders and her veil was arranged in a Russian headdress fashion.

Miss Marston wore a white uniform and stiff white sailor hat and Mrs. Cottrell wore her wedding gown of ivory satin and lace. The bridesmaids' frocks were of pink organdie and they wore hats to match. Little Miss Winston was in white organdie. The matron of honor and the bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink sweet peas and larkspur.

Fighting Men Attend.

George McCallum, R. O. T. C., was Lieut. Shaw's best man and Maurice Caestacker, N. R., was the standard bearer. The ushers were Maj. Earl Zimmerman, Lieut. James G. Taliaferro, Lieut. Malcolm McNeil, Lieut. George Brand, Maj. Norman J. Bootf, Daniel Scully, N. R., and Le Grand De Grant Simson, N. R.

After the wedding there was a small reception at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, 607 Rush street. Some of those present were the groom's parents, Miss Josephine Palmer, Miss Catherine Casselberry, Miss Rosalie Wacker, Mrs. Walter Lytton, Mrs. William Evans Casselberry, Miss Harriet McLaughlin, and Miss Emily Bissell.

Lieut. Shaw, who is in the aviation corps, will take his bride to Mount Clemens, Mich., as he is stationed at Selfridge field at Mount Clemens.

OBITUARY.

Mother of Owner of City's Oldest Tavern Is Dead

Eighty-one years ago what is now Chicago's oldest saloon was started on the Green Bay road at a spot now designated as 6636 Ridge avenue. It is run by Nicholas Karthauser, a direct descendant of the founder of the inn. Yesterday Mrs. Mary N. Karthauser, mother of Nicholas, was laid to rest in St. Henry's cemetery at the age of 86 years. Mrs. Karthauser, however, can hardly be called one of Chicago's earliest settlers. She only settled here in 1878, and so lacks the historical past of the menfolk of the family.

BOY TRIO HELD AS MEMBERS OF BURGLAR BAND

Taken in Connection with $7,000 to $10,000 Loot of Residence.

Three members of what the police believe is a youthful burglar gang that has been operating on the west side for several months are under arrest at the Fillmore street station on the charge of robbing the home of Walter H. Brassie, 5221 West Quincy street, on July 4. Jewelry, wearing apparel, and other valuables worth from $7,000 to $10,000 were obtained in the haul.

In addition to the three alleged burglars, each of whom is 19 years old, two other men said to be implicated in this and other burglaries and a woman accused of receiving stolen property are held. A fourth member of the gang is being sought.

Said to Have Confessed.

The three youths are Tony Fellegiaro, 433 South Honore street; Steward Smith, 2857 West Harrison street, and George Bremner, 2102 West Chicago avenue. They are said to have confessed to their part in the burglary of the Brassie home and in other similar crimes. Their alleged accomplices are Russell Smith, 21 years old, 2857 West Harrison street; Edward Bergner, 45 years old, owner of an express wagon used by the youths in hauling the loot away from the Brassie home, and Rose Olson, 2102 West Chicago avenue. The latter is said to have received and disposed of women's wearing apparel obtained by the gang in their burglaries.

The burglary of the Brassie home appears to have been carefully planned and methodically executed. It took place while members of the Brassie family were visiting in New York City.

Pack Trunks with Loot.

On the morning of July 4 four young men appeared at the Quincy street address and, after trying the front and rear doors, forced an entrance into the house through a basement window. They then proceeded leisurely to ransack the house and to pack into two large trunks everything of value that they found. Included in this, it is said, were two 100 pound bags of granulated sugar.

After making a thorough search of the house the burglars left, taking with them the keys to the front and rear doors. In the afternoon an express wagon was driven up to the Brassie home and the trunks removed. They are said to have been taken to a rooming house at 108 North Carpenter street, conducted by George Snyder, 60 years old. In the morning and afternoon visits to the Brassie home four young men appeared.

Wanted the Auto Also.

In the evening the three youths under arrest made a visit to the Brassie home with the intention, the police believe, of taking the automobile from the garage in the rear of the home. The attention of Detective Sergeants Kilacki and O'Hare of the Central detail, at work in the neighborhood on another case, was attracted to the youths and they were placed under arrest.

CLASH EXPECTED TODAY IN 149TH RELIEF LEAGUE

The executive committee and the main body of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery relief organization will come to the parting of the ways this afternoon at a meeting in the Hotel La Salle.

Despite the existence of a complete roster of officers a new election will be held when executives from the rank and file of the membership will be chosen, according to the supporters of Mrs. Athalie H. Unger, secretary, whose resignation was asked for by the faction which favors merging the body with the Red Cross.

"We expect to have 90 per cent of the membership present," Mrs. Unger said yesterday. "Fathers as well as mothers of soldiers in the One Hundred and Forty-ninth will be represented. It is the feeling that our work for the regiment will suffer unless a complete reorganization is brought about."

U. S. Takes Hand to Stop Indiana Liquor Sales

Hammond, Ind., July 6.—[Special.]—Civil courts having failed to stop violation of the Indiana dry law in Lake county, the United States government stepped in today and two men were bound over to the federal grand jury under $2,500 bonds. They are Martin Blazich of East Chicago and John Ribicki of Hammond. East Chicago police found forty-eight cases of beer in Blazich's saloon, but he was twice discharged. Ribicki was a driver for the Seipp Brewing agency in West Hammond.

VAUGHN BEATS GIANTS IN 12 ROUNDS, 1-0

TILDEN BEATS GARLAND FOR TENNIS TITLE

Loser and Hardy Win Doubles; Miss Neely a Victor.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Depending on steadiness where on the previous day he had depended on brilliance, William T. Tilden, Jr., of Philadelphia yesterday won the national clay court tennis championship by beating Charles S. Garland of Pittsburgh, 6—4, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2. For three sets Tilden was content to engage in a driving duel with Garland, without calling his versatile array of spectacular strokes into play, but in the fourth set he unleashed his speed in several spurts and quickly corraled the victory.

Garland obtained considerable satisfaction in doubles, when he and Samuel Hardy of Chicago won the championship match in an exhibition of streaky play, defeating Walter T. Hayes and Ralph H. Burdick of this city in five sets, 6—4, 1—6, 6—2, 7—9, 7—2. Hardy outshone the others in this match, although he, too, had sieges of wildness. Garland and Hardy made good their honors of 1917 by the triumph, for last year they were the clay court national winners in the patriotic informal tournament which replaced the championship fixture.

Miss Neely Wins Women's Title.

It remained for a woman to bring Chicago its only clear title. This came in Miss C. B. Neely's victory in the final of women's singles. She won from Mrs. Adelaide Yeager of Los Angeles by calling to her aid her fund of years' tournament experience. Miss Neely stemmed the tide completely after Mrs. Yeager had begun with a lead in games of 4 to 0, by adapting her style of play to the weakness of the visitor. Mrs. Yeager had obtained her lead by showing decisive superiority in hard drives and in placing her shots from the net.

Miss Neely put a stop to this by lobbing everything she hit after that. The high "pop flies" forced Mrs. Yeager back from the net into the rear court and slowed her fast game, and the advantage in the scramble of softly hit balls that followed rested all with the local woman.

Doubles Final a Battle.

The final match in women's doubles was much more spirited. Miss "Bobbie" Esch of Cleveland, O., and Mrs. Ralph Field of Chicago, smashed and volleyed their way to victory over Miss Neely and Mrs. Yeager, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4. As Miss Dorothy Llewellyn, Mrs. Field was a co-ed athlete of considerable note at the University of Chicago few years ago.

The best gallery of the tournament was out. The day, which was a trifle too cool for spectators, but ideal for the players. The breeze was slight enough not to molest the delicately cut shots which Tilden at times tapped over the net for placement points, taking Garland unawares, yards away. Most of the spectacular shots of the afternoon were sped from Tilden's racquet, although there was nothing prettier in the whole tournament than Chuck Garland's knack of banging the ball inside the alley lines by inches when Tilden was rushing up to take the net.

Steady Play Decides Doubles.

Garland played the steadiest tennis of the four in the final match of doubles, but Hardy did the brunt of the scoring. Hardy outplayed both opponents in his smashing from overhead and lobbed to perfection when Hayes and Burdick occasionally got the winners on the run.

When Hayes hit a good streak, Burdick skidded into a slump, and vice versa. Hayes was away off form most of the time, however, getting his shots either too long and out or too short.

"Tribune" Decisions

Decisions of "Tribune" fight representatives are:

At Cleveland—Barney Adair beat Charley White, Joe Burman beat Benny McCoy, Harry Greb beat Harry Anderson, Rocky Kansas beat Cal Delaney, Johnny Kilbane beat Larry Hansen, Ted Lewis and Jack [Twin] Sullivan boxed draw, Benny Valger beat Elmer Doane, Willie Jackson beat Young Gus Christie, Matt Brock and Johnny Dundee boxed draw, Johnny Griffiths and Vincent Pokorni boxed draw. All four round bouts.

At Atlantic City—Lew Tendler beat Frankie Callahan [8].

At Atlanta, Ga.—Jack Dempsey knocked out "Porky" Flynn [1].

Cleveland, O., July 6.—[Special.]—Fistic fans helped to the extent of $12,500 in enriching the athletic fund for soldiers this afternoon at a boxing carnival at the American league baseball park. Five thousand patriotic citizens from Cleveland and northern Ohio attended the bouts, featured by the work of some of the leading scrappers of the country.

Ten mills of four rounds each were staged, with such fighters in action as Charley White, Johnny Kilbane, Harry Greb, Johnny Griffith, Matt Brock, Ted Lewis, Cal Delaney, Jack Twin Sullivan, and Johnny Dundee. Among the missing were Packey McFarland and Jack Dillon.

Adair Beats Charley White.

Barney Adair of New York had a slight shade over Charley White in the first four round bout. White didn't appear to be in his customary good form.

Joe Burman, Chicago, and Benny McCoy, New York, traveled four rounds with a possible shade in favor of Burman in the second bout. It was a fast give and take affair all the way, both boys showing more than the usual amount of cleverness.

Next in line were Cal Delaney of this city, now connected with the naval training station in Chicago, and Rocky Kansas. It was a rough, tough affair through the four rounds with Kansas showing the effects of being in better condition and having a little edge.

Jack Sullivan Still Speedy.

Ted Lewis, welterweight, and Jack Twin Sullivan, an ancient and honorable relic of goneby fistic days, then battled. Though Lewis showed a tendency to be rough with his baldheaded old rival, Jack was more agile than one would expect a gladiator to be who has passed the two score mark.

After getting a rousing reception Johnny Kilbane, a featherweight king, entertained the crowd through a four round exhibition with Larry Hansen of New York. The first near knockdown appeared in this bout. Though Kilbane worked under wraps all the way he caught Hansen with a short right in the second, causing Larry to wobble momentarily.

Brock and Dundee in Draw.

Matt Brock of this city and Johnny Dundee of New York appeared in the semi-final. This was the sensation of the day. After a tame first round both boxers lost their sweet dispositions. They went at one another viciously. The crowd yelled wildly at the sight of a real fight. Matt had the better of the second round. Dundee came back in the third and evened up honors. The fourth and final round was a corker, with no advantage either way. Whatever slight shade there was was in Brock's favor.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

THE EPISTLES OF EDNA.

Chicago, July 4.

Dear Mr. Graves: Well, you see I have enclosed the photo and now it's "up to you." Isn't this a crazy one of me? I had no idea my girl friend was going to take my picture and I am afraid I look like the "Last Rose of summer" in it or something. It was taken a year ago when a girl friend and myself were spending our vacation up at South Haven. I bet you will say it's a wonder I didn't break the camera. But you know you asked me for a photo and this is the only one I have so "anything to oblige." But don't forget you promised to exchange with me and if you don't send me one of yourself right away I will know you are a "gay deceiver."

I bet you can never guess what I did today. What do you think of a girl who spends a perfectly good holiday at home, reading and day-dreaming? I suppose you will want to know what I was dreaming about. Well, "Mr. Curiosity," I won't tell you. But didn't your ears burn? But I guess a person's ears are only supposed to burn when some one is talking about them and not just thinking about them and of course I wasn't talking about you because there was no one here to talk to only mother and she doesn't know anything about you. Mother is old-fashioned and I don't know if she would approve of her "little" girlie writing to a "great big soldier man" that she had met only once. But I guess she thought it was kind of funny that I didn't go out somewhere because she said to me right after lunch: "Aren't you going anywhere, Eddie?" "No, mother," I said.

She must of thought something was the matter with me because usually I like to be where things are "going on." Well, there is something the matter with me, but its nothing that medicine would cure unless the "medicine" was just being with "some one" and talking to them and having them say nice things to me. But the "some one" is miles and miles away and probably so busy with his old drilling shooting and everything that he hasn't time to think of "Eddie." Isn't that a crazy name for a girl? Mother calls me that half the time and lots of times I say to her: "Mother, I believe you wish I was a boy instead of a girl and that's why you call me a boy's name." She just smiles.

Mother is a "dear" and I wish you knew her. Maybe some day you will—maybe. I think mothers are the grandest things in the world and I think the world and all of mine. We have always been such chums. I don't know what I will do if the day ever comes when I have to leave home and go to a home of my own. But maybe no one will ever ask me to do that. What do you think? But if an "accident does happen" and "some one" is foolish enough to want me, I will want a home of my own even if its only two rooms. I don't believe in a young couple living with one or the other's parents, do you? I think half the divorces and estrangements are caused by the parents or some one's else interfering between a couple that would be perfectly happy together if they left them alone.

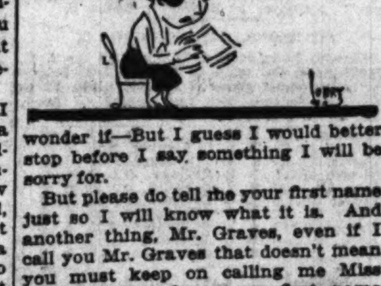
Do you know "something," Mr. Graves? You have never told me your first name and you always sign just your initials and the W might stand for Walter or William or Wilbur or Wallace or almost anything that begins with a W. Not that I would ever dare to call you by your first name. That is, I don't think I would ever have the courage though my girl friends say I am not afraid of anything, but they mean danger and things like that and the reason I am not afraid of those things is because I am a fatalist and I believe if something is going to happen to me it's just going to happen and there's no use worrying about it till it does.

But I do believe I am afraid of you and its a different feeling than I ever had about anybody before. I can't understand myself lately but every little while I notice my hands are trembling and I can't make them stop and it happened yesterday when I was trying to open your letter. I wonder if—But I guess I would better stop before I say something I will be sorry for.



But please do tell me your first name just so I will know what it is. And another thing, Mr. Graves, even if I call you Mr. Graves that doesn't mean you must keep on calling me Miss Conklin. You know my first name because I don't keep it a secret the way you do yours. And I believe if you called me Edna I wouldn't be half so frightened of you and I know a great big soldier man like you don't want to scare poor little "me" to death.

Did I tell you what I was reading today? It was "I, Mary MacLane" and I guess it must of been about the "steenth" time I have read it. What a wonderful mind she has and how she simply fascinates a person. Sometimes I think I will write a book like her's and just set my thoughts down as they come, but I'm afraid the whole book would be just one person's name written over and over again, only I would have to know their first name before I could write it.

You will think I am a crazy little "it" if I keep on so I will close. Remember the photo and also that I am not Miss Conklin but just Your (?) EDNA.

DEMPSEY FLOORS FLYNN IN FIRST IN ATLANTA RING

Atlanta, Ga., July 6.—Jack Dempsey, Salt Lake City heavyweight, knocked out Dan ("Porky") Flynn of Boston in the first round of a scheduled ten round bout here tonight. The round was about half over when Dempsey sent a left hook to the stomach followed by a right cross to the jaw and Flynn took the count.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 6.—Maxwell R. Marston and Jerome D. Travers defeated Oswald Kirkby and John D. Anderson, 2 and 1, in an 18 hole best ball four ball golf match for the benefit of the Red Cross today over the links of the Merion Golf club.

QUIT BASEBALL, ORDER BY BOARD GIVEN HORNSBY

Fort Worth, Tex., July 6.—Roger Hornsby, star shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals, was today ordered by local draft board No. 1 to engage in an essential occupation or be placed in class 1A of the draft. He is the first major league player to receive a work or fight notice under the new ruling of the provost marshal general. This is Hornsby's home.

Hornsby to Appeal Case.

St. Louis, Mo., July 6.—Roger Hornsby, shortstop for the St. Louis Cards, will appeal from the decision of his draft board, according to announcement by Branch Rickey, president of the Cardinals. Hornsby seeks deferred classification because of a dependent, his mother.

Expect a Definite Ruling.

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Action of the local draft board at Fort Worth, Tex., today in notifying Roger Hornsby, shortstop of the St. Louis Nationals, that unless he engages in some essential occupation he will be placed in class 1A is expected to result in a definite ruling on the question of whether baseball is to be classed as a nonessential business under the new work or fight regulations.

Provost Marshal General Crowder repeatedly has said he would make no ruling on this point until a case was referred to him from a local board for decision. There have been intimations however, that baseball would be classified as a sport, though this season's schedules of professional baseball leagues would be interfered with as little as possible.

Order Players to Appear.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 6.—Members of the Salt Lake and Sacramento baseball teams of the Pacific Coast league who are within the jurisdiction of draft boards and of draft age were notified before the opening of today's game to appear before the boards Monday morning at 10 o'clock and show cause why they should not engage in an essential occupation or be placed in class 1 A of the selective draft. The order was read to all players, and none of the players received specific summons.

CUBS' BIG CROWD EASILY HANDLED BY USHERETTES

Twenty-five usherettes handled the crowd at the Cub-Giant baseball game yesterday as smoothly and rapidly as their trousered predecessors ever did, and the test was a good one because practically all the boxes and reserved seats at the north shore park were sold out.

The skirted squad of ushers had only one drill previous to this test, when they guided the patrons of the fireworks exhibit on July 4 to their seats. The Cub usherettes did not wear distinctive uniforms, but their wartime occupation was indicated by insignia on their hats.

One reason for the lack of confusion in seating yesterday's crowd was attributed by a club official to the fact the young women did not copy their male predecessors' system of accepting tips for slipping seventy-five cent patrons into dollar seats and then rounding up extra chairs to put in the boxes for the rightful holders of the tickets.

SOX AND YANKS HAND DEFEATS TO EACH OTHER

Rowlands Lose First by 3 to 1, Then Win Second, 3 to 2.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, July 6.—[Special.]—After a big afternoon of thrills and rows and heat, the White Sox and Yankees split even in a doubleheader and are just as they were before the battle began, except that the treasury is enriched, for the historic Polo grounds had a regular throng on hand to witness the world's champions' first assault on the eastern front. The Sox helped the Yankees win the first one, 3 to 1, and the Yankees helped the Sox take the second one, 3 to 2.

A dozen or more athletes helped to furnish thrills for the throng, for there was a sparkling play about every other inning and some times a couple in one round. The Sox did most of the thrilling stunts in the second game and saved it for Reb Russell, with the Yanks hitting his curves murderously.

Hard Luck for Cicotte.

The Yanks also did some wonderful things in the first game to save it for "Slim" Love, who was being battered and banged about. Our Eddie Cicotte was a two times better pitcher, but had no luck, while in the second game Hank Robinson, who is back for a second career in the majors, had a lot of tough breaks against him.

That New York has transferred a large portion of its affection from the Giants to the Yankees was quite evident. There were about 23,000 or perhaps 24,000 present and they howled from start to finish because they are sure Miller Huggins is on his way to a pennant. Such a crowd on a day of bad weather was quite a surprise.

Bad Support for Eddie.

With half the support given to Russell in the second game, Cicotte would have won the opening combat.

In the fourth inning Eddie Collins messed an easy bounder from Baker's bat. A single by Pratt followed, then there was an out and then singles by Bodie and Miller and two runs were over the plate. In the seventh Murphy muffed Bodie's easy fly ball, letting Ping reach second from where he was pushed to third on one sacrifice and pushed home on another.

The Sox tallied their one run most stylishly in the sixth when E. Collins singled to left, advanced on Gandil's out, stole third, and scored when Shano Collins poled to the center field fence. Shano tried to make a homer of his drive and was relayed out at the plate.

Sox Handed Second Game.

In the second encounter the Sox were presented with a run in the second when, with two out, Weaver walked, stole second, went on to third on the catcher's wild throw, and on home on the center fielder's wild throw. In the fifth, with one gone, Liebold doubled to the right wall. E. Collins skied out, but Gandil slammed safely to left, sending Nemo home, and when Bodie heaved ten feet over the catcher's head Gandil made third, from where he counted on J. Collins' two bagger to left center.

Russell got by uninjured until the ninth, when Risberg fumbled Peck's roller. Baker singled, sending his mate to third, from where he counted as Pratt forced Baker. Pipp boosted out, then Bodie doubled to left, sending Pratt home, but Ping was left on second, for the game ended when Miller lifted to J. Collins. Scores:

Notes

Cubs and Giants again today.

All except one of the passes issued by Demaree were intentional and all except two of Vaughn's were voluntary.

The Cub fans gave Larry Doyle the glad hand when he first came to bat. Doyle did not get a hit, but he played a good defensive game.

The crowd which welcomed home the pacemakers nearly filled the stands and must have numbered close to 14,000.

The Giants threatened to hit Vaughn hard in the sixth. Burns lined a fly to Flack. Young beat out a bounder to Hollocher and Fletcher pasted a liner to Zeider, who doubled up Young before he could get back to first.

For quite a spell in the overtime rounds boards of strategy were in session all over the lot as the rival teams and their managers held consultations over the situations that arose.

The Cubs Claws club had its band out to enliven the day, but there were times when even the whole Great Lakes band would have been drowned out by the unorganized rooters.

Zeider returned to the keystone job, from which he has been resting for several days on account of a lame back and leg. He was taken out in the tenth to let Barber hit for him and Wortman finished the day at second.

Secretary Heydler of the National league split two pairs of umpires to send Klem and O'Day here to handle this Cub-Giant series, the results of which will have an important bearing on the pennant race for the next few weeks.

Paskert tried to pull away from a bad ball in the tenth, but could not get his bat sheathed in time. The ball hit the hickory and bounded off to Demaree, who ran over to first and made the putout himself.

NOTES

New York, July 6.—[Special.]—The Sox will play an exhibition tomorrow at New Haven against the Colonials, an independent organization.

John Collins lost his stride in a half stumble just after rounding third on his long drive to the center field fence in the first game, or he would have had a homer. He was out by only a step.

Bob Shawkey, now a jackie, pitched the last inning of the second game for New York. He is here on a furlough and may be on the slab again before this series is over. Jacobs got a hit off him, but no one scored.

Shano Collins took a triple or possible homer from Bodie in the fourth of the second game, going almost to the fence in left center and capturing a terrific wallop. Pipp was on second at the time and two were out.

Ump Connolly made a bad guess in the third of the second game when he called Liebold out at first on a peg from the catcher. From the press stand all the boys could see that Pipp tagged nothing but the earth, but Connolly was over near second base.

Chick Gandil may not be here for the rest of the series. Just before the games today he received a telegram from his home in Cleveland asking him to come at once as Mrs. Gandil was seriously ill. Chick couldn't get a train until 6 o'clock, so he played the two games before departing.

Gus Helfrich, a pitcher just back from the defunct Southern association, pitched for the Sox batters in practice and looked so good that Manager Rowland engaged him to pitch the exhibition game at New Haven tomorrow. If he looks good there, he may be one of us by Monday.

The big row came in the fourth round of the second game when Weaver poled a terrific line drive to left field. Bodie tore in, got the ball at his feet and held up his hand, claiming a fair catch. It looked like a trapped ball, but Ump Owens called Buck out. There was a terrific protest by a half dozen Sox, but Weaver, storming louder than ever, was the only one banished. After being put out, he tossed cap and glove into the air and pawed up dust most of the way to the distant gate.

BLANKS ENEMY AND KNOCKS IN WINNING TALLY

Demaree Holds the Cubs Till Hippo Cops Own Game.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

James Pater Familias Vaughn carved his name deeply in the hearts of Cub rooters yesterday by defeating New York's Giants almost single handed, although it took him twelve innings to do it, by a score of 1 to 0.

Not only did Daddy Jim whitewash the Gothamites for a dozen consecutive rounds, but he drove home the winning tally in the last half of the twelfth with a clean, solid swat, and that victorious blow was his second, a previous wallop for two bases in the eleventh having called out all kinds of strategy from the McGraw brain before the Cubs could be deprived of an earlier triumph.

Al Demaree, who opposed Vaughn on the slab, had all the better of the argument in the first half of the battle. He did not allow either hit or walk for six innings, and during that time the Giants, mostly Heinezim, secured three hits and a pair of passes off Hippo. But as the combat grew hotter the Cubs began hammering Demaree harder, while Vaughn grew more intangible with every round.

Paskert Leads Winning Rally.

Paskert led the winning attack with a single over second. Although foiled in his intent to sacrifice, Deal advanced Dode to second on his own demise. Wortman, who was pinching for Zeider at second, drove a fly so far to center that Paskert made third on it easily. McGraw ordered them to pass Killefer, bringing up Vaughn, who picked out the right one and sloughed it into right field, scoring Paskert and ending the game.

Just before that Vaughn came close to copping the scrap by opening the home eleventh with a two base smash to left center. Thorpe made a great stop to keep the hit from being longer. Flack's fly to right was so deep that Jim made third on it standing up. In this situation McGraw had Demaree pass both Hollocher and Mann, filling the bags with one down. That set the stage for a double play, and Merkle obliged by swatting the first ball pitched hotly to Fletcher, who started the double killing which wiped out that chance.

Hollocher Saves Vaughn.

Chicago's narrowest escape from defeat was in the first inning, when Hollocher came to the rescue with a corking play that cut off a run at the plate on a base hit. Two were out in that spasm before Fletcher worked Vaughn for a pass. Doyle rapped to Merkle, who fielded the ball and tossed to first on time, but Vaughn muffed the ball, giving Larry his life. Zim responded to the loud chorus of "booes" which greeted him by smashing a single over second. Hollocher partially blocked the hit and recovered in time to see Fletcher tearing for the plate. He nailed the runner easily.

The Giants did not get another man as far as second base until the seventh. Two were out in that round when Thorpe singled and stole second. Holke beat out an infield hit, but Hollocher held Thorpe on third and he was left there when McCarty skied to Paskert. There were a few minutes of worry for the rooters in the eleventh when Burns reached second with two out on his single and an infield play. Vaughn then passed Fletcher on purpose to bring up Doyle, the convalescent, who rolled out.

Cubs Unlucky in Seventh.

There wasn't a thing doing on the Cub side—not even a runner on first—until the seventh. In that lucky period the Mitchells were unlucky. Flack mauled a fly which ordinarily would have cleared the right field wall, but the wind held it up and Burns raced back for a spectacular catch of it. Fletcher then robbed Hollocher of a hit by a startling play. Mann followed with a double and Merkle walked, but Paskert fouled the side out.

Zimmerman hushed some of the booing in the ninth by staving off the Cubs' victory. Flack opened with a single. Hollocher dumped a pretty bunt toward third. Zim came in and fielded it in time to force Flack at second. Demaree picked Hollocher off first in a minute. Then Mann singled and stole second, but was tagged out on Merkle's rap to Zim.

BEN ANDERSON EQUALS RECORD AT LA GRANGE

Score of 76 Ties Marks of Evans and Gardner for the Course.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Benjamin N. Anderson, who for many years has been one of the shining lights of golf along the suburban route of the Burlington road, broke his altitude record yesterday when he soared to heights attained only by Chick Evans and Bob Gardner. This feat he accomplished at the LaGrange Country club, when he equalled the record for the course previously held by the Edgewater and Hinsdale stars.

The mark is 76, and after going out in 35, by brilliant golf, Anderson went along steadily until he passed the thirteenth hole. Then he ran into a trio of sixes and his chances of setting a new mark went glimmering. His card was as follows:

Out ......5 5 4 4 3 3 3 3 5—35
In ....3 5 5 3 6 6 6 4 3—41—76

This card gave him low score in the qualifying round for the 1916 Governors' trophy.

In the final for the 1915 Governors' trophy, E. T. Franklin defeated C. M. Denise, 1 up. Leading scores in the qualifying round of the 1916 trophy: B. N. Anderson, 76—10—66; L. Grilk, 88—20—68; C. W. Sherman, 84—15—69; W. W. Smith, 99—29—70; J. M. Linton, 102—32—70; F. Trozell, 101—30—71; E. L. Hammons, 99—28—71; M. L. Joslyn, 91—20—71; J. W. Peck, 92—20—72; W. W. Spear, 98—26—72; A. Duclos, 104—32—72; E. M. Hicok, 89—16—73; E. Wilson, 96—23—73; J. E. Urban, 103—29—74; William Townsend, 97—23—74.

INDIAN HILL.

Indian Hill members played the qualifying round of the club championship yesterday and divided into three flights of sixteen. E. M. Cummins led the class A flight with a score of 85. The others to qualify for the first flight were William Howell, Douglass Smith, A. M. Delfield, Frank E. Miller, J. C. Harding, M. E. Schoenthaler, W. F. Anderson, C. L. Stroebel, Grant Ridgeway, A. D. Edwards, M. C. Mayer, E. F. Cummins, H. F. Walsh, A. E. McCordic, and H. G. Bradderow.

The class B qualifiers were W. D. McKenzie, G. W. McIlvaine, J. E. Bradstreet, O. M. Burton, R. L. Evans, A. C. Koch, H. F. Coffin, G. W. Blossom, H. W. Amning, T. W. Ritchie, T. W. McInerney, W. B. MacIlvane, L. T. Walker, H. F. Parrish, J. G. Purcell, and R. F. Laird.

The players to qualify for the third flight were J. H. Prentiss, J. H. Winston, C. H. Holdridge, Sanger Brown, C. Lynd, H. M. Copeland, H. C. Edmonds, G. F. Kelly, L. B. Sherman, C. E. Butler, J. L. Dickinson, E. S. Rogers, A. F. Towne, W. D Truesdale, K. B. Koriaby, and W. J. Cook.

The club announced an error in the awarding of the Fourth of July handicap medal to E. M. Cummins, who scored low gross, but not low net. Douglass Smith and R. L. Evans tied for low net and will both be given medals.

JACKSON PARK.

Teams from the Great Lakes Naval Training station and Jackson Park clubs will play the Jackson park course today at 2 o'clock for the benefit of the Red Cross. Lloyd Gullickson, the city champion, and W. Bone, former Hyde Parker, will be on the navy team. Ray McAuliffe, the former Buffalo star, and Harry Nagel, another eastern player, being the other players. Lee Thiltges, Gunnar Nelson, Jack Henry, and Clyde Cadwell will represent Jackson Park.

WESTWARD HO.

C. C. Carnahan, 109—23—86, and C. W. Pank, 99—13—86, tied in the blind bogey event at Westward Ho. J. B. Bush won the Liberty cup with a card of 81—7—74, and F. W. Renshaw won the event against par, finishing 5 down.

RIDGE.

In the semi-final round for the President's trophy, donated by A. D. White, at Ridge, H. R. Baxter defeated M. Le Bosquet, 7 and 6, and H. C. Olmstead defeated D. R. King, 2 and 1. F. H. Kinsley won the Thomas E. Wilson trophy with a card of 95—27—68, J. H. Dunbar taking the thrift stamp prize, donated by E. R. Smith, with a card of 97—26—71.

The first round for the Vice President's trophy, donated by E. R. Goble, resulted as follows:

R. L. Blount defeated L. W. Senneff, 2 up; A. H. Whitley defeated L. C. Hartley, 2 up; W. F. Baice defeated W. S. Momeyer, 2 and 1; H. Keeler won from M. J. Bransfield by default; C. W. Brooks defeated G. W. Oliver, 3 and 1; W. W. Sayers defeated H. T. White, 3 and 2; J. E. Lucius won from J. F. Stewart by default; J. K. Lamb defeated A. D. White, 2 and 1.

Morgan Park trophy—C. O. Gillette defeated W. S. Kline, 3 and 1; W. C. Byer defeated A. Paterson, 4 and 3; C. H. Bull defeated W. Hodson, 2 and 1.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Robert M. Fair, one of the old guard at the Midlothian Country club, won the Old Boy's cup with a card of 97—30—67. F. H. Manter, 94—24—70, and V. F. Mashek, 92—22—70, tied for second place. Judge Kenesaw M. Landis was fourth with 99—28—71. Other leading scores were: E. S. Hunter, 92—20—72; Lloyd Washington, 104—32—72; W. B. Albright, 98—26—72; C. E. Robinson, 89—16—73. Mr. Robinson had low gross of 89.

MAYWOOD.

With a card of 84—14—70, A. A. Luittell led in the elimination round for the Drescher trophy. Other leading scores: C. E. McLean, 86—14—72; W. S. Corbly, 90—17—73; T. E. Henry, 88—13—75; A. Anderson, 95—16—79; G. Munch, 97—17—80.

GARFIELD PARK.

Eight players from the Western Electric company broke even with a team from the Garfield Golf club, half of the match being played at Garfield park and half at Harlem. The Garfield park matches were: B. J. Buffham, 3, and H. J. Rose, Garfield, 0; F. Bierby, 0, and J. Humphrey, Garfield, 3; J. Turner, 0, and O. Humphrey, Garfield, 3; P. F. Dwyer, 3, and E. Wright, Garfield 0.

At Harlem: E. Rautenbush, 2, and R. Shealy, Garfield, 0; M. Kelly, 3, and O. R. Kennedy, Garfield, 0; F. Mueller, 0, and W. Myers, Garfield, 3; W. A. Kuehnle, 0, and J. C. Piety, Garfield, 2.

In the one club event at Garfield J. C. Piety, J. M. Kennedy, and M. W. Moreau were the leaders.

EDGEWOOD.

Edgewood golfers competed in the qualifying round for the club and flight championships, the leading scores being:

Class A—H. W. Hacker, 81; A. V. Peterson, 82; H. H. Mitchell, 83; W. H. Craig, 88; H. B. Hollings, 89; L. T. Freeman, 92.

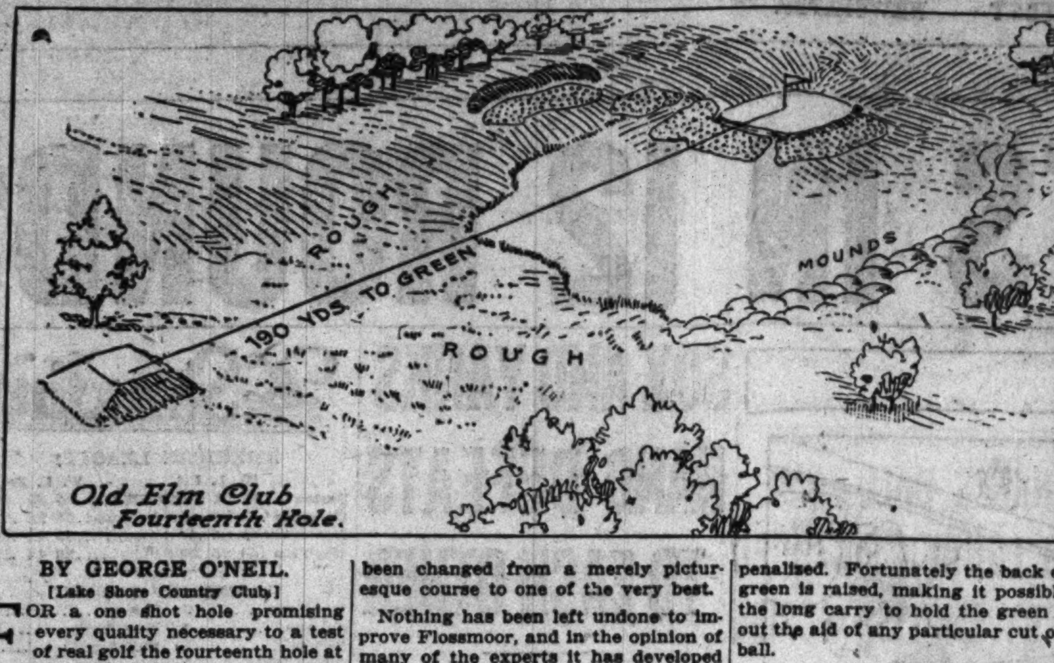
OLD ELM HOLE FINE TEST OF PAR THREE

Flossmoor Architect Names Choice in O'Neil Course for Real Golfers.



Old Elm Club
Fourteenth Hole.

BY GEORGE O'NEIL.
[Lake Shore Country Club.]

FOR a one shot hole promising every quality necessary to a test of real golf the fourteenth hole at Old Elm of Chicago is the first choice of the clever architect of Flossmoor, Harry Collis.

Harry has made a thorough study of golf architecture. He has inspected the leading courses of this country and has had the good fortune to be sent over to England and Scotland by his club on two different occasions to gather the fine points of scientific golf architecture.

C. F. Thompson, president of Flossmoor and of the Western Golf association, realized the importance of sending Mr. Collis abroad. His breadth of view has been rewarded and the club has been repaid many times over for Harry's tips, as Flossmoor—without the loss of any of its beauty—has been changed from a merely picturesque course to one of the very best.

Nothing has been left undone to improve Flossmoor, and in the opinion of many of the experts it has developed marvelously. Ouimet ranks it the best in the country.

The opinion of the architect to whom this preëminence is so largely due deserves special consideration when it comes to choosing holes that reach or approach the ideal.

The fourteenth hole at Old Elm is 190 yards in length. This yardage may fail to suggest that the hole is as difficult as in reality it is, until we add that a full carry to the green is required, as a sweeping sand trap lies in wait for the topped or misjudged iron shot.

The trap is placed sufficiently close to the green to render it impossible to carry short of the green without being penalized. Fortunately the back of the green is raised, making it possible for the long carry to hold the green without the aid of any particular cut on the ball.

Especial attention is called to the inviting path to the left. This route from the tee, however, had better not be chosen, as the slope accentuates a hook in such a manner as to land the ball in a trap.

The golfer who plays for and makes his three is certainly called upon to give the best that is in him. The hole has been well chosen as a test of par golf.

At the same time the bogey player is well taken care of here. The fairway paralleling the right hand side of the green allows him to play safe, but requires him to place a difficult mashie shot for his second in order to obtain the four which is his by rights.

On Local Golf Links

TWILIGHT and night were in the merging process when John P. Harding and Charles C. Kawin reached the twentieth green at Edgewater after a strenuous struggle in the final match in class B in the Spring tournament. So even had been the play that it looked as if they might go on indefinitely, and Scouts George Beaven and Joe Bagley had repaired to the nineteenth hole to borrow a couple of lanterns. John was thirty-five feet from the hole when he addressed the ball for his approach putt, and when he tapped it over the green sward it traveled straight for the cup. Charley was unable to get home in a single putt and the victory went to Harding.

In the match against par [72] three-fourths handicap applied, H. T. Dillon [82] and F. L. Macomber [86] tied, 2 down.

The first match round in the Liberty tournament was postponed, as the committee had not sufficient time to arrange the pairings.

JACKSON PARK.

W. B. Quinn and W. Scates led at Jackson park in class A in the qualifying round of the monthly handicap, getting net scores of 71. Other leading scores were: G. Nelson, 77—4—73; E. Bone, 81—7—74; W. J. Dale, 87—12—75; L. Thiltges, 82—4—78.

Class B—M. Hunter, 88—13—75; F. C. Donacher, 90—14—76; J. T. Hays, 93—17—76; A. Cohn, 94—15—79; W. A. Carline, 94—13—81; A. Thorndyke, 97—17—80; G. Witwer, 98—15—83.

Class C—E. J. Arline, 91—20—71; G. A. Miller, 93—20—73; L. W. Ingle, 100—23—77; A. Johnson, 106—21—85.

WINDSOR.

W. H. Doran, 93—26—67; F. J. Francis, 83—14—69, and H. F. Butcher, 91—18—73, won prizes in the War Savings Stamp handicap at Windsor. H. H. Harrison won the Tracy cup, defeating F. H. Walz, 3 and 2.

EXMOOR.

A four ball team match featured the play at Exmoor, the quartet led by W. M. Plant winning with a score of 14 down. The scores were: W. M. Plant, 88—16—square; H. L. Glidden, 86—7—4 down; J. H. Harmon, 91—10—7 down; A. C. Ridgway, 96—21—3 down. The second team, composed of A. L. Moore, 6 down; F. J. Baker, 5 down; K. McKenzie, 7 down; C. G. Alexander, 3 down, finished 21 down. Leading scores in the sweepstakes handicap were: C. A. McWhinney, 81—13—68; C. G. Alexander, 81—10—71; W. M. Plant, 88—16—72; R. K. Buckman, 91—16—75; A. C. Ridgway, 96—21—75; W. V. O'Brien, 87—11—76; F. J. Baker, 93—16—77; M. J. Agnew, 98—20—78; O. W. Johnson, 86—8—78.

FLOSSMOOR.

With a margin of 3 and 2 C. W. Gilkey disposed of O. Remmer and won the Morava cup at Flossmoor. Remmer, however, found solace in having finished all even with M. W. Borders in the final of the Veterans' trophy contest. The tie will be decided next Saturday. Col. Bogey took a back seat when R. J. Daly finished 6 up in the eighteen hole handicap. F. P. Wood was 4 up, while M. R. Kimball, A. Christ Jr., and G. R. Mitchell checked out 2 up. Wood took the ball sweepstakes with 95—20—75.

WEST PULLMAN.

West Pullman players competed in the qualifying round for the President's cup and in the Red Cross event. Other players will compete today. Leading scores were: L. A. North, 108—26—82; G. W. Moberly, 105—25—85; A. C. Middleton, 99—11—88; S. Burdett, 101—12—89; E. H. Blair, 117—28—89; L. H. Myer, 95—6—89; A. S. Derborn, 122—30—92; C. S. Frisbie, 114—21—93.

EVANSTON.

Players of over 40 and under competed in two classes in the qualifying round for the Walker cups at Evanston. Qualifying scores were:

Over 40—C. E. Brown, 90—22—68; R. H. Purcell, 81—12—69; H. M. Allison, 91—21—70; J. D. Neilson, 88—18—70; J. M. Henry, 95—24—71; K. M. Stannard, 90—19—71; E. P. Pierce, 96—24—72; W. Donaldson, 84—12—72; N. Savaria, 85—13—72; C. B. Semple, 91—17—74; T. E. Telfer, 92—18—74; C. E. Gibson, 100—26—74; C. F. Summers, 100—26—74; A. F. Martin, 93—18—75; Dr. H. Clyde, 87—12—75.

Under 40—M. H. Donahoe, 86—24—62; R. Y. Sanders, 83—20—63; H. C. Mershon, 79—13—66; J. H. Stehman, 82—16—66; W. H. Meyst, 83—15—68; P. M. Conrad, 91—22—69; J. B. Rathvone, 93—24—69; R. B. Johnston, 86—22—64; W. R. Thomas, 83—13—70; F. W. Carpenter, 87—16—71; C. J. McKenna, 82—11—71; M. E. Botts, 98—26—72; C. F. Schriver, 87—13—74; G. I. Bell, 89—15—74; C. D. Huff, 90—16—74; R. H. Evans, 78—4—74.

Winners of low gross and net in the patriotic sweepstakes were:

Class A—H. C. Mershon, 79; R. H. Purcell, 81—12—69.

Class B—J. H. Stehman, 82; R. Y. Sanders, 83—20—63.

Class C—R. B. Johnston, 86; M. H. Donahoe, 86—24—62.

HINSDALE.

H. E. Skinner had low net of 69 in the qualifying round for the Sports and Pastimes trophy at Hinsdale, the other scores being: W. F. Krohn, 70; L. C. Childs, 71; W. T. Woodward, W. J. Totten, 72; E. T. Martin, P. R. Clarke, 73; N. G. Simons, 74; G. R. Wilson, 75; R. T. Snohr, 76; L. F. Wright, 77; R. S. Hyney, 77; C. G. Fellows, 78; H. T. Hiatt, 79; A. J. Ervin, J. M. Wright, 79.

OAK PARK.

P. V. Castle won the blind bogey contest at Oak Park with a card of 96—10—86. Results of the second round for the Jackson cup were: E. L. Hartig defeated W. S. Carr, 2 and 1; I. C. Hagby defeated F. H. Ball, 3 and 2; W. T. Johnson defeated Dr. T. E. Roberts, 2 and 1; P. V. Castle defeated T. H. Jones, 3 and 1.

EDGEBROOK.

Edgebrook members competed in the qualifying round for the Matt Rae cup, the pairings and scores being: P. J. Byrne, 85—16—69, vs. W. M. Young, 83—15—68; H. Du Brock, 94—24—70, vs. R. J. Whitfield, 82—13—69; P. J. Feitel, 97—30—67, vs. H. Kitser, 89—17—72; H. P. Uhleman, 84—16—68, vs. A. R. Amss, 78—8—70.

PETER BERKEY won the trophy presented by Jesse Pumphrey at the Glen View club, when, after a close match, J. C. Slade slid a putt that would have squared the match at the last hole, giving Berkey a margin of 1 up. Some scientific handicapping brought about a close finish in the club handicap, E. Carter winning with a net of 71 and five players tying at 73. The scores were:

E. C. Carter, 95—24—71; S. Wheeler, 79—6—73; C. L. Bartlett, 98—25—73; M. M. Gridley, 84—11—73; A. O. Jones, 84—11—73; L. A. Ferguson, 81—8—73.

Wheeler, Ferguson, Bartlett, and Jones had to use a comptometer to decide their shares in the thrift stamps handicap, but Judge Gridley escaped the worry by not entering.

BEVERLY.

Temporarily, honors in the qualifying round for the club championship rest between Dr. B. A. Duffy and S. W. Widney, who led the Saturday contingent with a brace of 79s. Play in the elimination contest was extended over today in order to give all of the members an opportunity to compete. G. S. Haskell and W. C. Cook will meet in the final for the "4¼s," having gone through the penultimate round of the Liberty bond tournament with respective victories of 2 up on R. L. Whitton and 4 and 3 on J. H. Levis.

WESTMORELAND.

J. B. Bush won the Liberty cup handicap at Westmoreland with 81—7—74. In the eighteen hole match play handicap against par F. W. Renshaw was nearest perfect figures, 5 down. In the blind bogey handicap C. C. Carnahan had 109—23—86 and C. W. Pank 99—13—86.

CALUMET.

Final rounds in the various flights for the President's cup furnished the feature at Calumet. T. F. Barrett won in class A, defeating R. E. Hughes, 3 and 1. In class B M. D. Jenks disposed of J. E. Bray, 2 and 1. J. S. Jenson was victor in class C, eliminating W. W. Sheppard by a like margin. The Ellis cup competition brought out a good field, C. H. Herrmann, 79—4—75, having low gross, and J. S. Seeley, 92—22—70, low net. Seeley also won the match play handicap against par, finishing 1 down. A triple tie developed in the blind bogey event, as follows: J. Rose, 100—22—78; T. F. Barrett, 86—8—78; E. B. Boyd, 96—18—78.

SKOKIE.

Honors in the qualifying round for the Half Century cup at Skokie were taken by A. B. Jones, who completed the round with a card of 85—14—71. E. S. Layman finished second with 91—17—74. Other qualifiers were R. L. Davis, 90—14—76; N. H. Blatchford, 110—34—76; G. J. Miller, 91—14—77; R. S. Clark, 105—28—77; H. D. Harper, 107—30—77; H. C. Smith, 94—16—78; J. L. Lane, 96—18—78; L. M. Allen, 100—22—78; L. A. Clarke, 104—26—78; W. Girling, 104—26—78; B. E. Hamilton, 112—34—78; W. W. Wheelock, 99—20—79; M. B. Orde, 99—20—79, and W. F. Whitman, 113—34—79.

ELMHURST.

In an easy victory F. P. Burnett won the President's cup by defeating B. O. Lantz, 5 and 4.

RESUME RED CROSS MATCHES NEXT WEEK AT EDGEWATER CLUB

For the first Sunday in six weeks Chicago is without a Red Cross golf match, but beginning next Sunday there will be four exhibitions, the first being carded at the Edgewater Golf club, the home of National Champion Charles Evans Jr.

The club has been fortunate in securing Walter Hagen to pair with Chick against Jock Hutchinson of Glen View and Bob MacDonald of Indian Hill. So far the Scotch team has not been defeated this year, but it will oppose a formidable pair in the two American players.

Hagen's First Western Appearance.

Hagen, who for a number of years has been at Rochester, N. Y., is now with the Oakland Hills club of Detroit. It will be his first appearance in a Red Cross event in the west.

The following Sunday Hagen is billed for Flossmoor with Evans, Warren Wood, and Jim Barnes. On July 28 another golfing treat is in store for local fans, as the Ridgemoor club has secured Pat Doyle, the famous Irish player from the Deal Golf club of New Jersey, and Tom Boyd of the Fox Hills club of Staten Island. The eastern team will oppose Bob McDonald and Jock Hutchinson.

Alexa Stirling at Skokie.

A week later the Skokie club will stage an exhibition on which Miss Alexa Stirling, Miss Ernestine Pearce, and Charles Evans Jr., and Professional J. C. Hackbarth are carded.

MISKE TO BOX SMITH.

New York, July 6.—Billy Miske, the St. Paul light heavyweight, was matched today with Gunboat Smith for an eight round bout to take place next Friday at Jersey City.

COMBS WINS IN SWIM EVENTS

Milwaukee, Wis., July 6.—[Special.]—Chicago swimmers made a good showing in the exhibition swimming races held here Saturday night at the new Milwaukee A. C. Len Scherer, Wesley Combs and Walter Earle of the Chicago A. A. were the shining lights. The events comprised the local matches of the national war fund tour undertaken by Duke Kahanamoku, Harold Kruger and Clarence Lane of Hawaii.

Combs won the 220 yard swim in 2:49, with Earle second. Combs also crossed the tape first in the 440 yard event, with Scherer second. Combs negotiated the distance in 6:28.

Earle finished second in the 100 yard swim, which was won by Duke Kahanamoku, the dark-skinned marvel from Hawaii. The time was :55, two second more than the world's record.

H. Topp of the C. A. A. annexed third honors in the fifty yard swim, Clarence Lane of Hawaii taking this event. The time, 24:04, was a second a quarter more than the world's record.

Lew Tendler Wins Over Callahan in 8 Rounds

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—Lew Tendler, the Philadelphia lightweight, outpointed Frankie Callahan of Brooklyn in an eight round bout here tonight. While Callahan put up a hard fight, the Philadelphian was master of the situation at all times and gave a great exhibition of cleverness.

New York Chess Tourney to Be Held August 12-17

The annual midsummer meeting of the New York State Chess association will be held in Rochester, Aug. 12 to 17. The program will include the state championship and the general tournaments and the Geneseo cup match.

TRIPLE BY RUTH GIVES RED SOX 5 TO 4 VICTORY

Drive Nets Three Runs in the Sixth Inning and Beats Cleveland.

Boston, Mass., July 6.—Ruth's three bagger to right with two on base, followed by Wambsganss' bad throw to third to catch Ruth overrunning, scored three runs in the sixth, enabling Boston to win from Cleveland, 5 to 4, and move into first place. The other game of a scheduled doubleheader was postponed because of wet grounds. Score:

DETROIT WINS, 5-2; THEN MACKS, 7-1

Philadelphia, Pa., July 6.—A bunt by Gardner on his third strike upset the Detroit infield and the Athletics then batted out a 7 to 1 victory in the second game of today's double header, after losing the first game, 5 to 2. Gregg allowed one scratch hit in the first game up to the seventh, when his own failure to cover first got him into a hole that proved fatal. It was the fourth game in which he has figured this week.

One of the best catches ever made here was executed by Jamieson in the first game when he leaped high in the air to get Veach's drive, crashing into the wall in midair, but holding the ball. Scores:

OLD TIMERS IN BENEFIT GAMES

A. F. Sheehan, former president of the Chicago league, has organized a permanent club of old time ball players to stage games for tobacco funds, bat and ball funds, and other benefits for soldiers and sailors. The first game is billed for Garden City park next Sunday as a curtain raiser to the Gardens' regular contest. It is planned to have double headers for the home club wherever the old timers play, with a guaranteed sum to go to whatever war benefit the old timers select. Sheehan is booking games at 42 South Wabash avenue.

Included in the old timers' lineup will be Jake Stahl, Barry McCormick, Capt. Campion, Frank McNichols, Jimmy Ryan, Fred Pfeffer, Skel Roach, and other bright lights of baseball of other days.

Aristo Players in Navy Get Gifts at Game Today

Joe Kernan and Artie Olson, former Aristo players, will be given presents by their former mates when they step to the plate this afternoon to play with the team from the Ensign's school of the Naval Reserve at the Municipal Pier against the Aristos at Armitage and Cicero avenues. Big Jeff Pfeffer, former star of the Brooklyn Nationals, will pitch for the new sailors, and Fritz Steinbrecker, former University of Chicago catcher, will be his backstop. The new sailor band from the pier will play at the game.

Byrne and Berghammer of Saints Break Arms

St. Paul, Minn., July 6.—Bobby Byrne, third baseman, and Marty Berghammer, shortstop, of the St. Paul club, will be out of the game indefinitely. Both men recently injured their throwing hands, and Manager Kelley announced that X-ray photographs disclosed broken bones. Kelley has been obliged to use two battery men in his infield.

PIRATES GET 21 HITS, BEATING BRAVES, 17-1; WIN SECOND TILT, 5-4

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 6.—In the first game of a doubleheader against the Boston Braves today Pittsburgh's Pirates put on the best batting performance of the season, piling up seventeen runs and recording twenty-one hits. The score was 17 to 1. Rudolph was banished by Umpire Harrison after the fifth inning for disputing decisions. Canavan took his place and was hit harder than his predecessor. The Pirates also won the second, 5 to 4. Mayer was invincible in the first game and took a large part in driving in runs. Scores:

PHILS LOSE, 10-9; GET 9 IN NINTH

Cincinnati, O., July 6.—Schneider, after allowing one scratch hit in eight innings against Philadelphia, lost control in the ninth and passed the first six men. Regan then pitched to two batters, one of whom singled while the other walked.

Toney relieved Regan and allowed two hits, but got the side out after nine runs had been scored.

Cincinnati knocked out Jacobs in the second, when six runs were scored on five hits and two bases on balls. Chase made the first homer of the season here by a Cincinnati player. Score:

THREE EYES OUT UNTIL AFTER WAR

Bloomington, Ill., July 6.—What promises to be the final chapter in the history of the Three Eyes league will be written when the magnates assemble in Chicago week after next to hear the final report of President A. R. Tearney and receive the money deposited at the opening of the season of 1917 as a guarantee of remaining in the circuit until the close.

Each club advanced $1,000 with the league executive and this will be returned, less any deductions for failure to meet individual obligations.

All concerned are anxious that the affairs of the league be wound up and the money due from the guarantee be returned. It is just one year since the Three Eyes disbanded, the dissolution taking place on July 8.

What's Put Our Cubs on Top? Bill Killefer! That's Answer

BY I. E. SANBORN.

William Killefer, Cub catcher, is an almost daily demonstration of the injustice done to backstops. Never does his name get into the big headlines, and about the only way he can get it into anything except the box score is to make a clean-up hit or a costly error.

Yet Killefer has "made" the Cubs. Tyler, Hollocher, and Paskert have helped a lot, but none of them as much as the all-American backstop.

It may sound foolish to the fans to say Killefer has strengthened the Cub pitching staff more than Alexander could have done if he had not been drafted, but baseball men will understand.

Killefer There Every Day.

Alexander could have pitched only once in four days, or occasionally in three days. Killefer is in there every game, making better pitchers than they were before out of all of Mitchell's slab staff. That's one of the biggest reasons why the Cubs have been the surprise of this season.

One of the first things I noticed when switching from the White Sox to the Cubs recently was the change in the pitching of Vaughn, Hendrix, and Douglas. I had not seen them work since last year and the difference was marked. They were getting a lot more help behind the bat than they had at any time last year in the matter of "working" the batsmen.

None of the Cub pitchers has any more "stuff" than he had before. In fact, Douglas cannot be expected to regain all his former strength and speed until later, as it takes time to recover from an operation for appendicitis. Yet Douglas, returning to the game earlier than expected, has been pitching winning baseball.

Two Heads Study Batsmen.

The reason is that two heads are better than one in pitching as well as in some other things, and now the Cubs have both a pitcher and a catcher thinking how to fool each batsman. And nobody knows the batsmen of the National league any better than Sir William of the Mask.

Killefer is unquestionably the best catcher in the National league. When the deal with Philadelphia brought Alexander and Killefer to the Cubs the former was the headliner, but, in my opinion, the north side club owners were more to be congratulated on obtaining Killefer than on getting his more famous battery mate, and that is not knocking Alexander the Great. He was the best in the National league. But if Killefer, instead of Alexander, had been drafted into the army the Cubs would not have won as many games as they have this season, because Aleck could not have pitched all of them, while Killefer has caught most of them. And the best pitcher in the world can't win without support.

Public Misses Fine Point.

The support given a pitcher by his catcher is greatly underrated by the general run of baseball followers. In proof thereof look back and see if any team ever won a world's series without a good catcher. Not all the world's champion backstops have been great catchers, both mentally and mechanically. Not all of them have been Billy Sullivans, Johnny Klings, Ray Schalks, or Bill Killefers, but they have been good brainy catchers just the same.

The real reason why McGraw has not won a world's pennant since 1905 is that he has not had the right combination behind the bat since then. On the other hand, while the Phillies did not win the world's championship with Killefer catching, he was more responsible for winning the National league pennant that year than was Alexander the Great, although the pitcher was given most of the credit by the uninitiated.

Catcher's Light Under a Bushel.

Powers, Lapp, and Thomas, who were behind the bat for the Athletics when they were supreme in the baseball world for so many seasons, were not as famous as some other catchers, because they lacked brilliant mechanical ability, but they were there with the goods to help their pitchers do the thinking in the critical moments, and that is what turns the tide in many a game of baseball.

The tendency is to give the pitcher and the men back of him too great prominence. Their work is out in the open, where everybody can see it. The catcher's best work is done out of sight, where nobody but the pitcher can see it, carefully concealed from the enemy.

More than one game has been won or lost because a catcher showed two fingers instead of one against the background of his big mitt while squatting silently behind the batsman.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable. [Copyright: 1918.]

LONDON, July 6.—Harold Begbie, describing for the London Chronicle the American baseball game here on July 4, wrote: "His majesty, the king, looking as if he had just received the freedom of the United States as Citizen George of Windsor, drove down to Chelsea behind a pair of high stepping Cleveland bays with our sovereign lady at his side in a pink hat which an American journalist from Pittsburgh, despairing of its exact shade, told me a million of his lady readers would want to know all about.

"Now, the Chelsea football ground does not lend itself to pageantry as a boarding school playground or as a grazing ground for supple goats. It might serve, but as a great international scene it is dull.

Queen Looks Like Young Girl.

"But here came thousands of people, including the royal head of the British commonwealth, and history was made, or if not actually made, was given a most hearty sendoff. Queen Alexandra came, so young looking that the gentleman from Pittsburgh very nearly called me a liar, and Princess Mary and later on the Prince of Wales and Mr. Asquith, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill, and a host of other very agreeable and charming people who looked thoroughly amused or delighted, just as if for all the world they really and truly came out to enjoy themselves.

"But the noise of megaphones was going every two minutes. The Americans yelled and whistled and roared according to megaphonic instructions. A stand full of American sailors sang 'What the Hell Do We Care?' to a tune that was sad and far away, a melody for grandmother nodding over fire. Bands played, but you couldn't hear them. Thousands of people kept up the yell, hundreds kept up the shriek, fifties kept up the shout, scores swung ear-splitting rattles and dozens rang dinner bells till you might have thought there was no such thing as a ration book.

Movie Men Busy Parties.

"In the midst of this din—everybody standing up, changing seats, invading the ground, and getting immensely excited—cinematograph men looked as if they were pursued by bees, the camera men as if wasps were after them, and in the midst of this bewildering scurry the king came down from his box and did the right thing, very naturally and nicely, and everybody was immensely pleased.

"Then the game began. The gentleman from Pittsburgh told me that baseball crams into ten minutes all the nervous tension of three days of a cricket match. I am sure it does. He says a good pitcher gets $16,000 a year. I've not the least doubt of it, but if you think I understood his explanation of the game, or of the brilliant strategy of the players, who wore jockey caps and long stockings and boxing gloves and fencing helmets, and swung Indian clubs, gentle reader, you are in error.

Knows America Is in War.

"But the thing I did understand is that there is a war in America. A chappy in Britain says, 'Welcome.' Then they get together and say, 'Look here, chum, what shall we do to mark this event?' And they both answer in a breath, 'Let's have a game.' Does it matter whether it is baseball, or bowls, or cricket?"

24,000 SOLDIERS IN BOXING DRILL AT CAMP GRANT

Camp Grant, Ill., July 6.—[Special.]—Twenty-four thousand rookies in the depot brigade today engaged in their first real fights under the direction of boxing instructors. The great training field was dotted from end to end with human boxing rings, formed by a dozen soldiers in circles, and two pairs of matched fighters in each of the rings engaged in two rounds of two and one-half minutes each until every rookie in the brigade had completed his baptism of fire.

Boxing training in the brigade to date had consisted in shadow boxing and ring preliminaries. Men were formed facing one another to learn the fundamentals of boxing, but few real blows were exchanged. Today the rookies were matched carefully and fought through real mills.

Officers and instructors were on the alert at each improvised ring to see that the men were evenly matched and that the fighting was kept within the bounds of sport. A few bruised noses constituted the most severe injuries sustained by the recruits.

CICEROS VS. MURLEYS TODAY.

George Halas, the heavy hitting outfielder from the Great Lakes, will be in the outfield for the Ciceros this afternoon when they tackle the Murleys at Forty-eighth court and Twelfth street. He is a brother of Walter Halas, the Cicero twirler. The jackie nine unexpectedly returned to Chicago last night, the eastern trip being suddenly called off by orders from Washington.

UNATRE NET MEN BEAT SPEEDWAY IN LEAGUE PLAY

First Defeat of Season for Losers; Drop Six of Nine Matches.

Unatre club of the Chicago Tennis association administered the first defeat of the season to Speedway by winning six of the nine matches at Speedway. The winners won three matches in singles and all contests in doubles. The victory probably means a title for Unatre in division B. Summaries:

Singles—M. Agay, Speedway, defeated W. Berns, Unatre, 6—3, 6—2; R. S. Forster, Unatre, defeated J. Brotherton, Speedway, 7—5, 6—2; W. S. Hubbard, Unatre, defeated R. Rice, Speedway, 6—4, 6—1; C. Young, Speedway, defeated A. M. Steelhammer, Unatre, 7—5, 6—0; A. Hausske, Unatre, defeated G. Foster, Speedway, 6—4, 6—2; E. Reichenbach, Speedway, defeated H. Hultman, Unatre, 6—0, 6—3.

Doubles—W. Berns and R. S. Forster, Unatre, defeated M. Agay and E. Reichenbach, Speedway, 6—3, 6—2; W. Hubbard and A. Hausske, Unatre, defeated J. Brotherton and R. Rice, Speedway, 6—4, 6—4; H. Magnussen and A. M. Steelhammer, Unatre, defeated J. Kelner and C. Young, Speedway, 6—1, 6—3.

WASHINGTON PK. [9] AT MINOCQUA [0].

Washington Park bettered its standing materially by winning a complete shutout at Minocqua. Summaries:

Singles—Bernard Nath, W. P., beat B. I. Adams, M., 6—0, 6—2; C. Walbert, W. P., beat Wilbur Jackson, M., 6—1, 8—6; Herb. Merts, W. P., beat C. A. Schmidt, M., 6—2, 6—1; Carl Cohn, W. P., beat A. B. Caleen, M., 6—2, 4—6, 6—2; W. N. Tannenbaum, W. P., beat P. E. Harrington, M., 11—9; 6—1; Geo. Woods, W. P., beat A. C. Conolly, M., 6—0, 6—0.

Doubles—B. Nath and H. Merts, W. P., beat R. Adams and W. Jackson, 6—4, 6—4; C. Walbert and C. Cohn, W. P., beat A. Caleen and C. Schmidt, 8—10, 6—3, 6—4; W. Tannenbaum and G. Woods, W. P., beat J. Rohner and P. Harrington, M., 6—2, 4—6, 6—1.

WILSON AVE. [2] AT ROGERS PARK [7].

Capturing the doubles without losing a match, the Rogers Park team landed a 7 to 2 victory at Rogers Park from the Wilson Avenue squad. Summaries:

Singles—P. S. Thompson, Wilson, beat Harvey Smith, R. P., 2—6, 6—4, 6—3; Harry Walsh, Wilson, beat M. B. Joyce, R. P., 7—5, 6—4; Harvey Gilmour, R. P., beat A. Bromley, Wilson, 6—0, 6—3; R. P. Burton, R. P., beat Corbett, Wilson, 6—3, 6—1; Stanton, R. P., beat H. H. Guerraut, Wilson, 6—2, 6—2; Hartney, R. P., beat Newey, Wilson, 6—3, 10—8.

Doubles—H. Gilmour and H. Smith, R. P., beat H. Walsh and P. Thompson, Wilson, 5—7, 6—4, 6—3; R. Burton and M. Joyce, R. P., beat Bromley and Newey, Wilson, 6—3, 6—3; F. O. Ebeling and Stanton, R. P., beat Senton and Corbett, Wilson, 6—1, 6—0.

Division A

HAMILTON PK. [3] AT SOUTH PARK [6].

South Park defeated Hamilton Park, 6 to 3, in the only Division A match of the day. The feature was the defeat of A. C. Neilson of Hamilton Park, captain of the 1918 University of Wisconsin tennis team, by Harold Forster of South Park. Summaries:

Singles—Frank Todd, Hamilton, defeated Lee Campbell, South Park, 6—4, 9—7; Harold Forster, South Park, defeated A. C. Neilson, Hamilton, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1; Paul McCaskey, Hamilton, defeated George O'Connell, South Park, 6—1, 1—6, 6—4; Ben Adler, South Park, defeated E. W. Howland, Hamilton, 8—6, 6—3; J. Benson, South Park, defeated G. Holbrook, Hamilton, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4; H. Penney, South Park, defeated A. Luginbuhl, Hamilton, 6—4, 6—3.

Doubles—Paul McCaskey and H. Neilson, Hamilton, defeated Lee Campbell and Harold Forster, South Park, 6—3, 7—9, 6—2; J. Benson and George O'Connell, South Park, defeated Frank Todd and George Holbrook, Hamilton, 6—3, 6—2; H. Penney and Ben Adler, South Park, defeated E. W. Howland and E. Wilson, Hamilton, 6—0, 6—2.

Division C

N. OAK PARK [0] AT ALBANY PK. [5].

Albany Park made another clean sweep in the five match class, although the visiting North Oak Parkers made a hard fight of it in the respective matches. Summaries:

'WORK OR FIGHT' WILL NOT HURT MAJORS: GARRY

Sure Big Leaguers Are Safe, but Doubts About Minors.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—[Special.]—Garry Herrmann, chairman of the national commission, who is here for the annual convention of the Elks, laid aside the business of the brotherhood for a few minutes to discuss baseball's predicament in the work or fight order. Garry was in an optimistic mood and not for a moment would he admit that the major leagues are in danger.

However, commenting on the recent action of the Dallas exemption board in ordering two minor league players to seek work in an essential line or be placed in class 1, he virtually admitted that so far as the minor leagues are concerned the outlook is gloomy. He then proceeded to explain the difference between the status of the majors and that of the minors.

Salary Makes Big Difference.

"It must be remembered," he said, "that according to the working of the draft law a man cannot be removed from a deferred class and placed in class 1 for engaging in a so-called nonessential occupation when to change his work entails a great financial hardship. In the case of these two men and other minor leaguers it must be considered that their salaries are small, and it is patent that their earning capacity in a more essential industry would be equal to if not greater than their baseball stipend.

"On the other hand, it is equally certain that a major league player could be subjected to severe financial hardship if called upon to give up a line of work netting him anywhere from $400 to $800 a month to go into something which would pay him less.

Long Wait for Decision.

There is a certain routine to be gone through before a definite ruling is reached. The matter will be appealed if an adverse ruling is made by a local board on a test case. It will be carried to the president if need be, and all those things take time. If it be deemed necessary to force major league players into another line of work the final decision will not be reached until the present season is about over.

Fate of Western League Will Be Decided Today

Kansas City, Mo., July 6.—E. W. Dickerson, president of the Western league, announced today that a meeting of club owners would be held in Omaha tomorrow to decide whether the league shall continue playing throughout the season. Dickerson pointed out that 75 per cent of the organization's players had already been called to the colors, and that it was expected that they would lose 15 per cent more. There was a possibility, he said, that four of the teams might continue to operate instead of the eight clubs that now compose the league.

FRED AND JACK STILL HOPE FOR TILT IN ARENA

Mike Collins Plans to Hold Much Buffeted Title Bout in Minnesota.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Looks as if "Ferocious Frederick" Fulton and Jack Dempsey were going to have a difficult time getting together to settle their little argument concerning heavyweight superiority. These rivals of Farmer Jess Willard, who now hibernates near Lawrence, Kas., are going to make a determined effort to battle, despite the fact that opposition has developed in at least one community.

It seems that Mike Collins, manager of Fulton, is going to be a big factor in making the fight, for Michael is working on a plan which will make him the promoter of the scrap. Collins evidently doesn't think that present conditions in the pugilistic game due to the war will prevent the bout, and is willing to make Dempsey a good guarantee if he will sign articles of agreement.

Pins Faith on Minneapolis.

Collins believes that Minneapolis is his "ace in the hole," for it is in the Gopher city, which threw out the championship between Jess Willard and Fulton, that he would stage the contest. It seems Collins has plenty of backing in this move, but it will be of interest to watch what folks up Minneapolis way do when they learn that it is planned to have the contest there.

A doubtful situation is created by the action which prevented Willard and Fulton getting together, a precedent having been set that will not augur well for the proposed Fulton-Dempsey scrap. However, it is possible that there may be no opposition in Minneapolis, for this is not a championship bout and there are other considerations that must not be overlooked. The state of Minnesota and the United States have profited handsomely through legalized boxing, according to information imparted by a man who should know what he is talking about.

Part of Gate for Taxes.

Ten per cent of the money that is taken in at a fight in Minnesota goes to the tuberculosis home, while the war tax has aided the country in a material way.

The fact that Baltimore refused to permit these scrappers to wallop each other would not indicate that a like move will be made in Minneapolis. Fulton is a Minneapolis favorite, and that may make some difference. Then, too, even after a permit was refused for Willard and Fulton to box, Dempsey and Billy Miske were allowed to scrap ten rounds before a crowd that paid something like $20,000 to watch the encounter.

However, this does not mean that there will be a fight in Minneapolis or any other place. As has been stated before, these are war times, and war times are far different than any other. It's just like tossing a coin—"heads, they fight; tails, they don't."

Collins' Move Shows Confidence.

The determination of Collins to effect a meeting of Fulton and Dempsey would make it seem that Michael has no fear at all of the outcome. It would seem that Collins believes that his man can trim Dempsey and is just brimful of confidence. This confidence evidently is shared by Fulton, but there's plenty of confidence in another quarter, and that's the environment that houses Dempsey and his manager, Jack Kearns.

TEACHES 26,204 SOLDIERS TO BOX AT CAMP CUSTER

Camp Custer, Mich., July 6.—[Special.]—Within less than two months' time Billy Armstrong, camp boxing instructor here, has taught 26,204 soldiers to box. These figures are from the army records and do not represent estimates or guesses. On two occasions Armstrong has had more than 2,400 men in his classes.

Although he concedes the value of boxing exhibitions between experienced fighters as a stimulus to novices, Armstrong does not believe that promoting exhibitions should constitute a major portion of his work. Teaching as many green men as possible how to use their fists effectively is his greatest task, and Billy is devoting every energy to this very stunt.

Armstrong an Experienced Tutor.

The Custer instructor is no novice at the fighting game. More than twenty years ago he was training champions, and when Kid Lavigne, the famous Michigan lightweight, defeated Joe Wolcott at Mechanics' pavilion in San Francisco in 1897 it was Armstrong who trained the Kid and worked in his corner during the fight. Billy went to the Montreal Athletic club as boxing instructor in 1907. When the war broke out in 1914 he was given a similar position in the Canadian army. He worked in Camps Petewawa and Valcartier, and it was while at the latter place that he trained the troops which later took part in the famous engagement at Vimy ridge.

Offers Services to U. S. Army.

When the United States entered the war Armstrong offered his services to this country. He was accepted and assigned to Camp Hancock. Later, when the Charley White mixup left boxing conditions at Custer in chaos, Armstrong was picked as the man most likely to straighten out the situation. This he has done to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Browne and Wirine Take Coast Doubles Title

Los Angeles, Cal., July 6.—Nat B. Browne and Frank Winne, Los Angeles, won the Pacific coast doubles tennis championship on the Beverly Hills courts today from Wallace Bates and Edward Levy, San Francisco, 4—6, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2. Maurice McLoughlin and Ward Dawson won the title in 1916. No championship match was played last year. The tournament was played for the benefit of the American Red Cross.

"THE PIKE ARE RUNNIN'."

FROM the lakes up north comes the good news that the pike are biting, by which is meant not the great northern pike but his nibs the wall eye or pike perch or jack salmon or dore, or some one of the other dozen or so names this popular fish possesses.

It must be admitted that pike fishing, as ordinarily practiced, lacks the thrills of trout fishing with flies or of taking bass or muskies on a casting rod. Compared with some other kinds of angling, it is rather tame, but it just fills the bill for the man who wants "jest fishin'"—who doesn't know anything about flies or casting or the other fancy curves of the angling game.

The pike is one of the first fishes to spawn in the spring, usually beginning that function before the ice is gone. After that they wander about quite a bit until the warm weather sets in in earnest. Then they congregate in the cooler spots—mostly in the vicinity of spring holes, as this fish is a lover of cold water. During this period they are said to be "running," a term borrowed from salt water fishermen.

One look at the pike should give the observant angler a hint as to his habits. His sharp teeth proclaim his fondness for flesh—minnows particularly—and his large glassy eyes tell plainly that he inhabits the darkness of deep places.

The usual method of capturing the wall eye, in lakes, is to drift slowly over the cold, deep spots with one or two lines out, each hook baited with a minnow, and obviously it is to the angler's advantage to have a good idea as to the location of the deep water spring holes. When a bite is forthcoming the angler drops his anchor and fishes that spot a little while. Throwing a heavy anchor overboard with a big splash lacks finesse and the wise pike fisherman takes the time and trouble to rig up some sort of a pulley arrangement that will make the handling of the anchor a quick and noiseless operation.

In drifting for pike a sinker heavy enough to keep the hook within a foot of the bottom should be used. A line spreader, enabling the angler to use two hooks on one line—one baited with a minnow and the other with a frog is a good stunt—will be found useful, and some pike fishermen favor the device known as a chugging rig, much used by lake trout anglers. The chugging rig is good where snags are likely to be encountered, as it keeps the lure the proper distance from the bottom, and if a tangle results usually the sinker is all that is lost.

In swift rivers the pike is found in the fast water at the foot of rapids, below dams and log jams, and the minnow or spinner and fly makes a good lure for such spots. On slower streams it is customary to float down stream and in such fishing we have had good luck with a large size Colorado spinner baited with an angleworm—a hint for those who fish the Kalamazoo, at Saugatuck, and similar streams.

The fighting ability of the pike varies in different waters. We have caught them when they came up like a bucket of water and at other times we have found them able to put up a good scrap. We got one on the Kankakee one fall when fly fishing for bass and the way he fought we thought we had hooked on to some kind of a sea "sarpint." He weighed less than seven pounds, but it required several minutes of give and take before we dared to slip the net under him.

It is not often that one runs into the peculiar conditions that will induce the pike to rise to a fly, but it is lively fishing—a well conditioned pike gives a good account of himself when on a light fly rod. Fly fishing for pike was once a popular pastime at Lake Pepin and other stretches of the upper Mississippi.

Whatever way one catches Sir Pike he is always a welcome addition to any string because he is a major leaguer as a table fish, his flesh being snow white, flaky, and flavory, with few tiny, "no see 'em" bones.

Elks Eat, Drink, Make Merry, and Add $2,500 to War Funds

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Three thousand persons attended the barbecue and sport carnival of Chicago lodge No. 4, B. P. O. E., at White Sox ball park, and saw the Chicago Elks defeat an aggregation of Elks from Milwaukee, 10 to 2, in the main sporting attraction. About $2,500 was realized for the navy relief and Red Cross funds. W. H. Rowan, chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, said part of the proceeds also will go to the athletic fund of the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

The money realized does not include the amount which will be brought by auctioning the baseballs autographed by President and Mrs. Wilson and Congresswoman Jeanette Rankin of Montana. Officials said the balls would be auctioned off at a monster rally to be held in the lodge home in the near future.

Lots of Eats and Drinks.

Although a larger crowd was expected, the gathering was big enough to make such an impression on the Elks as to make the barbecue an annual affair. Although the price of admission, $2.50, was considered a little high, the crowd more than got its money's worth by eating plenty of beef, pigs' feet, corn on the cob, and partaking of drinks of various kinds.

The baseball game, the first sporting event to be decided, resulted in an easy win for the Chicago Elks, who put the game on ice in the third inning by scoring eight runs.

Jackies' Drill Stirs Spectators.

After the ball game a drill under arms by 150 jackies from Great Lakes Naval station, under Ensign Jack Kennedy, was held. The exhibition, which was given to music by a jackie band of fifty pieces, brought rounds of applause.

Wrestling was next on the program and the comedy bout between Marty Cutler and Jack Dribbs proved the most interesting.

In the opening mat bout two naval training station wrestlers were brought together. Minkley of the Sixth regiment, former amateur light heavyweight and heavyweight champion, defeated Natt of the Seventh regiment in a one fall match. He won the bout in 9:15 with a head scissors and body scissors. In the other bout Ben Reuben of the naval station defeated Steve Lechsky of St. Louis in 8:20 with a body scissors and bar arm in 8:20.

Baseball score:

Chicago ....0 0 8 2 *—10 15 4
Milwaukee ....1 0 0 1 0— 2 6 7
Batteries—Horein and Ranahan; Gora and O'Brien.

WATER CARNIVAL FREE TO PUBLIC WITH BIG RACES

Meeting of McGillivray and Kahanamoku Features C. A. A. Show.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian, and Perry McGillivray of Great Lakes Naval Training station, the two fastest short distance swimmers in the world, meeting in a series of races which will attract the attention of the entire aquatic world, other events have been arranged to make the Chicago Athletic association patriotic water carnival in Lincoln Park lagoon next Saturday and Sunday the greatest ever held in Chicago.

The meeting of Duke and Perry should be bait enough to draw thousands of swimming enthusiasts to the north side park. It will be the first meeting of the pair in open water since 1915, and great racing should result, as McGillivray is bent on beating the Hawaiian in the presence of his friends.

At Least Two Races Probable.

The events in which this pair of great water dogs will meet has not been decided, but it is almost certain there will be a short and long sprint race. Duke will insist on a short race, while Perry will demand a long one. The Hawaiian is at his best over distances up to and including 100 yards, while McGillivray will have a better chance to win if they race 220 yards.

The distances will be arranged today, when the visitors arrive in Chicago. Cherry Circle officials have not yet found opponents for Lane and Kruger. The former is a sprinter and the latter a back stroke expert. Physical Director Delaney, who will have charge of the big show, is figuring on placing Lane and Walter Earle in the races with Duke and McGillivray, unless the public demands a two man race only. Davy Jones, former Illinois A. C. back stroke swimmer, now at the Great Lakes, may be pitted against Kruger.

Race with Duke His Aim.

P. McGillivray is holder of the world's 150 yard back stroke record, but will not swim in this event, as he fears it will hurt his training for the free style. Efforts were made to get Perry to swim back stroke, but he flatly refused by saying he was out to beat the duke and will not let anything interfere with his training.

Since they landed in America and started their tour the Hawaiians have been breaking records with regularity. They have not made new marks in standard events, but have clipped several seconds off records for intermediate distances.

Comparison of Two Stars.

Comparing the swimming ability of Duke and Perry, the former has the best marks in the 50 and 100 yard swims. The Hawaiian holds the world's record for 50 yards at :23. The best McGillivray has done over this distance is :24 1-5. Duke also holds the world's record for the century at :53. Perry's best mark over this distance is :54. In the 220 yard swim McGillivray's best time is 2:24 1-5, while the best the Duke has done is 2:26 2-5.

There also will be races for boys and girls of the playgrounds system. The events for women will be a 50 yard swim on Saturday and a 100 yard breast stroke and fancy diving from the low board on Sunday. The boys' races will consist of a 100 yard swim on Saturday and a 150 yard back stroke and a 200 yard breast stroke on Sunday.

Between these events will be exhibitions of high and low diving by the best talent available. Arthur Hartung, National A. A. U. diving champion, who competes for the Illinois Athletic club, will give exhibitions from the low board, while W. P. Heyn will perform from the high stand. Other divers of note also will take part, including George Gaidzik, Frank Bornaman, and Dr. Swatek.

Other Clubs Volunteer Help.

In its attempt to make this aquatic show the greatest ever held in Chicago, C. A. A. officials will have the cooperation of William Bachrach of the Illinois A. C.; Tom Robinson, Northwestern university; Dr. White, University of Chicago; Towne, Independence park, and Croak of Nicholas Senn High school.

John L. Barchard, chairman of the C. A. A. athletic committee, who is looking after arrangements for the spectators, said that 50,000 persons would be able to view the races. No fee will be charged and no collections will be taken up for any cause.

CUEISTS RAISE MONEY TO BUY 4 AMBULANCES

Chicago and Illinois Lead the Country in War Campaign.

Four ambulances will be donated to the government by the billiard players of Illinois as a result of the billiard ambulance fund campaign through the winter. Plans and specifications received last week from the surgeon general's office at Washington indicate the state association has enough money in the hands of Treasurer George B. Dryden to purchase four and possibly five ambulances.

Chicago outstripped the other leading billiard centers, and with the assistance of other towns in the state, led all the other states.

Exhibitions Bring Big Sums.

Most of the money was raised by exhibitions, including the big three cushion tournament staged at the Inter Ocean building, in which fourteen of the leading players of the country contributed their services. Exhibitions at the Chicago Athletic association, Illinois Athletic club, Hamilton club, Elks' club, and at a number of outlying clubs helped swell the fund, while the leading players appeared in exhibitions at Rockford, Peoria, Aurora, Elgin, Blue Island, and other towns.

One of the features was the appearance of Miss Clara Katherine Haywood of Philadelphia who, with Augie Kieckhefer, Charley Morin, Lew Shaw, and Bob Cannefax, appeared for a week at the Palace theater through the kindness of Martin Beck, this exhibition netting $500 for the fund.

Other Players Who Helped.

Among the other players who contributed their services were R. I. McGinnis, Percy Collins, Mike Petrie, John Moore, Joe Capron, William Huey, and Bob Lord.

Dr. Harley Parker, president of the state association, received good support from the other officials.

WOMEN'S SWIM AT EDGEWATER

Seven women's events have been listed by the management of the Edgewater Beach hotel for its open swimming meet next Saturday at the beach in the rear of the hotel. Entries can be made at the Edgewater Beach hotel or at Thomas E. Wilson & Co.

The following events will be decided: 50 and 100 yard swims, 50 and 100 yard breast stroke, 50 yard back stroke, fancy diving, and 220 yard free style swim. Cups and medals will be given winners of the first three places in each event.

O'Connell Football Team to Play Army and Navy

The champion O'Connells and a picked team of army and navy stars will decide the Gaelic football championship of the state of Illinois at Gaelic park, Forty-seventh street and California avenue, today. Bicycle races also are on the program.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. Metcalfe

DOUBLE dummy problems always depend on forcing discards to secure the marvelous solutions. In regular deals many opportunities occur for shattering the enemies' defenses by similar tactics, and players should learn to recognize the situations, as in the deal which follows:

Suppose the last five cards to be like this, spade being trumps: West, spades, 10; hearts, A, J; clubs, 2; diamonds, 4. North, hearts, K, Q; clubs, A; diamonds, K, Q. East, hearts, 3, 2; clubs, K; diamonds, A, J. South, hearts, 10, 9; clubs, J; diamonds, 10, 9.

If west led the ten of spades north could not win a single trick, although his cards appear formidable.

No other strategy would have availed the declarer in the first deal.

THE HANDS.

North:

H.—K, Q, 10, 8, 4.
C.—Q, J, 9, 5, 2.

West secured eleven tricks.

When the dummy's cards were exposed it seemed that the declarer must certainly lose one trick each in the spade, heart, and diamond suits.

As the play progressed a possible method of doing the impossible began to develop, until the last defense of north was destroyed by the trump barrage of west.

If at trick 10 north had discarded the queen of spades east would have kept the knave of spades and thrown away a club.

Had north led the king of spades at trick 3 and refrained from gathering in his heart trick west would have been defeated. But north can hardly be blamed for his failure to foresee the final situation at that stage of the game.

Many inquiries are received as to whether the opponents of the declarer may score for making a small slam or grand slam. The inquiry usually states that this point is not covered by the laws.

The fact is that the laws are explicit and either side may secure the bonus.

Law 7 reads: "Slam is made when partners take thirteen tricks. It counts 100 points in the honor score."

Law 8 reads: "Little slam is made when partners take twelve tricks. It counts fifty points in the honor score."

The word declarer would be used instead of partners if the intention were to give the bonus to one side only.

The next deal shows one of the reasons why so many players report that they always hold such bad cards.

West secured nine tricks.

South criticized his partner for not saving the game by the lead of the ace of hearts at trick five. North admitted the loss, but stated that with no long suit in dummy there seemed to be no danger of west securing discards of whatever hearts that player might hold.

The play of the deal was in the south hand. By simply going through the deal in routine fashion south allowed the declarer to secure three odd, when the result should have been three odd for north and south.

South should have opened his heart suit at trick four. If west held both black aces, as was probable, north might have some strength in hearts. If north held either black ace there would be no trouble about the fourth trick in diamonds.

Should it develop that west had a hand of exceptional strength and a trick in the diamond suit should be lost it would make but little difference.

But whatever might be found in the west and north hands, this much should have been clear to south at trick four.

One more diamond trick would not save game, and it would be very bad to have the club suit, the heart suit, or the spade suit started from the north hand.

When the final declaration is no trump, one of the most important duties of each opponent is to figure out, after dummy is exposed, what high cards the declarer must hold.

In some cases the deductions are accurate and easy, in others a number of possibilities must be considered. But the effort always helps and practice makes the process most interesting.

APARTMENTS HOLD UP LANGUID REAL ESTATE MARKET

BROKERS START ON THEIR SUMMER RURAL OUTINGS

Industrial Activity in Calumet District War Work Center.

The week in which the "Fourth" chances to fall has come to be recognized by real estate men as about the dullest of the year. It marks the official entrance on the scene of that annual visitor, "midsummer dullness," and large investors, and many brokers, make it the getaway time for their usual summer outings.

Owing to the intense war activities of the nation this dullness is more pronounced than usual this year, with the result that the week's market was conspicuous by the absence of transactions of any magnitude or importance. In only one class of property was there a semblance of activity, and that was apartment property, which made a surprisingly good showing under the circumstances.

There was a fairly free movement of the cheaper class of property, but nothing of any moment doing in any field outside of apartment property. Manufacturing property, for some time the only live wire in the list, was without a single important representation in the week's market, and the same is true of business as well as residence property.

The market, however, is not without some encouraging features, notably the great industrial activity in the Calumet district, particularly, with the resulting sharp demand for living accommodations for the rapidly increasing number of employés.

Probably the most noteworthy development was the announcement that the Thompson-Starrett company has been awarded the contract for the big $4,500,000 ammunition plant to be built for the Symington-Anderson company at Seventy-fourth street and Ashland avenue. It is expected to have it completed within four or five months, and the fact it will afford employment to about 8,000 or 10,000 persons makes it a most important development in a real estate way in that part of the city, as it will necessarily create a sharp demand for increased living as well as business accommodations.

The plant will occupy between forty and fifty acres, bounded by Ashland avenue, Robey street and Seventy-fourth street and the Belt Line railway. The major part of the property was acquired from H. H. Porter, the last purchase comprising the business property at the southwest corner of Ashland avenue and Seventy-fourth street, 100x125 feet, which was acquired from Peter A. Contes of Contes Bros. for a stated consideration of $35,000.

The plant will comprise several buildings grouped about the machine and forge shop sections, and will be of one and two stories in height, with saw tooth roofs. The largest building will be the machine shop, which will be located on Seventy-fourth street, with ground dimensions of 1,240 by about 240 feet. The forge shop, which will be located on Ashland avenue, will have ground dimensions of 890x370 feet. The first buildings to be erected will be the tool houses, for the manufacture of dies and tools. Excavating work for gas already has begun opposite Wood street. A gradually increasing force of men will be employed, and in a short time they will probably number between 2,000 and 3,000. The plant will be devoted mainly to the manufacture of 155 millimeter shells, and its capacity is estimated at about 10,000 a day.

The work of construction will be pushed to as speedy a conclusion as possible, and it is expected to have it completed and in operation inside of five months. It is said the plant will be the largest of its kind in the world.

Several weeks ago it was reported that the Symington interests had been authorized by the war department to proceed with the construction of the plant, following which there was reported much mysterious buying in the territory where the plant is to be located, but it was not until within about a week that it was definitely connected with the plans of the Symington-Anderson company. As previously indicated, it promises to bring about much activity in property in that vicinity, and property owners are decidedly optimistic regarding the outlook.

First Baptist Church in Oak Park Buys Lot

The deal has been closed and the deed filed for record by which the First Baptist church of Oak Park has acquired the Herrick property on Oak Park avenue, at the northwest corner of Ontario street, as the site for a new church to cost about $150,000. The property has a frontage of 132 feet on Oak Park avenue and 374 feet on Ontario street, through to Grove street, and a north frontage of 210 feet. The improvements comprise two old frame dwellings erected about thirty years ago, one of which is occupied by Mrs. O. W. Herrick.

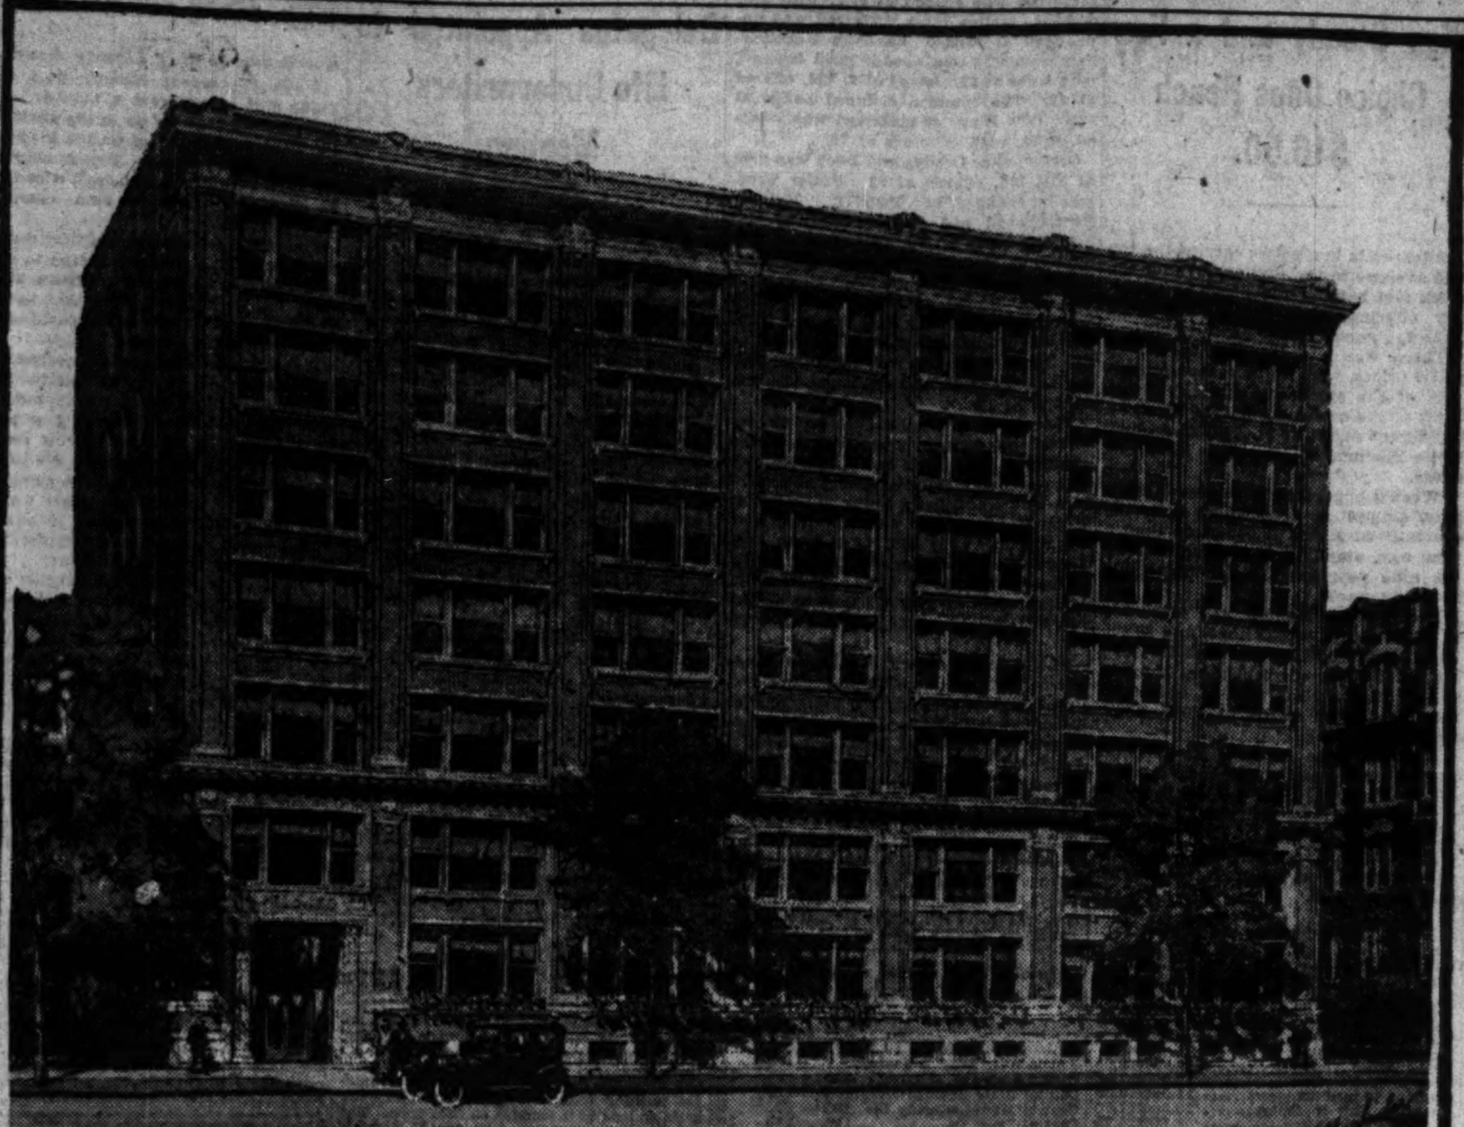
A stated consideration of $33,500 is named in the deed. Several years ago the church acquired the property at the southwest corner of Oak Park avenue and Randolph street, 150x200 feet, as a site, but it was never improved, and the Herrick property acquired as being more suited to the needs of the church. It is understood the Randolph street corner will be disposed of.

Theaters Will Take Out Licenses, Says Ettelson

Corporation Counsel Ettelson announced yesterday that the large downtown theaters would be licensed under the city's anti-scalping ordinance.

Mr. Ettelson said attorneys for the theaters had notified him that they would take out the licenses under the ordinance, but would reserve the right to make protests later.

NEW NORTH CENTRAL DISTRICT BUILDING



One of the most attractive of the new buildings in the new north central district is the Pelouze building at 230 East Ohio street, near North Michigan avenue, now known as the "Army building," which has just been leased to the United States government to be occupied by the Central department, U. S. army, Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry commanding. It is a seven story and basement fireproof office building structure of the highest class of construction, and was completed a few months ago at a cost of about $400,000. It contains approximately 90,000 square feet of floor space, there being 11,600 square feet to a floor. The entire building will be occupied by the different departments of the army, which have been centralized in the building, which belongs to Col. William N. Pelouze. The lease was negotiated by Frederick M. Bowes of the Bowes Realty company.

RENTING AGENTS GET TIPS ON HOW BEST TO USE COAL

At a special meeting of the agent members of the Chicago Renting Agents' association, held on July 2 at the Chicago real estate board rooms, it was stated by the fuel committee that they had made a careful study of the different methods of operating steam plants in apartment buildings for the purpose of saving fuel and eliminating smoke and made the following recommendations:

First—That all boilers be examined, all defective grate bars, ash pit doors, and other parts of the boiler be repaired and put in good condition.

Second—That all cracks or leaks in the brick work be pointed up and sealed.

Third—That the height of the chimneys be increased for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the boiler and to eliminate some of the smoke. This committee also calls attention to the fact that in storing Illinois and Indiana coal great care should be used to avoid placing it where it will become damp and that paper, rags, or other combustible material should not be put in contact with coal.

That all Illinois and Indiana coal should be thoroughly wet just prior to firing, in order to produce better combustion and assist in eliminating smoke and dust. This coal, however, should not be wet when put in the basement for storage purposes.

This committee further recommended that all property owners fill up their buildings to the full capacity and increase the storage capacity if necessary, as it requires one-third more space for Illinois and Indiana coal, and that as soon as the heating plants are started in the fall that coal be ordered and put in as it is used, in order to maintain an ample supply of coal for the entire season, and that in storing coal a portion of mine run be used together with egg or lump.

The attention of the members of the association is called to the June bulletin of the association for further information on these subjects.

Coming Week' Concerts in Parks of South Side

Evening band concerts announced for the coming week by the South Park commission are:

Wednesday—Calumet park, Chicago Letter Carriers' band.

Thursday—Washington park, Chicago band.

Friday—McKinley park, Civic Music federation.

Saturday—Ogden park, Metropolitan band; Gage park, Sindler band.

Sunday—Davis square, Illinois Naval Militia band; Armour square, Western Electric Company band.

The concerts start at 7:30 p. m.

Small Island in Calumet and House Purchased

A quitclaim deed was filed for record covering the small island, about a block in extent, about 200 feet east of the foot of One Hundred and Sixteenth street in Lake Calumet, which was conveyed by Rudolph Ziffel to J. O. Ingebretsen. The deed was executed April 19, 1907, and it bears the statement by the grantor that the property has been occupied by him for twelve years prior to the execution of the transfer to Ingebretsen. It is improved with a house occupied by the Ingebretsen family.

CURE-ALL DOC HIT BY FRAUD ORDER OF U. S.

Dr. J. Russell Price, one of Chicago's ancient cure alls, has been denied the right to use the United States mails, a fraud order being issued from Washington to put an end to certain activities. Dr. Price or some one using that name has been advertising widely of late in foreign languages and has worked up a considerable trade among the ill of Cuba, Porto Rico, South America, and other distant places.

The same fraud order names V. Leverne, 208 North Fifth avenue, Chicago. This is merely a "private name" used by "Price" to correspond with "patients" who seek to avoid publicity, as he explains in his mailing matter.

The offices of "Dr. J. Russell Price" are on the third floor of the Terminal building, Clinton and Madison streets. They are connected with the office of Charles E. Cessna, of former loan shark fame. Mr. Cessna's office is that of the Santa Rosa plantation.

Ilg Company Chief Buys Land for His Employes

Robert A. Ilg has purchased several parcels of land on Kenilworth avenue, near Niles. He now has twenty-three acres, which he has turned over to the Ilg Electric and Ventilating company for the use of its employés. The property will be improved and used as a recreation farm. A large part of the land is virgin forest, in which five cottages will be built at once. These will be added to as needed. There will be an opportunity for gardening and the proceeds will be divided among the employés. The women and children will also be provided with means for recreation. Mr. Ilg is enthusiastic as to the benefits which will accrue to employés by reason of this enterprise. Casey & Bell represented Mr. Ilg in purchasing his various parcels of land.

351,182 War Savings and 911,434 Thrift Stamps Sold

Postmaster William B. Carlile only yesterday was able to compile a complete tabulation of the sales of Thrift and War Savings stamps by the main postoffice and various postal stations of the city. These showed that 351,182 War Savings stamps and 911,434 Thrift stamps were sold during the week, and gave an indication of the enormous amount of work that was thrust upon the postoffice by the drive.

GOVERNMENT CLAMPS LID ON NEW BUILDING

The government seems to be clamping the lid down tighter in connection with building operations, and on Monday it issued another statement practically forbidding all building operations, except for purposes directly allied with war work. This is especially true with reference to the territory north of the Potomac river and east of the Allegheny mountains.

In Chicago the edict has gone forth putting a stop to construction work on the new west side Union station until after the close of he war. The new boulevard link project also seems to be in danger, and altogether the outlook for these highly important projects, as well as building operations of practically all kinds, is anything but promising. There undoutbedly will be much disappointment among property owners in the Union station zone at the government's stand with reference to the new terminal, but as a rule it will be accepted in good spirit, one reason being the prospect of a continued dull real estate market until after the close of the war.

As regards building for general business and living purposes, the attitude of the government will work little harm. Indeed, there are many who believe it will work a decided benefit, as it will serve as a corrective to the overbuilding from which the city has suffered for several years, especially with reference to apartment construction, as well as business buildings both downtown and in the outlying districts.

Advertising the War Keynote of Ad Convention

Advertising the war will be the keynote of the annual convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World, which assembles in San Francisco tomorrow. A delegation, representing the Advertising association of Chicago, is on its way to the convention.

$240,000 TRADE IN APARTMENTS LEADS THE WEEK

Market's Showing in Flat Property Is Best for Some Time.

As indicated elsewhere, the market's activities were confined principally to apartment property, and the showing was the best for several weeks, especially with respect to the character of the properties involved.

The feature was a deal involving south and west side property in which the consideration was around $240,000. The seller was Samuel Lanski and the purchaser was J. Herbert Brand of Elmira, N. Y. The largest transaction covered the twenty-five apartment building of four, five, and six rooms, on 69x215 feet of ground, at 5130-38 South Park avenue, the building having a reported gross annual rental of $14,000. It sold for an indicated consideration of $90,000, subject to an incumbrance of $65,000.

Another was the three story store and flat building at the southwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Woodlawn avenue, lot 118x69 feet, containing six stores and sixteen apartments and having a reported gross annual rental of about $10,500. It sold subject to an incumbrance of $57,500 and is said to have gone in at a valuation of about $80,000.

West Side Deal.

The west side properties were two fifteen apartment buildings, each on 50x125 feet of ground, at the southwest corners of Wellington and Troy streets and Richmond and George street respectively, each with a gross annual rental of about $5,000 and each selling subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. They are said to have gone in at a valuation of about $35,000 each. In exchange for the equity, which approximated $75,000, the purchaser conveyed 12,000 acres of land in Palm Beach county, Florida, about twenty miles from Palm Beach and about five miles from the ocean on the east coast. Charles Lansky was the broker.

A big deal in East Chicago, Ind., flat property was reported in the sale by Michael Hughes of South Chicago to Oscar W. and Martha Nelson of Lansing, Ia., of the Atlas building on Forsyth avenue, between One Hundred and Forty-fourth and One Hundred and Forty-fifth streets. The building, which occupies a lot 162 by 150 feet, contains forty-two apartments and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $24,000. The sale was subject to an incumbrance of $90,000, the consideration not being disclosed, but it is said to have been in the neighborhood of $165,000. The purchasers conveyed in exchange a highly improved farm of 3,117 acres in Houston county, Minnesota, together with the stock and personal property, also a saw mill in Lansing, all being clear. George W. Stewart represented both parties.

$72,500 Transfer.

The eighteen apartment building on 100 by 122 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Greenview and Arthur avenues was conveyed by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, to Leonard C. Lewis, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $62,500. It subsequently was conveyed by Mr. Lewis to Julia Taken for an indicated consideration of $72,500, subject to $65,500.

Oak Park also furnished an interesting transaction in the sale by Joseph Ankebrant to August Dombrow of the twenty-four apartment building, lot 100x180 feet, at the southwest corner of Lombard avenue and Pleasant street, at an indicated consideration of $79,333, subject to an incumbrance of $54,233, the seller taking in part payment the property at the northeast corner of Seventy-seventh and Carpenter streets, 50x125 feet, improved witht a two story ten flat building, at a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000. William R. Higgins and Frank S. Bates were the brokers.

Woman Sells to Woman.

They also sold for Katherine Cunningham to Bessie Brust the six flat building on 50x125 feet of ground at the northeast corner of Adams street and Lockwood avenue at a reported consideration of $22,500, subject to an incumbrance of $9,500.

A noteworthy transaction in north side apartment property was reported in the sale by John Hulla to Augusta C. Warnecke of the high grade fifteen apartment building on a lot 72x130 feet at the northeast corner of Racine avenue and Montrose boulevard for a reported consideration of $66,000, subject to an incumbrance of $33,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the property at 1663-1705 Dayton street, between North avenue and Willow street, lot 96x125 feet, with a ten flat building, a four flat frame and brick building, and a frame cottage, at a reported $15,000, clear; also the brick building on twenty-five feet at 2338 Clifton avenue at a valuation of $7,000, clear. The Lake View Real Estate exchange represented both parties.

Another Oak Park transaction, made a matter of record, covers the twelve apartment building in Ridgeland avenue, 220 feet north of Washington street, lot 100x171 feet, west front, which has been conveyed by Frank W. Garn to Arthur Weinreb for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

Drexel Avenue Deal.

William S. Herely has acquired from Catherine M. Morrison the apartment property in Drexel avenue, 160 feet south of Fifty-second street, with 118x109 feet of ground west front, for an indicated consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $47,000.

The property at the northwest corner of Kimball and Sunnyside avenues, lot 49x125 feet, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by Olaf A. Nelson to Jacob Tritz for an indicated consideration of $39,000, subject to an incumbrance of $19,000. In this connection Mr. Trit has conveyed to Oscar E. Nelson the property at the southwest corner of Willow and Vine streets, lot 55x99 feet, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $16,500.

Morris J. Goldstein has conveyed to Louis Glassenberg the property at the northwest corner of Central Park avenue and Fifteenth street, lot 40x124 feet, with store and flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $26,000, subject to an incumbrance of $21,500.

In Dorchester Avenue.

G. W. Martin Koch has acquired from Christ Hesse the property in Dorchester avenue, 190 feet south of Fifty-seventh street, lot 54½x150 feet, west front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the property in Drexel avenue at the southeast corner of Fifty-fourth place, lot 25x104 feet, with three flat building, at an indicated consideration of $10,000, subject to an incumbrance of $5,000. J. C. Wilkinson & Co. were the brokers.

John Kuntz has acquired from Normand E. Thompson the six flat building at 5535-37 Drexel avenue on a lot 50x125 feet, west front, for a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,000, the purchaser conveying in part payment the residence property at 4231 Michigan avenue, with 45x161 feet of ground, at a reported consideration of $13,000. J. C. Wilkinson & Co. were the brokers.

Leases and Loans.

A lease of building space in South Water street, just west of State street, and a theater lease at Broadway and Lawrence avenue comprised the only features of any interest in the leasing market of the week. In the downtown lease, which was filed for record, Lucien G. Yoe leased to Pete Calvert and Gust Polites the three story and basement building, on 20x150 feet of ground, at 11 West South Water street, on the south side of the street, 100 feet west of State street. The lease, which is for a terms of twenty years from May 1, 1919, provides for a term rental of $157,000, payable at the rate of $7,200 a year for the first five years, $7,700 a year for the next five, $8,000 a year for the succeeding five, and $8,500 a year for the fourth term of five years. It is provided that the lessees are to pay the water rates.

In the theater lease, which covers the theater in the building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Lawrence avenue, Tom Chamales leased to Lawrence A. Smith for a term of fifteen years from Aug. 1, 1918, at an annual rental of $25,000, with option for two five years' extensions at the same rental.

EXPERT EXPLAINS BIG CASH VALUE OF APARTMENTS

B. H. Marshall Points Out the Advantages of Good Buildings.

Among the many interesting papers read at the recent convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers in this city special interest attaches to that read by B. H. Marshall of Marshall & Fox, architects, on "High Grade Apartment Buildings as Investments." The long experience of that firm as owners and operators of the best buildings of this character in Chicago, supplemented by their experience as architects, give to Mr. Marshall's conclusions unusual weight. He is emphatic in his statement that such buildings, if properly located, designed, and operated, are not only a safe and excellent investment, but one in which the owner can have much pride, and from which he can obtain much pleasure.

To be entirely successful, he says, there are three problems to be solved—first, where to build; second, how to design and construct; and, third, how to operate. Boulevard, lake, or park frontage, he says, is most desirable, a combination of these on a corner with southeast or southwest exposure being the best. Light and sunshine, he says, are important elements. Every room must have lots of light, and half of the bed chambers, all, if possible, must have direct sunlight.

Difficult Problem.

The second problem of how to plan and build, he declares to be probably the most difficult. The plan, he says, must contain all the good features of the well designed house, together with the numerous advantages made possible by apartment conditions.

In the operation of a high class apartment building, every effort must be made and every cent must be spent with the idea of giving the tenant the best service that is to be had, he says, and the question of expense must be secondary to this.

"The total yearly payroll in relation to the annual income," he says, "runs higher for the same kind of service in a small apartment building than in a large one. It is interesting to note from our records that the relation of payroll to income is about 3 per cent higher in an eight apartment building renting for about $5,000 a year each, than in a ten apartment building renting for about $7,800 a year each. The payroll will run in such buildings about 8 per cent of the income."

The total cost of operating in relation to the total income is, he says, much more expensive per dollar income in a small building than in a larger one.

Comparative Depreciation.

"A large fireproof apartment built of the best materials throughout," he says, "and finished in the most thorough and up to date manner will depreciate in value much less rapidly than a cheaper building; especially small apartments of nonfireproof construction. The depreciation in ordinary apartment buildings results in the highest rentals being obtainable only when the building is new. As the buildings depreciate in value, the rentals decrease. In buildings of the type under construction we have found that the contrary is true. One particular building built twelve years ago has been able to increase its annual rental $1,000 for each apartment. In each of our buildings we write five year leases and at the renewal of these leases have always been able to increase the rents. Further, the total operating expense stays the same year after year. This is not true of the cheaper apartments, where the cost of repairs and upkeep increases with the age of the building.

"It is because of such considerations as these that we believe the highest type of large apartment buildings is a peculiarly good investment.

NEW WHEAT IN; FIRST OF SEASON AT TEN PREMIUM

Coarse Grain Unsettled, July Corn Higher, and Other Months Off.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

New wheat was in the Chicago market yesterday for the first time this season and brought 10c premium over the government price. It graded No. 1 and No. 3 red.

Coarse grain markets were lower in the early trading, only to advance and react sharply toward the last, with a rally at the close. Last sales were at gains of 1⅛c on July corn and losses of ⅛@¼c on preferred futures. Oats finished ⅝@1c lower, the latter on September in Chicago.

Corn in the southwestern markets closed ⅛@1⅛c higher on July and ⅝@⅝c on preferred futures, St. Louis leading in strength. Oats closed unchanged to ½c higher in St. Louis and unchanged to 1c lower in Kansas City. At Minneapolis oats finished ⅛@1½c lower and Winnipeg ¼c higher.

Provisions were weaker with limited trading, and closed with losses of 5@10c on pork, 2½@10c on lard, and 5c on short ribs.

Closing trades compared with a week ago show gains on grains and provisions. Corn is up 3¾@4½c, oats 1½@3c; pork, 65@90c; lard, 32½@47½c, and short ribs, 50@65c.

July Corn Acts Tight.

Corn prices fluctuated rapidly without any decided tendency in either direction. July, however, acted tight with Lewis, Lamson, Noyes-Jackson, and Simons-Day buyers of the July and sellers of August. It advanced readily, going firm, and closed about the top with a good gain at $1.52½. At one time Logan & Bryan advanced the price from $1.51¾@1.52½ without getting any grain on the way up. Longs and Perry-Price were the best sellers.

Deferred deliveries were higher early, due to lack of selling pressure and Bartlett-Frazier's buying, only to react later with oats, and then rally toward the last, closing at intermediate figures with August at $1.54 and September at $1.55⅝. Wagner, Logan & Bryan, Perry-Price, and longs in general sold the August, and Updike and Hales & Edwards were conspicuous sellers of September. Jackson Bros. and Bartlett-Frazier were active on the buying side of August.

There was little change in the character of the news. Eastern demand remains good with shipping sales of 40,000 bu. Sample values were firm with receipts 262 cars. Consignment notices are holding up well, and receivers expect fairly liberal arrivals for the next week or so. For the week receipts were 1,575,000 bu, and shipments 640,000 bu. Last year receipts were 1,522,000 bu, and shipments 1,120,000 bu. Exports 11,000 bu.

Hedging Sales Depress Oats.

Hedging sales were in evidence in volume in August and September oats, purchases to arrive on overnight bids to the country being around 600,000 bu, mainly for shipment by Aug. 20. Hales & Edwards sold 500,000 bu August against cash grain bought in the country to arrive, and there was also pressure from houses with country connections. While the close was on a small rally from the low point, there were fair losses, with August at 70⅝c and September at 69⅞c. Jackson Bros. and cash houses sold September.

The most effective buying was against the bids. The late strength in corn was responsible for the rally at the close. Shorts were active on the buying side of July, Wagner and Logan & Bryan leading, and it closed fractionally lower at 74c.

Winnipeg was again very strong on crop damage reports, and rain is badly needed in some sections of the Canadian northwest, while the forecast was for generally fair and warm. Showers, however, are reported for the Dakotas and more predicted. Export demand was not in evidence. Domestic sales were 50,000 bu. For the day receipts were 215 cars and for the week 2,375,000 bu, the latter being 209,000 bu in excess of last year. Shipments were 1,022,000 bu, against 1,474,000 bu last year. Exports, 26,000 bu, against 900,000 bu last year.

Rye and Barley Firmer.

A firmer undertone prevailed in rye and barley. Offerings of both grains were very small. No. 2 rye sold at $1.72, but in barley there was very little business, with malting and milling quoted at $1.00@1.20. Minneapolis was 1@2c higher on rye and unchanged to 2c higher on barley, while Milwaukee was 1@2c higher on barley. Local receipts were 1 car rye. Northwestern markets had 4 cars rye and 21 cars barley.

Flax seed at Duluth closed 2@5c lower; July, $4.13; October, $4.14. Winnipeg unchanged to ¾c lower; July, $4.00; October, $3.91. The three leading markets had 24 cars.

Timothy seed unchanged. September, $9.45 bid. Country lots, $5.00@7.75 per 100 lbs. Toledo unchanged to 5c higher; September, $4.65; October, $4.30; December, $4.20; March, $4.5[illegible] per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed no market. Toledo unchanged; July, $16.[illegible]; October, $13.10 per bu of 60 lbs.

Provision Market Easy.

A moderate trade was on in provisions with a limited range of prices and a close at the inside with small losses. Short ribs were the most active and were sold by houses with stock yards connections while the buying was scattered. Shipments of cured meats for the week were heavy and increased 10,200,000 lbs over last year. Of lard they increased 173,000 lbs and fresh meats 2,878,000 lbs.

Hog supplies at western markets for the week were smaller than the previous week and larger than last year. Hogs were highest of the week—a liberal run is expected this week. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Sentiment in the oat trade last night was mostly bearish, particularly among the cash people. The country sold over 600,000 bu of oats to arrive. One house bought 500,000 bu, getting the greater part from one operator with a large string of country elevators. These oats were hedged from the pit and the country houses generally had oats to sell. Those who were bearish believe that the increased hedging pressure on the deferred futures of oats from now on will more than offset any demand that they may develop and gradually press prices. There will be a big outward movement of oats inside of two weeks, as charters have been made for 2,000,000 bu, mostly to go from Chicago to Georgian Bay, the rate being 1⅝c for the greater part. It was the largest business this season. Receipts of oats here last week of 2,375,000 bu were the largest at this time in over four years.

There is uneasiness among the July shorts in corn as shown by the advance of 1⅝c yesterday from the low point, while the August and September declined. Liquidation by scattered longs as a result of the recent decision as regards the deliveries has placed the market in a position where some people think they see evidence of an unpleasant situation for the shorts. Cash people are the principal holders. It is noticeable that the corn on delivery all week, 15,000 to 26,000 bu a day, has gone on around the various commission houses very fast, and it is said to have settled a large number of contracts. The corn sent out has been No. 5 yellow and white. A party who took in 2,000 bu closed it out yesterday at a premium to a shipper, but those who have 5,000 bu lots do not appear to fare as well.

Two cars of new wheat, the first of the season, arrived at Chicago yesterday. One car graded No. 1 red, tested 12 per cent moisture, weighed 61 lbs per bu, and sold at $2.36. The other car was consigned to Lowell Hoit, from Farmersville, Ill., in the central part of the state, graded No. 3 red, smutty, tested 14 per cent moisture, weighed 60 lbs per bu, and sold to the Star and Crescent mill at $2.29. Both cars brought 10c above government basic figures. Last year the first car was received July 13, graded sample, and sold at $2.05.

Charles P. Randall, the Board of Trade operator who left Chicago nearly three months ago to engage in Y. M. C. A. work abroad, has returned. He was on the steamer Oronsa, which was torpedoed. Telling of his experience, he said: "The steamer was torpedoed about 1 o'clock in the morning. We felt the shock, all right, and knew what had happened. I was in my berth and it did not take more than a couple of minutes for me to get on deck with my overcoat and suitcase. In a few moments we were in a small boat. We had bread cards, sugar cards, butter cards and cards for most everything. I did not get into the fighting country. The crops in France are better than last year, with the acreage larger."

Fred Scott, who came back with C. P. Randall, says there is plenty of meat in England.

W. H. Martin and A. J. Wilson have applied for membership on the Board of Trade. M. E. De Wolf posted his membership for transfer.

White corn brings a large premium over other kinds in all of the leading markets, and No. 2 white at St. Louis has been sold quite generally the last week at $2. Canadian mills are now making corn flour, the daily output being between 4,000 and 5,000 brls. The grain for this flour must be secured in the United States, and there is rather keen competition between mills for the desirable grain.

"There is no question that considerable irreparable damage has occurred in a large section of Saskatchewan and Alberta," wired Case & Martin of Winnipeg to Logan & Bryan. "The best we can get is a fair crop. Rain badly needed everywhere now, and unless it comes within a week the damage will increase. The situation is alarming, but not a calamity, as certain sections are sure of a good crop."

No general breaking of the drought in the northwest was indicated by the weekly weather forecast, which said there were prospects for showers in the upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys early in the week, with generally fair thereafter. Temperatures are to be above normal. No precipitation of consequence is looked for in the Ohio valley, but the great lakes region showers are expected around the middle of the week.

July deliveries yesterday were 15,000 bu corn and 350,000 lbs lard.

"Light hogs have been scarce, which shows a general tendency to feed through," says a provision specialist. The lack of hedging sales and a further increase in the cash trade has made the holders independent and quite willing to risk further seasonal betterments. Lard values have been stubbornly firm, regardless of sales of that article against purchases of ribs. The general indications seem to suggest a sufficient supply of product, especially meats, for all demands, and perhaps later on to supply a satisfactory surplus.

Corn receipts at six markets were 521 cars, against 273 cars a week ago and 230 cars last year. Oats, 370 cars, against 279 cars a week ago and 156 cars last year.

Primary receipts of corn for the season to date aggregate 216,580,000 bu, against 184,588,000 bu last year. Oat receipts are 318,883,000 bu, against 290,370,000 bu last year.

Some of the Kansas City cash corn handlers say they would not be surprised if they received new corn from Oklahoma some time in August. A few years ago there was a small movement the last of that month.

Receipts of new wheat at Kansas City Monday are estimated at 500 to 600 cars.

George F. Swanson will hereafter have charge of the Adolph Kempner company cash grain department, having formed a connection with that firm.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Domestic shipping sales of cash grain at Chicago Saturday were 40,000 bu corn and 50,000 bu oats. No export bids were received from the seaboard.

Little cash wheat was sold at St. Louis, mills there bidding $2.24@2.25, but J. E. Bennett's office reported sales of No. 2 red at $2.25@2.27, or 4@6c over government basic. Hard winter at Kansas City was 2@5c higher, and red unchanged, with a good demand. No. 1 hard sold at $2.27@2.30, No. 2 hard at $2.25@2.29, dark No. 1 hard at $2.30@2.33, dark No. 2 hard at $2.28@2.32, No. 1 red at $2.21@2.22, and No. 2 red at $2.19@2.20, prices being 3@13c above basic. The six leading markets had 446 cars, against 162 cars a week ago and 151 cars last year.

Demand for cash corn was good, and prices here and at Milwaukee were firm. St. Louis was unchanged to 3c higher, Kansas City 5@10c higher on white and 5c higher on yellow, Omaha unchanged to 5c higher, and Peoria 2c higher to 5c lower on grades, and unchanged to 4c higher on sample.

Cash oats sold readily, with prices here and at Peoria unchanged to ½c higher. St. Louis was unchanged, Omaha ½@1c higher and Milwaukee 1c higher. Prices in all markets follow:

NEW YORK, July 6.—Cotton goods and yarns today were unchanged, awaiting government announcement on price fixing. Burlaps and linens were firm. Wool goods were quieter.

HOGS AVERAGE HIGHER, WITH TRADE ACTIVE

Pigs Steady and a Few Choice Ones Reach $16.50.

Advance in hog prices carried the top and average to the highest level of the week and barring the previous Saturday offerings were the highest since June 7, a small packer paying $17.15.

There was a seasonable spread in cattle prices, with an increased proportion of the stock and grassy steers. Most of the cows and heifers found an indifferent outlet at $1.00@1.25 decline, while medium steers were 75c@$1.00 lower.

Week's hog receipts at eleven markets, 431,000, or 103,000 less than the previous week and 43,000 more than a year ago, standing 21,000 larger than the nine year average for the corresponding week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 16,000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 18,592 cattle, 48,779 hogs and 9,041 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 58,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep.

Average price of hogs at Chicago was $16.85, highest of the week, against $16.75 Friday, $16.85 a week ago, $15.30 a year ago, $10.02 two years ago, and $7.35 three years ago. Estimated average weight last week, 237 lbs., same as previous week, and 7 lbs heavier than a year ago.

CATTLE PRICES UNEVEN.

Good to choice steers closed steady with a week ago, but other kinds declined 75c@$1.00 with top at $18.00. Butcher stock largely $1.00@1.25 lower, with bulk of canners off 25@75c. Bulls down 75c@$1.00. Calves declined 50c and practically nothing passed $16.50 at the close. Stockers and feeders mostly 50c lower.

Fancy steers	$17.75@18.00
Good to choice steers	16.40@17.65
Common to medium steers	11.50@16.35
Yearlings, fair to fancy	13.50@17.50
Fat cows and heifers	8.10@14.75

Hogs Show Advance.

Hogs averaged 10c higher and trade was active. One load sold up to $17.15 and many lots went at $17.00@17.10. Pigs were steady and a few choice ones reached $16.50. COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, July 6.—There was a renewal of yesterday's buying movement in the cotton market today and a further sharp advance in prices, with the general list closing steady at a net gain of 28@56 points.

The break on the government crop report of last Tuesday seemed to have left futures in a strong technical position with a large short interest outstanding and with contracts in the hands of the trade. Nervousness over the complaints of drouth in Texas, with the probability of weevil danger in eastern belt sections, was considered chiefly responsible for the covering movement. Reports that the government had made agreements whereby producers of linters would sell only to government buyers at a fixed price of 4.67c f. o. b., points of production, were without immediate influence. Futures:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.

March	24.34	24.80	24.34	24.80	24.10

NEW YORK.—Spot 60 points higher at 21.80c for middling upland. No sales. Southern spot markets: Galveston, 31.00c; New Orleans, 30.00c; Savannah, 31.25c; Augusta, 29.50c; Memphis, 30.00c; Houston, 30.00c; Little Rock, 29.50c.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Dry weather caused uneasiness in cotton today, but the net change for the day was an advance of 28@35 points. Closing: July, 27.55c; October, 24.00c; December, 23.70c; January, 23.65c; March, 23.65c.

Establishment by the government of a corporation to be known as the United States Cotton corporation, with power to buy for the account of the United States government such cotton as may be offered for sale without other available buyers at a price to be fixed by President Wilson, will be recommended to congress by a special committee consisting of one banker and one cotton producer from each of the states of the cotton belt. Resolutions to this effect were passed at a conference of cotton states bankers and producers.

New York spot quiet; middling, 31.80c; New Orleans steady; middling 30.00c.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Delegates Appointed to Life Underwriters' Meeting.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Edgar C. Fowler, president of the Life Underwriters' association of Chicago, has appointed the following delegates and alternates to the annual meeting of the national association:

Delegates—Edgar C. Fowler, New England Mutual; L. Brackett Bishop, Massachusetts Mutual; George Pick, Mutual Benefit; J. F. Oates, Northwestern Mutual; E. A. Ferguson, Union Central; Jules Girardin, Phoenix Mutual; Isaac Miller Hamilton, Federal; J. F. Johantgen, New York; John R. McFee, Penn Mutual; R. W. Stevens, Illinois; C. J. McCary, Penn Mutual; H. C. Castor, Connecticut General; F. H. Davis, Equitable of New York; E. E. Andrews, New York; James H. Miles, Union Central.

Alternates—Edward C. Platter, Massachusetts Mutual; E. C. Carmack, State Mutual; Edwin Austrian, Northwestern Mutual; H. C. Hintzpeter, Mutual Life of New York; George R. McLeran, Home Life; Ralph H. Hobart, Northwestern Mutual; Franklin Wyman, Berkshire; D. G. Drake, National Life of Vermont; George Hoffman, Guardian; H. C. Coffeen, Northwestern Mutual; E. J. Faltysek, Northwestern Mutual; Everts Wrenn, State Mutual; Alfred MacArthur, National Life, U. S. A.; P. J. Kraus, Metropolitan; Robert F. Palmer, Berkshire.

HAIL INSURANCE.

Harvesting is practically completed in Oklahoma and the southern part of Kansas and Nebraska. The hail insurance liability terminates when the grain is cut, and as a large amount of insurance has been written in this section, the companies now feel safe as to their liability. The crop is unusually good, and as values are high, the farm companies are pushing hard for specific insurance on grain so long as it remains on the farms. The conservation campaign has caused farmers to be unusually careful about fire hazards affecting foodstuffs, and the experience on these specific grain policies on the farms has been satisfactory for the last two years.

ANALYTIC SUPPLEMENT.

A new supplement is being prepared for the analytic system of rating and will be printed within the month. It adjusts the system to the new national board classification of towns, providing for ten instead of six classes, with certain modifications agreed upon at the recent conferences of raters. When the new supplement is ready for issuance it is probable that a conference of all the state raters will be called by the western actuarial bureau. At this the changes in the schedule can be explained and discussed, so that the raters can pass the word on to their assistants and be qualified to explain the changes to the agents and the policy holders in their states.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The 2 per cent tax on Chicago fire insurance premiums for the fiscal year ending June 30 is now due. A material increase in the tax payments is expected because of the greater volume of insurance carried under war valuations, and as a result of the 10 per cent surcharge, which went into effect in March.

The Cook County Field club will hold its monthly meeting Monday. Last month the club started on a plan for getting a line on the general standing of class 2 agents in Cook county. This work will be continued for some time until information about these agents is available to all members of the field club.

C. W. Wagner, who was recently appointed eastern special agent of the Marquette National Fire of Chicago, has been obliged to resign and return to Chicago on account of the condition of his wife's health, which will require her to remain in a hospital for some time.

PRODUCE TRADE

There were good supplies of fruits and vegetables yesterday. Receipts of potatoes were 51 cars, of which 24 were from North Carolina, and 282 cars were on track. There were 44 cars of onions, 44 cars of tomatoes, 15 of which were fresh receipts; 43 cars of canteloupe, of which 10 cars were fresh; 43 cars of peaches, with 16 fresh; 13 cars of watermelons and 53 cars fresh. Supplies of berries were liberal and the market generally easy, while there was little change in melons, potatoes or tomatoes.

Live fowls advanced ½c. Eggs for storage brought ¼c to ½c advance. The butter market was easy, with prices ½c lower at Chicago. Stocks of butter here in cold storage are 9,025,359 lbs, against 7,292,794 lbs a week ago. Eggs are 1,533,919 cases, against 1,553,183 cases a week ago.

Borrowing to Buy Liberty Bonds.

While the recent Liberty loan campaign was in progress a number of inquiries were received as to the advisability of borrowing money on life insurance policies to buy bonds. Presumably this question will arise again, and it can best be discussed while no loan campaign is in progress.

The plan of borrowing in that manner shows a laudable determination to make any sacrifice necessary to share in the loan, but there is no doubt that in most cases some other means of providing the money should be adopted.

If few persons, for special reasons, thus borrowed money to buy Liberty bonds no appreciable harm could result, but suppose that everybody carrying a policy of $2,500 or less should borrow its full loan value for that purpose. No life insurance company carries cash enough to supply such a sudden and heavy demand and all would be compelled to sell gilt edged bonds in a depressed market at a heavy loss to provide the money.

These bonds being on the bargain counter at practically forced sale would be bought partly by people having large amounts of money on hand and partly by those who could borrow at the banks. As a result, the money that small investors paid for Liberty bonds would be provided partly by absorbing the working capital of the country and partly by establishing bank credits, thus causing inflation. It is in order to avoid just this result that the government seeks to have bonds taken by everybody, both small investors and large, and paid for out of current savings.

Louisiana Live Stock.

W. L.—The Louisiana Live Stock company reported on March 1, the end of its first year, that it had more than 2,000 head of cattle and 300 graded hogs, and that buildings, etc., on its big ranch were sufficient for present needs. Its balance sheet showed $89,430 cash on hand. Profits were disappointing, because lack of cars early in 1917 prevented the shipping of Texas cattle to the ranch for feeding. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000 and has the backing of a number of men of wealth and prominence in Louisiana. It sold a large amount of stock in the north last year. Its statement does not include an income account but merely says earnings were poor last year and it hopes they will be large enough this season to pay a dividend next March. Evidently that depends on many unknown factors.

Wisconsin Railway, Light and Power.

C. K. F.—The Wisconsin Railway, Light and Power company is one of the few utilities in the country showing an increase of net earnings. In the nine months ended March 31 its gross increased 11 per cent and its net 21 per cent. Net was at the rate of $177,1[illegible] a year. There are outstanding $120,000 of underlying and $2,225,000 refunding bonds. The refunding issue has been divided into two series, of which the first, including $1,400,000, is made superior in lien to the other $825,000. Only the first series is outstanding in the hands of the public. Interest on these bonds and the underlying issue is being earned well over twice, putting them in a strong position.

Lone Star Coal Mine.

E. W. J.—The Lone Star Coal Mining company has a tract of lignite coal land at Como, Tex., on which one shaft is in operation. It appears that the property can be worked at a good profit now when the coal supply in general is short. Whether it would be profitable with a normal condition of the market we do not know. A letter sent to a Como bank asking about the record of an older mine in the same district brought an indefinite and unsatisfactory reply.

Brief Answers.

M. S. E.—The stocks you mention are somewhat speculative. Nobody can predict the course of the market. High grade bonds are selling at low prices now. If you invest your money in some of them you can be reasonably sure of a moderate profit.

E. J.—We have no data on the Continental Oil Industries company. It had no Illinois blue sky license up to a few days ago and no application pending.

D. S.—Liberty Oil and Gas stock is purely speculative, as far as we know.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW BIG LOSS IN SURPLUS

Checking Out by U. S. of $140,395,000 the Cause.

With the checking out of $140,395,000 by the government the New York banks showed an extraordinary decrease in their surplus reserve, the amount being $145,478,440, and leaving the item stand $26,493,240.

The previous week, with an increase of $135,144,000 in government deposits, the excess reserve of the banks jumped from $47,145,130 to $171,971,680, also an unusual change. Now the reverse has taken place, and, while the surplus at the figure mentioned is low, it may be regarded as without significance as suggesting any particular trend of money market conditions.

It can only be repeated with each statement showing unusual changes, that the differences are due to unusual causes. The condition of the banks may be regarded as excellent. Fundamentally unfavorable conditions exist only at such times as public distrust leads to withdrawals of deposits.

No Distrust Felt.

There is no such distrust at this time. On the contrary, among the important countries of the world this one is preëminent in the soundness of its financial position. The figures:

Federal Reserve Bank.

The weekly statement of the federal reserve bank of Chicago reflected finally the expansion in credit necessary to meet the income and excess profits taxes due on June 15. For the week just ended the bills discounted for member banks totaled $154,629,157, a gain of $27,615,295 compared with the previous week. There was no change of consequence in bills bought in the open market.

Federal reserve notes in circulation increased $10,631,418. The expansion was about 2½ per cent over the previous week. Government deposits increased $9,263,420, though the total was but $15,512,190.

The other changes in the statement were without significance. The figures:

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

UNION Carbide and Carbon was the feature of the local market and the shares showed a gain of ⅝, recording a new high price on this movement, 58½. The street railroad issues were almost neglected. A few trades were made in Chicago City and Connecting Railways preferred at 14. The packing house shares were dull and steady. There was some inquiry for Stewart-Warner and the price ruled firm.

UNION OIL DECLARES EXTRA.

NEW YORK, July 6.—[Special.]—Directors of the Union Oil company of California declared an extra dividend of $1, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50, both payable July 20 to stock of record July 10.

STEELS AND OILS LEAD WAY TO HIGHER GROUND

Quiet Strength Shown and Activity Well Distributed.

New York, July 6.—[Special.]—A continuation of the strength which has been manifested in unostentatious ways recently on the stock exchange carried prices in most departments to higher ground today, though the earlier gains were somewhat reduced by the usual selling for the settlement of accounts by traders who dislike to carry stocks over Sunday. Considering the number of absentees from the street, transactions were on a fairly large scale for a two hour session and activity was well distributed.

Steels of the so-called independent group, notably Crucible, Sloss Sheffield, and Superior; oils, particularly Mexican Petroleum and Marine preferred, and minor war issues all retained the greater part of their 1 to 2 point advances.

Low Priced Coalers Irregular.

Low priced coalers also shared in the irregular movement. Reading second preferred, Chesapeake and Ohio, and Pittsburgh and West Virginia averaging 1 point gains, but Standard rails kept within fractional limits, showing virtually no change at the end.

United States Steel made a fractional advance to its best quotation of the week, but closed at a slight loss.

Waiting for the Big Fight.

The street is waiting for the resumption of military activities on a large scale, and stock market operations have been left for the most part to professional traders. Sentiment is hopeful of an early termination of the next German offensive and the beginning of preparations for counter attacks by the allies.

The presence of more than enough fresh troops from this side to make good all of the losses suffered by the British and French in the last six months is regarded as favorable augury for the test of strength which the enemy must make shortly, unless he is willing to confess at last the central powers have been reduced to fighting a defensive campaign.

American Malting Co. to Liquidate Its Business

A circular letter has been sent to holders of first preferred stock of American Malting company by a committee of preferred and common stockholders proposing the liquidation of the company.

The committee is composed of W. Forbes Morgan, chairman; Frank M. Dick, Stephen Peabody, George A. Ellis Jr., and John N. Woodfin. In their letter they state that conditions which have arisen since the United States entered the war in their opinion make it advisable and for best interests of first preferred stock that the company be put into liquidation and its affairs wound up.

Holders of the preferred stock are asked to deposit their securities with the Guaranty Trust company. The agreement between the committee and the Guaranty Trust company will become effective when 60,000 shares are deposited, the time for making such deposits terminating on Sept. 11. Application will be made to list the certificates of deposit on the New York stock exchange.

U. S. TREASURY STATEMENT

Washington, D. C., July 6.—[Special.]—The following is a statement of the condition of the United States treasury on July 5:

Income to date fiscal year 1919	$ 557,961,209
Outgo over income fiscal year 1919	118,990,495
Balance general fund today	1,468,016,355
Balance previous day	1,574,370,885
Decrease	106,354,530

HALF OF UTILITY COMPANIES SHOW EARNINGS GAIN

Balance Keeps in Rut of Growing Expenses and Fixed Income.

A belated insufficient betterment in earnings is being reported by about half of the utility companies; the other half continue in the rut of fixed income and growing expenses. The securities of the utility companies gradually decline.

The Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light company issues a special letter of explanation to stockholders which accompanies its monthly report. The company shows that gross receipts have increased 10.17 per cent in the first five months of the calendar year, while operating expenses increased 26.79 per cent. Operating expense totaled $5,331,000. Out of this total the following five items have been segregated:

Inc. cost of coal for electric plants	$123,000
Inc. cost of coal for steam heat	73,000
Inc. cost of gas coal and oil	433,000
Inc. cost of snow removal	68,000
Inc. cost of car repairs	130,000
Total	$827,000

Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

Acceptance of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company's refunding plan by virtually all the holders of its $57,735,000 5 per cent notes has been reported assured. The holders of the notes have until July 10 to deposit their holdings with the Central Union Trust company in order to have them taken up 30 per cent in cash furnished by the War Finance corporation, and 70 per cent in a new issue of 7 per cent notes, with the option of exchanging all the holdings for new notes.

Application has been made by the Ohio Electric railway to the interstate commerce commission for permission to make increases in rates corresponding to recent advances granted to steam railroads.

Lighting Rates Increased.

St. Joseph Railway, Light, Heat and Power company has been authorized by the Missouri public service commission to increase its lighting rates to nine mills per k. w. per hour.

All Byllesby electric properties reporting for the week ended June 29 show the following new business gains: Net, 88 customers with 162 kilowatts of lighting and 567 horse power in motors. New business contracted for but not yet connected, includes 1,088 customers with 372 kilowatts of lighting and 2,651 horse power in motors. Electric energy output was 25.6 per cent greater than during the corresponding period last year.

The Outlook for the Motor Industry

The automobile industry is passing through an epoch-marking period, as a result of readjustment from a peace to a war basis, many things having occurred which are of vital importance to present and future motor stockholders, as is clearly set forth in an article appearing in our fortnightly publication

Securities Suggestions

Numbers ten and eleven of this publication, which currently discusses important developments in the financial world, also contain comprehensive and interesting articles on the following subjects:

Equipment Companies in War and Peace
Investment Position of American Woolen
The Investment Value of Ohio Oil
Fortnightly Market Analysis
The Part Payment Plan

TALK OF THE STREET

THE market closed dull, but with a good undertone, and generally bullish expressions by large commission houses. One pointed out that during the second half of the week sentiment had shown steady improvement. With the rapid movement of this country's forces to France and with the internal situation in Germany and Austria steadily growing worse, it was considered difficult to figure that the coming German drive would turn out as its authors hoped.

The steel stocks were firm, but price improvement was negligible. Bethlehem showed a fair recovery at 84½. The motor stocks were in fair demand, with Maxwell the most active. The preferred issue closed steady, while the common and second preferred were higher. Studebaker declined fractionally.

The railroad group was neglected. Such trading as appeared was not in sufficient volume to cause an advance in prices.

The copper stocks were moderately well bought and showed gains. There is an undertone of bullishness in the market for the shares.

Directors of Gaston, Williams & Wigmore are scheduled to meet in the latter part of this month. Friends of the management say that unless the war trade board adds drastic new regulations or prohibitions the regular quarterly declaration of $1 a share will be ordered. Some time ago Gaston, Williams & Wigmore were accustomed to advertise they had "nothing for sale except service."

A number of the smaller industrial stocks are said to have been bought by strong interests. One broker who has been watching National Conduit says there has been heavy buying by the head of the concern. International Nickel has been persistently bought by interests identified with that company.

Equipment stocks were irregular. Baldwin showed some improvement, while American Car and Foundry was unchanged.

The strength in Republic Iron and Steel common is said to be due largely to the concern's financial position and the feeling of experienced interests that the company will be extremely strong after the war. There will be no war plants to charge off and no loss in earning power on account of the falling off in the demand for war steel.

I tis the impression in Wall street that railroad executives acting for carrier corporations have little hope that the proposed form of operating contract which will come before their meeting on July 12 will be accepted. A new draft has been prepared by John Barton Payne, general counsel of the railroad administration. It appears from guarded statements of officers of corporations concerned that no material concessions have been made by the administration since the general meeting on June 5.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in Chicago showed a marked decrease for the week by comparison with the previous week because of the intervention of a holiday.

Clearings by the day for the week were as follows:

RATED M-A AND C+1 FIRST CREDIT WHO HAS SOLD US $3,325,305.51 OF ACCOUNTS WITHIN FIVE YEARS:—

What a concern which has paid for our service for five years says about it.

"June 12, 1918.

Commercial Credit Co.,
Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:—

We have just reviewed our five years' dealings with your Company and you may be interested to know the result. We sold you

The First Year $714,940.51
The Second Year 632,230.00
The Third Year 457,810.00
The Fourth Year 825,575.00
The Fifth Year 694,750.00

of Accounts Receivable, on your "No-Notice to Our Customer" plan.

When we began doing business with you our Capital in business was $260,000.00. Our Capital has increased during the five years to nearly $500,000.00, all of which increase we have made in our business with your help.

By dividing a portion of our profits with you, we have been able to do a larger business, discount all of our bills and have made nearly as much as the original capital employed."

Which is better—sell us Accounts and make more money; or not sell Accounts and make less?

30% Dividend Yield
First Dividend July 31, 1918.

The undersigned will on August 15, 1918, begin paying dividends of one (1) per cent monthly on par, the first dividend being payable to shareholders of record as of July 31, 1918. Subsequent dividends will be payable on the 15th of the month to those who are shareholders of record on the last day of the preceding month. Dividend checks will be mailed by the disbursing agents, the Security Transfer and Registrar Co., 66 Broadway, New York, N. Y., who are also the Registrars and Transfer Agents of the undersigned.

A limited number of shares are offered direct by the undersigned at 40 cents per share, par value $1.00 per share. The initial dividend yield to those who purchase immediately will thus be at the rate of 30 per cent per annum on the actual sums invested. There is a satisfactory prospect for increased dividends and also for appreciation in the market value of shares.

The present offer will be withdrawn without notice prior to July 31st, and the price of shares will be substantially higher, on present dividends alone, as soon as the first dividend checks are in the hands of shareholders. Detailed information will be promptly supplied those who write immediately for circular 25. Address

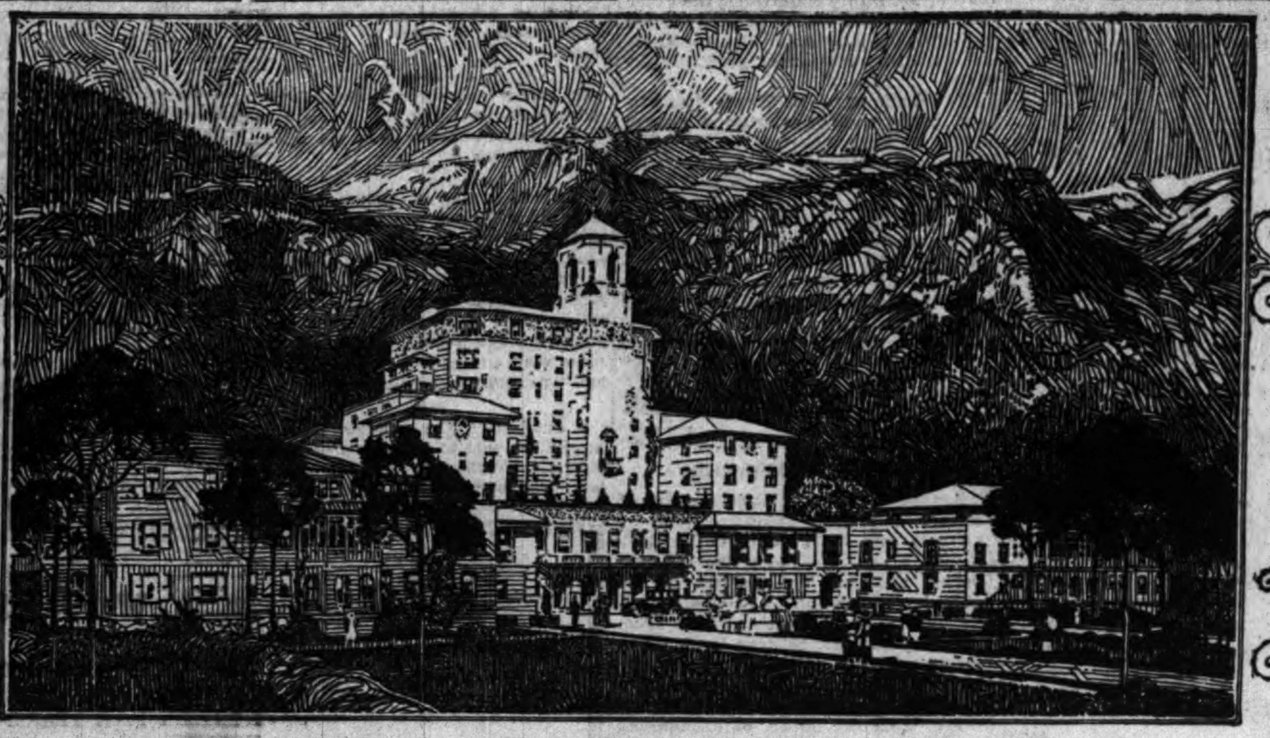
Where to Spend Your SUMMER VACATION

COLORADO. COLORADO. COLORADO. COLORADO.



Colorado's Sunny Welcome Knows No Seasons

THE BROADMOOR, society's latest rendezvous at Colorado Springs, surrounded by its own mountain park of 2,000 acres, is the most accessible as it is incomparably the most beautiful of this continent's recreation hostelries.

Here at THE BROADMOOR each recreation is de luxe. Guests who golf pronounce the course beyond compare. There are riding stables, a swimming pool, sun-basking parlors, dining al fresco, mountain hiking, a little theatre.

Both the amply-leisured and the recreationist will find at THE BROADMOOR those niceties of appointment and service which hitherto have never elsewhere been combined with Nature's richest treasures of the wide outdoors.

Come to Minnesota

You Who Are Fond of Fishing

—who are looking for the finny tribe that will test your strength and skill—where you can "hit out" in the early morning for an all-day battle—where your family will be comfortably housed in attractive cottages or at home-like hostelries and the children can disport themselves on sandy shores and revel by the hour in the shallow water—

Minnesota is the place for you this Summer

Sailing, golfing, tennis, fishing, canoe trips through the beautiful lakes and streams over the pack-sack trails of the old voyageurs—or a motor journey over a network of good highways—all are here.

Keep your silk underwear in the first flush of youth

Give all your faded, discolored clothes fresh color

FADED, dingy? Is this how your favorite silk camisole or envelope chemise has come to look? You can make it like new again!

Your blousess, your collars and cuffs, silk stockings, sweaters, every washable thing of silk, georgette, chiffon, wash satin—or wool, you can keep them all freshly colored with Tintex.

Tintex is not a dye, but a tint that comes in all the fashionable shades. It was prepared to use on the most fragile materials—it is entirely free from injurious chemicals and will no more stain your hands or injure fabric than bluing does.

No extra trouble—always a success

Sift about a teaspoonful of Tintex into the basinful of water. Immediately it is dissolved. Then put in the garment wet. Work it between your hands and dip it up and down to get every part tinted. Wring as dry as possible; roll in a towel and iron while damp. A sweater should be laid out flat on a towel and allowed to dry.

The first time you use Tintex you will be delighted. The color is so evenly distributed—no streaks or stains, and the shade is so exquisite. Make Tintex a regular habit and you will find that on "a mere shoestring" you can look so well dressed that it makes your women friends nervous! Get a package today at any drug or department store, 25c.

Wear a faded, washed-out collar? Never! Make it new again with Tintex!

No boiling, no bother. In five minutes your delicate things are tinted—laundered—really transformed

Get a sample packet

Send us 6c for cute sized package of Tintex (flesh pink). It contains enough to tint a blouse or camisole. Become a Tintex enthusiast. Send today. Address Tintex Company, Inc., Dept. 82, 299 Madison Avenue, New York City.

If you live in Canada, send 6c for your sample to Mac Lean, Benn & Nelson, Limited, Dept. 81, 489 St. Paul Street West, Montreal.

WARTIME RECIPES

SPANISH FISH.

2 mackerel, weighing 1⅛ pounds each.
2 cups small potatoes.
1-3 lemon.
Parsley.
2 cups small onions.
6 tablespoons olive oil or dripping.
Glass of claret wine with part water.
¼ teaspoon each of salt, paper, and bay leaves.

Cut the mackerel in two inch pieces. Some substitute for mackerel may be used. Have prepared the small onions and potatoes. Put six tablespoons of olive oil or dripping in the bottom of an iron kettle, which is preferred for the cooking. Add two beans of garlic or omit according to choice, parsley, the lemon, claret and water, and other seasonings. Put in onions and cook them for fifteen minutes, then add the potatoes and the fish on top of all and cook until the potatoes are done, which will be sufficient for the fish. Can be served with plain boiled rice as a border, serving sauce in separate dish.

MARIE M. TOPPING, 676 Diversey Parkway, Chicago.

RICE FLOUR MUFFINS.

1 tablespoon shortening.
2 cups sweet milk.
2 cups rice flour.
A little more flour if needed.
3 tablespoons sugar.
2 tablespoons baking powder.
2 eggs beaten separately.
A little salt.

(No directions were given with these, but the particular variations in proportions are to be recommended to those who like a sweetened muffin; they also have less baking powder and more nutriment. Do not bake in too hot an oven as those in the picture, with the cheese, were baked.)

MRS. CHARLES H. COTTRELL, Quincy, Ill.

SOY BEAN MUFFINS.

1 cup soy bean meal.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
2 tablespoons sugar.
1 cup of milk.
1 cup flour.
½ teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons of fat.
1 egg.

Sift dry ingredients together. Add milk and beaten egg. Flavor with lemon.

MRS. MADA L. STRUEBING,
122 Merritt St., Oshkosh, Wis.

SOY BEAN MUFFINS WITH DATES AND NUTS.

½ cup soy bean meal.
3 tablespoons corn sirup.
½ cup barley flour.
1⅛ cups milk.
4 teaspoons baking powder.
½ cup corn flour.
¼ cup nut meats chopped fine.
3 tablespoons drippings.
¼ cup potato flour.
1 egg.
½ cup dates cut in small pieces.

Cook together the soy bean meal, corn flour, sirup, fat and milk for five minutes. Let cool, add egg and beat one minute. Then add dates, nuts, and then the flour sifted with the baking powder. Bake in well oiled muffin tins, twenty to twenty-five minutes. (It may take longer than this to dry these muffins out wholesomely, but few combinations to be served with afternoon tea will be nearer a complete meal.)

MRS. A. A. ALLEN, Glen Ellyn, Ill.

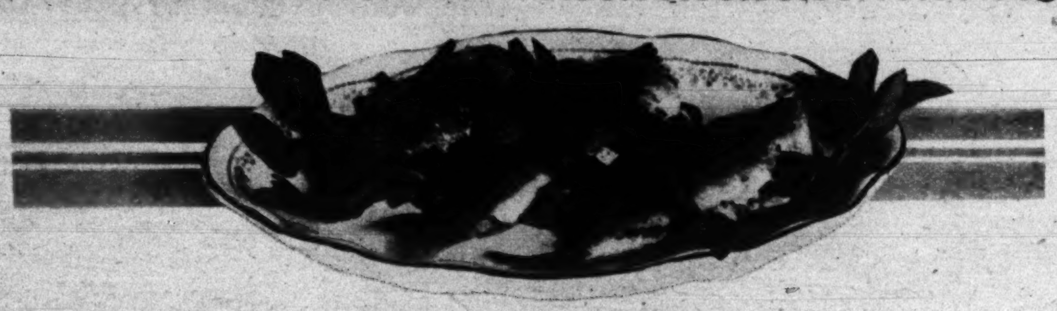
HOME MADE YEAST.

3 medium sized potatoes.
2 tablespoons of corn sirup.
1 tablespoon of wheat flour.
1 teaspoon shortening.
½ cup of white corn flour.
½ cake yeast foam.

Mash and beat hot potatoes till light. Add shortening, corn flour, wheat flour, mixing all well, then scalding with potato water enough to make a thick dough. If the mixture is too cold it will not thicken. Then set on stove and stir till thick. Let stand till cold, then add yeast foam dissolved in a little water. Do not use until a day old. Keep in warm place. (Of half a dozen yeasts or "starters" tested this one gave a bread which worked up best.)

MRS. FRANK KLINE, 361 S. State St., Elgin, Ill.

Another page of wartime recipes will appear next Sunday.



FRIED FISH WITH SEASONING.

Any small fish, onion, tiny red peppers, fresh mint.

Any small fish may be used. Scale, clean and open the fish down the belly. Have ready an onion cut in slender strips, some tiny red peppers with the seeds removed, and some fresh mint leaves. Place in each fish a strip of onion, a pepper, and a mint leaf. Skewer the fish closely together with a wooden toothpick, roll in flour, season with salt and a very little cayenne, and fry in hot lard or butter. Fry until a crisp brown and serve with a garnish of mint leaves.

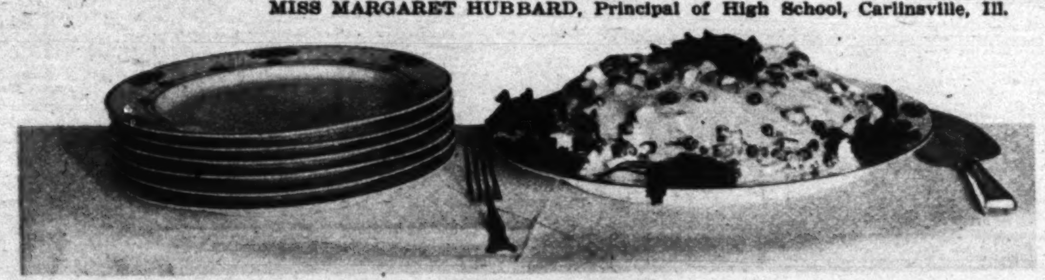
MRS. FRED MOSUNNAN, 3235 Southport Ave., Chicago.

"SPREAD" OR CHEESE SANDWICH FILLING.

1 pound of soft yellow cheese.	½ cup of cream.
2 or 3 beaten eggs.	Salt and pepper.

Mix the cream and well-beaten eggs and drop into the mixture the cheese cut into small pieces. Put all over a not too hot fire and stir constantly until the cheese melts, being careful not to let it burn. Take off fire and add salt and pepper to taste, using red pepper or paprika. Pour into a bowl or jar and let cool. It should then be about the consistency of soft butter. If it curdles in the cooking or if you wish to have it extra smooth, while it is still hot put it through a fine sieve. This will keep for a week or more in the ice-box. (This makes far more palatable and economical sandwiches than plain sliced cheese and not one crumb need be wasted. Try it with the rice muffins.)

MISS MARGARET HUBBARD, Principal of High School, Carlinsville, Ill.



VEGETARIAN SHORTCAKE.

1 cup freshly cooked peas.	1 cup diced boiled carrots.
1 cup boiled potatoes.	1 cup cream sauce.
1 tablespoon of chopped parsley.	1 teaspoon of onion juice.
1 old-fashioned short cake.

Put the vegetables, which may include fresh mushrooms, into a well seasoned cream sauce, and cook for five minutes, adding the parsley and onion juice. Have ready an old-fashioned pancake of biscuit dough, split it and butter it, then spread the hot creamed vegetables between and on top. Dust with paprika and garnish with sprays of parsley. (In many parts of Europe cooked vegetables are combined with bread stuffs like this. It is a more wholesome, that is more digestible, combination than a bread with sour fruits.)

MRS. JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON, 621 West 135th St., New York City.

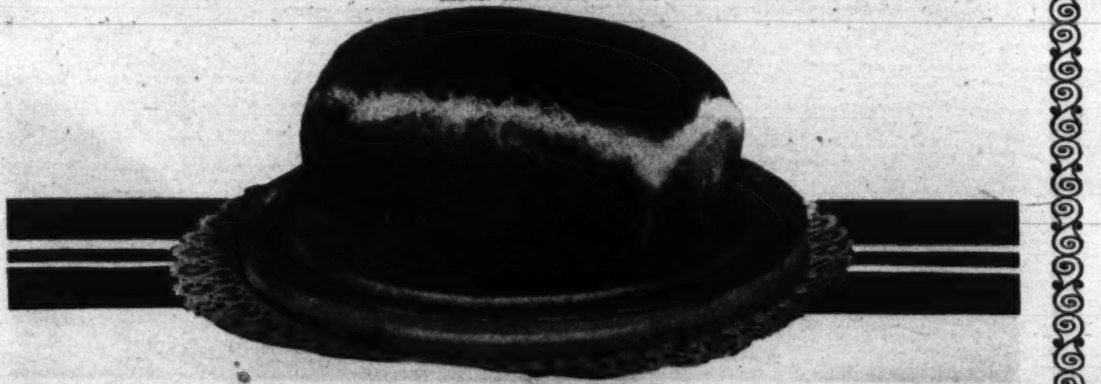
FILLED LETTUCE.

6 heads of lettuce.	3½ ounces grated white bread.
2 eggs.	1 onion.

A little milk, chopped parsley and salt to taste, and a sauce.

Cook lettuce in a little water, but do not let it soften. Remove from water and put in filling made by beating the eggs well with a little milk and adding bread and seasonings. Melt a little butter or substitute in a stewing pot, place lettuce in same and stew till done. Serve hot with a sauce made of flour, butter and a little water. (The first direction here evidently means "blanch" the lettuce. This is a palatable meat substitute, good without a sauce, and will help use every lettuce leaf even.)

MRS. R DIEMECKE, 3520 N. Hamilton Ave., Chicago.



BREAD FROM RICE FLOUR.

1 cup rice flour.	½ cup liquid.
¾ cup mashed potato.	1 tablespoon sirup.
1⅛ cups wheat flour.	1 teaspoon fat.
½ cake compressed yeast.	1 teaspoon salt.

Make a sponge of the liquid, sirup, yeast and mashed potato and enough of the rice flour to make a batter. Allow to rise until light—about one hour—and then add the salt, fat and the remainder of the flours. This dough must be much stiffer than ordinary bread dough. Knead thoroughly and allow to rise until double in bulk. Knead, mold into a loaf and when double bake fifty minutes to one hour. Begin with a hot oven, and after fifteen minutes, lower the temperature to that of a moderate oven and finish baking. (The loaf in the picture was too hot to cut but an expert bread maker gets a fine grained bread with this recipe, which was twice tested, first with six others containing rice flour.)

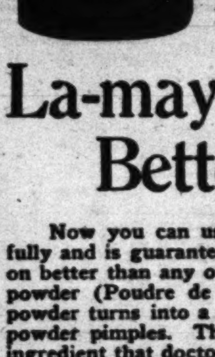
New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. But all toilet soap contains caustic potash or caustic soda to dry and age the skin, encouraging the premature aging of the complexion. The same thing in soap that shrinks woolens also shrivels the skin. In place of soap some use cold cream. Many face creams contain mineral oil, and mineral oil helps to grow hair. A specialist has perfected a new substance, called Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot, grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Many of those who use it declare it has done more real good to their complexion than any cream or toilet soap they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, N. Y.



La-may Face Powder Stays on Better Than Any Other

Now you can use a pure face powder that beautifies your complexion wonderfully and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well, this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed. If you do not find La-may much better than any you have ever used your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.

TROCO

The Successor to Butter
Made from the White Meat of Coconuts

The Triumph of Science Applied to Food Resources

TROCO is not a substitute, but a new table luxury, used by discriminating people because they like it—its delicate flavor, appetizing ingredients, knowledge of care in making. Its appeal is to the fastidious—those who hitherto have accepted nothing but finest butter.

Troco is made from the dainty white meat of coconuts—the most attractive of all sources of fat for the churn. Pasteurized milk gives the pure sweet Troco flavor—the famous flavor which is only comparable with the finest creamery product.

The exclusive process of making has been perfected by the Troco company. Troco is the triumph of science applied to the development of food resources which help the world live better at moderate cost.

Troco is also highly nutritious—an energy food of the highest value. It is as digestible and easily assimilated as butter.

Old laws, made before this great discovery, compel us to label it as an oleomargarine. But it contains no animal oils. Troco is made by a company which specializes on this one appetizing vegetable product. No preservatives are used.

Naturally the success of Troco encourages the introduction of many similar products. So you should ask for Troco by name. For, while most of these products are wholesome, you want the de luxe quality which users enjoy in Troco.

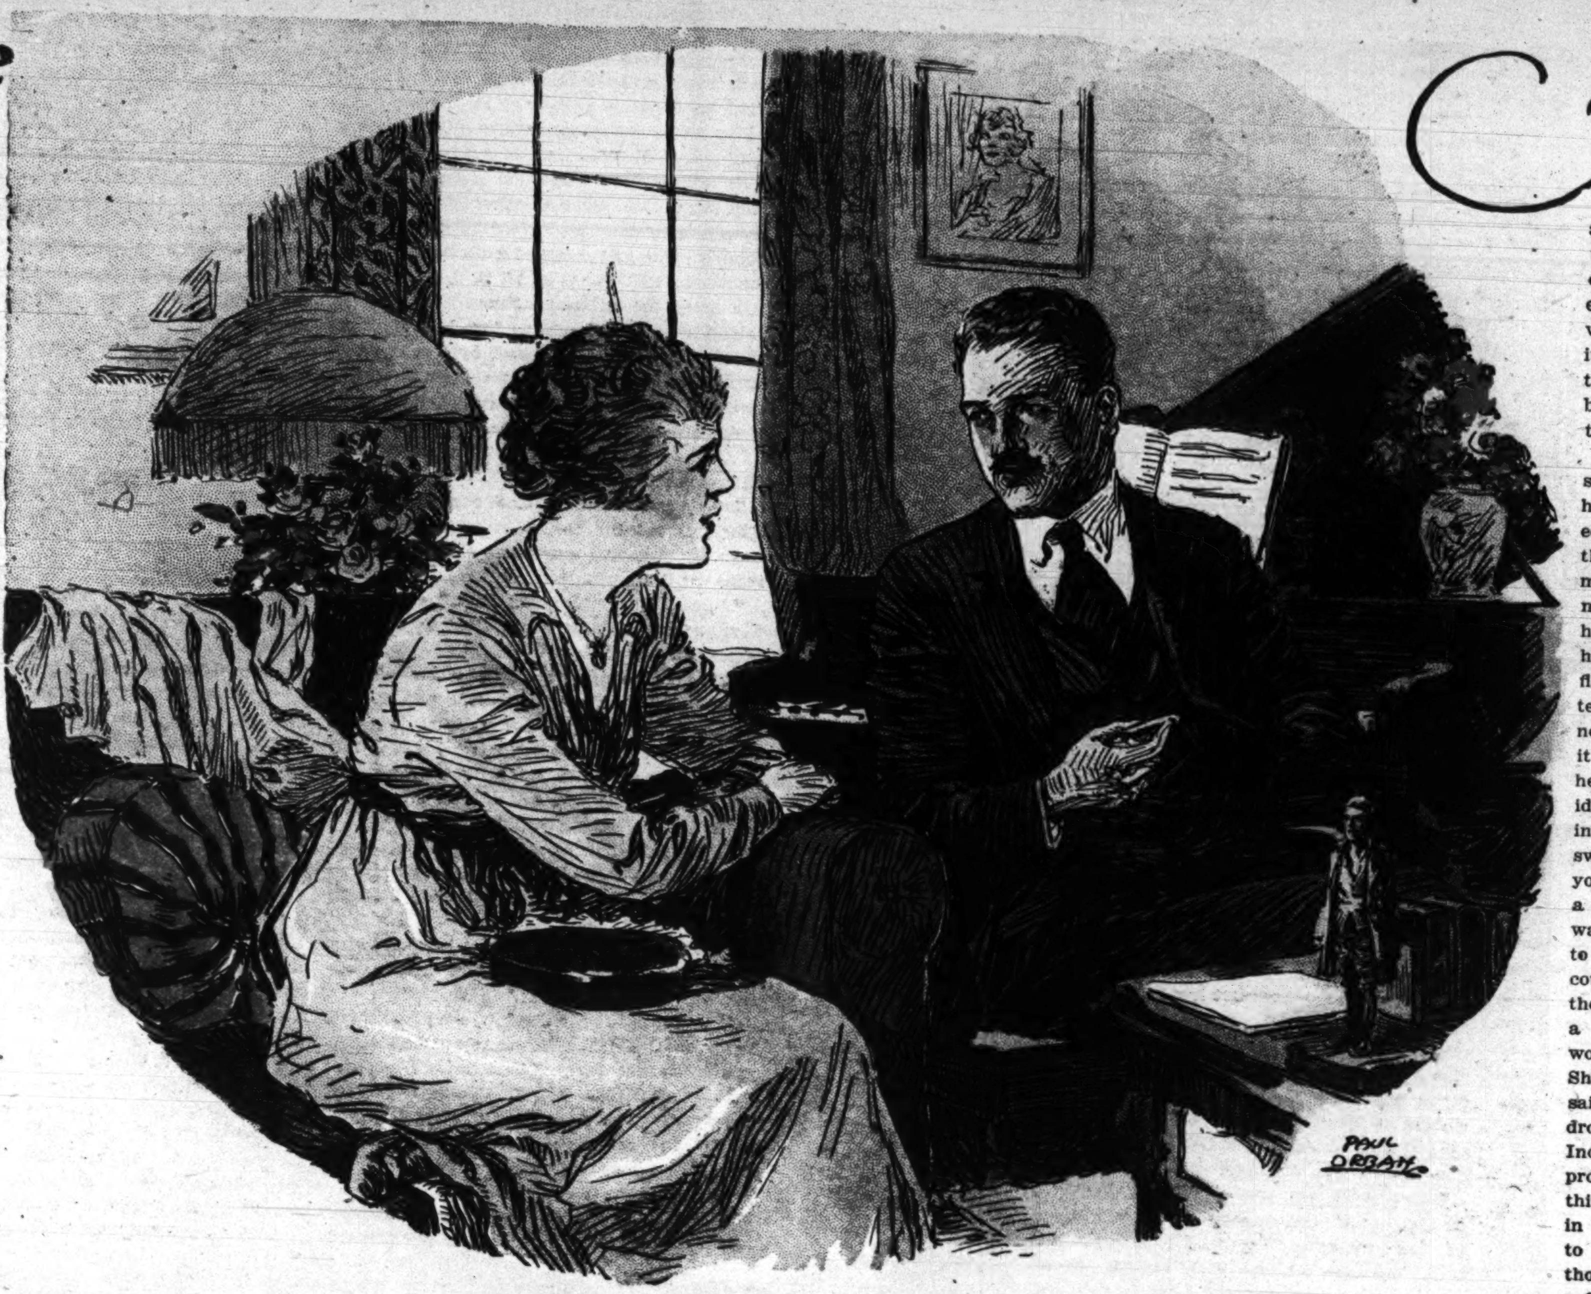
The GRUB and the BUTTERFLY

His Vanity Made Him as Putty in the Hands of Clever Women.

by Mary Heaton Vorse ◆



"I don't know how it is that I can talk to you so much more easily than anybody else!"

THERE is no doubt about it, some of the flowers in the garden of joy wither up and die when a man realizes for the first time that instead of being regarded as a man he is regarded as a husband. This I can make clearer by a little incident.

It occurred as far back as the first dance to which Felicia and I went after our marriage. It was a large dance, and though I am no more light-minded than my neighbors, I confess to a childish joy in a good dance. Indeed, I had often wondered why the husbands I knew, who had blithely footed it in their young days, had now to be drugged and bound ere their wives could carry them off triumphant to a dancing party. Among other reasons why this should be so, I was shortly to learn the principal one.

The dance was an informal one, but fairly large. In the course of a few moments I was presented to a girl in flame colored clothes. She had large brown eyes and a smooth, childish brow and a childish mouth. She looked, indeed, like a beautiful little girl whom a fairy godmother had touched with a wand and made to grow up overnight, and dressed up wonderfully and sent out to a party. But behind this mask of childishness there flickered and gleamed a demon of mischief. Indeed, a most delectable little girl, altogether, was what I thought.

We danced. She danced as she looked she would, and while she danced she looked into my eyes. Having been dead to the world because of my Felicia, I had forgotten girls did this, and it came to me with a shock of pleasant surprise. She tried on me one after another of her charming, innocent artillery of coquetries. As I say, I had forgotten girls acted this way. It was like waking up after a long sleep.

How sincerely glad I was that they did so I showed artlessly. I felt like a mariner returned from a long sea voyage who sees beautiful women afresh, after months on the salt water. We sat out a dance or two in a convenient corner. "How beautiful," I thought, "is the world. We really should go out oftener." The tide of enjoyment rose high within me.

Then, because I was as innocent of the world I found myself in as a new laid egg, and seeing Felicia walking past:

"I should like to have you meet my wife," says I.

"I should love to meet Mrs. Jeffers," returned my partner, with every cordiality.

I effected the introduction, and we sailed away. But where those innocent coquetries that had so pleased me a moment before? "Gone with the snows of yesteryear," nor could any cajolement of mine bring from her an answering flicker. The little sparkle of awakening interest was replaced by a staid friendliness. I might have been dancing with my sister. It was all very depressing.

I took my partner back to her place and soon had the chagrin of seeing the mischief in her eyes reawaken at the call of a wabble-kneed, chinless youth with lank drab hair. Gloom settled on me. I danced with some married women I knew, and talked with some old ladies. I danced with Felicia—who wasn't interested in me. She did it, I felt, much as she might give orders about the pressing of my clothes—part of one of her wifely duties, and to show the world at large that we were good friends, though married.

In the carriage home:

"What happened to you?" Felicia asked me. "You seemed to be having such fun the first part of the evening, and then, all of a sudden, you turned sulky."

"What happened to me, Felicia, was this," I replied with dignity. "I discovered one of nature's laws which isn't flattering to my vanity. The career of man is exactly opposite to that of the butterfly. Man starts with wings; then he enters into the cocoon of marriage; presently he eats his way out into the world and expects to fly. He finds that instead of being possessed of iridescent wings, he is nothing but a useful grub. It is no doubt good for the world that this should be so, Felicia, but it is depressing for the grub."

"Piffle!" consoled Felicia. Then she said dreamily: "Did you notice what a heavenly dancer that long-legged man with the red hair was?"

I looked at Felicia. There are things about my wife that I never quite understand. Why should she have expected me to notice the gymnastics of a long-legged youth with red hair? I ignored her remark.

"There are countries, Felicia, where it is the woman who retires into the cocoon and emerges, as I have said, a useful grub. If you lived in one of these, you would have listened with more sympathetic attention."

"I asked him to call," replied Felicia.

. . . .

It was a series of experiences like this which taught me the difference between a man and a mere husband. We continued to go to dances, and I found myself becoming a frequenter of the smoking room and an attaché of elderly ladies. Felicia, instead of sympathizing with me, complained that I didn't seem to have a good time, and that I was on her mind.

"I perform my useful, if humble, function," I told Felicia. "Let me alone. I will cheerfully dance with all the girls who don't find partners. I will sit in the smoking room, doing harm to no one. I will talk to the old ladies. But I refuse to have my feelings trampled on by misses who find more excitement in dancing with any flat-footed, freckle-handed, turkey-necked, unmarried kid than with a decent married man!"

Occasionally a flicker of sunlight diversified my monotonous existence as a husband. Now and then one of the older girls would smile at me impudently, signifying that, husband or no, it was all the same to her. Occasionally a married woman, whose husband no doubt treated her badly, would make me the temporary solace of her disappointed heart.

So I went on with my rôle of encourager of the aged and partner to the unsuccessful until one day—or rather one evening—there drifted into my life a little girl as young as spring, with the smile of an indecorous angel, and pale gold as to the hair. It was Felicia who introduced me to her, and in my lackluster married way I asked her to dance. To my surprise, she lifted her velvety purple eyes to mine and said:

"I should love to."

During our dance she plied the blandishments of youth upon me. When the dance was over, and we stood chatting together, there approached us a young man with no more expression in his face than a new washed slate. I resigned myself to have the monotonous story repeated. When he asked to see her dance card, and asked for the first vacant dance, the seventh, the unbelievable happened.

"I've just given the seventh to Mr. Jeffers," said she.

"Can I have the tenth?" asked the young man.

"I've given him that, too," replied my partner; "that and the supper dance. That's all I have left."

Beaten, the young man bowed stiffly and turned his disappointed back. I felt sorry for the fine, upstanding young fellow, who was one of the nicest looking boys I had seen in a long time.

She turned her dove's eyes on me again, pleading, "I hope you don't mind!"

Did I mind? Under them, my heart grew young again. The tender green grass of innocent affection sprang up in the arid places. Bird song again was heard in the trees where no song had been for so long. Spring came again. After all, it was nice to be treated by the young as though one were a person of some value in one's self. Here at last was a nice girl, a girl who liked me for myself, who was willing to dance with me and talk with me, and didn't care a bean that she wouldn't be able, because of my being married, to tie me to her chariot wheels.

What happened next rather piqued me. Of course, it was kind of Felicia, and high-minded, and not for the world would I have her feel otherwise than she does. Still, to have your wife start in to cultivate an attractive young thing the way she might cause your favorite dessert to be made for you has its elements of humiliation.

"I know I'm not dangerous, Felicia!" my heart cried aloud. "I know—and glory in the fact—that no more well behaved married man than I could be found in the four kingdoms. But O, Felicia, why rub it in? It's all very well to be a virtuous husband of one's own free will, but to have it taken for granted in this cold-blooded way!"

In a certain way, too, it is highly unbecoming in a woman to let her husband perceive that she's so darn sure of him. I've seen many a woman married to a man beside whom I am a roaring lion, giving him the gratifying impression that she at least considers him a roistering blade, and needing looking after. That's how a man likes to feel. But for your wife to toss you a nice looking young woman to amuse yourself with, with the same serenity that she'd toss you a new book—well, it did stick in my crop.

"O, Felicia," I thought to myself reproachfully, "how much more becoming in you a little flicker of jealousy would have been! Then I could have taken you in my arms, Felicia, and embracing you fondly, said, 'There's no one in the world but you for me, my darling!' Then you, with your head resting upon my shoulder, could have looked up and murmured, 'Yes, I know—but——' I should have understood your little tremor of doubt of yourself, and have soothed you. 'I never will see the girl again,' I could have said, 'if you don't want me to.' And you, all indignation at such a thought, would have besought me to see her all I wished to, which, of course, I should have done—but with how much more gusto under those circumstances, Felicia! How much more nobility and interest would have been lent to life!"

As it was, I was sent out into the world marked, as far as Felicia was concerned, with a sign in six foot letters: "Not dangerous!" Hang it all, it's all very well to be not dangerous; but it's a thing you want to keep to yourself. I'm a modest man. I don't like to wear my virtues on my sleeve. In fact, many a more worthy man than I has been driven to acts he has afterward regretted by the complacent behavior of his wife.

"O, very well, woman!" they say to themselves. "I'm not dangerous, am I? Just watch me!"

Indeed, the only woman whose duty it is to treat her husband as the lamb with mint sauce is the woman who in reality has a roaring lion for a mate, who goes around devouring what he can. For her, Felicia's irritating serenity would be the wise policy. But do you catch women with husbands like this acting so? No! You find them hopping up and down like excited sparrows on their doorsteps, and calling after the departing figures of their lords:

"Don't eat anybody, John! O, don't eat anybody before you come home!"

The lion goes off, muttering and grumbling things about "darn fools" and "jealousy." And there you are! That's the way with women.

. . . .

So it happened that I found myself thrown with my little friend of the pale gold hair, whose romantic name was Rosalie. Indeed, I do not think that I am doing Felicia injustice when I say I was thrown at Rosalie. There was something about my wife's manner that led me to suspect that she had been guilty of thoughts like:

"Thank God, he's got something to amuse him at last! Now when we go out I shan't see him 'glommering' at me from doorways."

To test the truth of this theory, I asked an old friend of mine, who is a married woman of some years' standing, why it was that wives were always so worried about their husbands when they were out in company. I threw this out as a fisherman throws a fly to a salmon. I might get my answer; I mightn't.

I got it. It was wriggling large at the end of my question mark before it had fairly touched the water.

"Good heavens!" she said. "It's because a man's a tremendous responsibility. There's hardly a husband living who will go out and have a good time and amuse himself. He's always coming back to his wife and hanging around, until she's afraid that each party's going to be her last. First you go through the awful misery of getting your husband dressed, and next you nurse him through the whole evening; and when you think that most men begin to think of going home the minute they get to a dance, and put on airs about being nice if they do happen to stay——!"

My friend wagged her head. The indictment against the husband was indeed heavy. I didn't say to her, as I might:

"And whose fault is it, woman, that these young men who went gayly to parties now shun them like the plague? Whose fault is it that all decent men, who are fond of their wives, are left to languish in doorways and smoking rooms?"

But I said nothing, and merely resolved that the unpleasing thought that Felicia had thrown Rosalie at me as a bribe, and also to get me off her hands, should not dampen my pleasant friendship with Rosalie.

We became, indeed, the best of friends. Our relation became one recognized by the society in the gay little summer place where we were stopping. At dances it was a matter of course that I should dance with Rosalie a number of times, just as if I were any gallus young blade. Was there a motoring expedition planned—I had my place near Rosalie. People gave me Rosalie to take in to dinner All of which I did with my weather eye on Felicia, ready at the first signal to assure her how heart free I was, and of my utter innocence of even incidental disloyalty. But Felicia continued to be as complacent and unruffled as any bowl of cream on the pantry shelf

During our many tête-à-têtes, Rosalie told me of her life, especially her childhood. She confided to me lovely things that I had never expected to hear again—things that Felicia had never told me. For instance, Rosalie told me that she was very different from other girls; that she had been strange even as a child—so strange that it worried her aunts terribly. Her mother had always said, "Let her alone—she'll turn out all right." Never had Felicia allowed such an appealing and simple hearted confession to drop from her lips.

Rosalie told me further that she had the very highest ideals, that she thought, between people, absolute trust must be the basis of any affection.

"I would'nt marry a man," she said, "who could mistrust me, no matter what I did—no matter how appearances were against me, he would have to give me his absolute and unbroken trust. Even if," she said, "he thought he had caught me with the goods on, he would have to trust me"—for Rosalie had a piquant way of interspersing elevated conversation—she was extremely fond of elevated conversations, as it is right and good that the young should be—with fragments of the slang of the day.

She had never, she said, cared for boys of her own age; she seemed rather gratified that this was so. She gave me to understand that maturity of a rather hoary sort appealed to her. This was not as flattering as she intended it to be in her innocence; but I capped it off neatly by telling her that she had no idea what an uplifting influence the fresh, sweet friendship of a young girl might be to a worn wayfarer. It was here she gave me to understand that I couldn't conceive what the strong friendship of a hoary headed elder would mean to her. She needed friends, she said, with a pathetic droop of her lower lip. Indeed friends would probably be the only thing she would have in life! She gave me to understand that, though young, she had suffered much.

It may sound foolish in the telling, but it was like revisiting youth for me to listen to Rosalie's artless immaturities. I loved to have her look at me with naïve wonder, saying:

"I don't know how it is that I can talk to you so much more easily than anybody else!"

Indeed, I do not think there was one of the well worn platitudes of youth that Rosalie did not hand me out with the air of bestowing upon me a new minted coin of thought—as indeed she was, dear child, as far as she was concerned. For even now, I can think with no bitterness of Rosalie.

It was about this time that our little personal understanding began. It happened this way.

"You'd better," I said to Rosalie, "put those chocolates in an unostentatious spot; your aunt is coming, and she'll catch you with the goods on."

Rosalie, I may explain, has an inordinate fondness for chocolates, which her aunt tries to curb. At this speech, Felicia frowned at me.

"I don't think," she told me austerely, "it's dignified in you to teach Rosalie slang like that."

Rosalie also turned a cold eye upon me.

"No," she emphatically agreed with Felicia; "I think it's a horrid slang phrase."

It was too good a joke to keep, and I would undoubtedly have told Felicia had not she gone to greet Rosalie's aunt, who now arrived, and Rosalie seized this opportunity to say to me:

"O, I was so frightened when you said that! You must never tell Felicia—never—that you got 'caught with the goods on' from me!" Dear child, she supposed she had taught it to me!

As I say, the joke was too good to keep, so I let it out that Felicia herself could go Rosalie three better in the picturesque use of her mother tongue, and had only been throwing a bluff; at which Rosalie, recalling the solemn and elevated talk of only a moment before, giggled and giggled again, until Felicia asked:

"What are you two giggling about?"

"We'll never tell! Rosalie giggled. "We've got a secret!"

After that our friendship took on a more intimate tone. I used slang frequently in Felicia's presence, to be reproved with severity by both Rosalie and Felicia. It was one of the simple delights of my simple heart to hear Rosalie exclaim affectedly:

"O, Mr. Jeffers, I wish you wouldn't use slang—I shall be using it next, if I hear you!"

So you see what simple hearted pleasures mine were in those days, and how little it took to please me—nothing but the feeling that I was liked for myself alone; nothing but the companionship of people on a human basis—nothing, in short, but not having it rubbed in by every young person I met that I was a married man.

So I went on permitting Rosalie to enliven for me the boredom of things, and feeling, by the way, that I was doing her no end of good. Little by little I began to talk to her on serious subjects, and the thought that I might form her young mind occurred to me. I even mentioned the matter to Felicia, a little sheepishly. At which Felicia asked me:

"Has she one, do you suppose, to form?"

Which, I confess, was a question I couldn't very well answer.

"Here she is now!" Felicia added, and went forward to meet our little friend and left me to decide the question.

I decided she must have. It was more flattering for me that she should. Besides, her obvious liking for me was a most encouraging symptom. Under the effervescence and the conventional speech of youth, a mind might be somewhere lurking.

They came in together, Felicia and Rosalie. Rosalie was blushing, with every evidence of confusion, and yet of pride.

"You tell him!" she implored Felicia.

"No, you tell him," said Felicia.

"You tell him!" Rosalie echoed, like a little parrot. "He'll be so pleased!"

"O, very well," said Felicia. "He will." With the most unconscious air in the world, "Rosalie's engaged," was the amazing piece of information she gave to me.

It took me all in a heap, knocked me in the solar plexus.

"Rosalie's what?" I echoed stupidly.

"Engaged," dimpled Rosalie. "Isn't it nice!"

"Very," I agreed. By this time I had got myself together again, although in my own mind I was asking "When?" and "How on earth?" and "Where?" I didn't see where she had made the time to accomplish this. I realized at the same time what an industrious girl Rosalie was.

"Of course," I went on, with something of what I trusted was light sarcasm, "it's quite an incident, I know, to a girl—it's being engaged that counts—that's the grand affair; but her friends like to know the name of the man—not that it matters very much, of course. He's naturally an incident in the whole affair."

Rosalie's mouth formed itself into a round, red "O."

"Why," she exclaimed, "I thought you'd guess who it would be!"

She spoke with the voice of a girl who doesn't know that there is more than just one man in the world, and who, from the hour of her birth, has known but one, and who has been potentially betrothed to him always.

"It's Henry Standish, of course," she announced.

This, I may explain, was the name of the young man with the expression of a whitewashed cellar door whose dances Rosalie had given me the night of our meeting.

"I've been proving him," she went on. "And, O!" she clasped her hands here with a little girlish gesture that seemed less fascinating to me than it had the day before—"you don't know how beautifully he's acted—beautifully! I thought at first I'd tell you about it, so that you could help me out—but Felicia said you'd act more natural if you didn't know anything about it. You see," she went on, her face falling into a sad little expression, "I've seen so much grief and misery come into the world from people suspecting each other that, as I told you, I couldn't marry any man who didn't give me implicit trust, no matter what I did, no matter how bad it was. When I first began to"—she hesitated, to choose her words—"to—to be nice to you," she faltered, "I thought he was going to be like all the rest of the men; but after that he was just as sweet and patient! Instead of glommering, he took any dances, or any little thing I did for him, as gratefully, and never made any hateful references when he came to call. There aren't many men"—I never had noticed how Rosalie did run on when she got wound up—"there aren't many men who would see the girl they care for going around with a married man, and not be cross! And then I asked Felicia, if I might, and she said she didn't care——"

Here, I am glad to say, is where I acted nobly, or rather, I acted so that I didn't need to blush for myself. Advancing to Rosalie, I took both her hands in mine and wished her joy, told her what a happy man the young man was, and touched lightly on my joy in having been able to play my own small part in the drama of her life. A new tone—a paternal tone—was present in my accent.

But Rosalie, the ingrate, hadn't even time to listen to my kindly and well chosen speeches. She was like a little captive bird, fluttering to be gone, to fly on rapid wings to the spot where the young man with the hard boiled egg countenance was doubtless awaiting her.

On her departure I picked up a book, said something pleasant to Felicia to include her in the silence, and settled to read, although the words that appeared on the page before me made no impression on my mind.

I had been put in my place once for all! My one little friend had used the fact that I was a married man to further her own ends. It was the hand of Rosalie that dealt me the final blow—or, to use a more fitting simile, who had slammed the door of the cage upon me forever.

Yes, Rosalie had used me scandalously! All her innocent wiles, that I thought were for me, had been so many put up jobs done for the benefit of a long legged oaf. I shuddered to think of the depths of self-control that it must have taken to keep her by my side when every bit of her cried aloud for the presence of her blank faced swain—what perseverance she had shown—what continuity of purpose—for Rosalie had done her work with a thoroughness that was worthy of a better cause than making a poor young man uncomfortable for no reason, and denying herself at the same time her heart's desire.

Then, as I looked over these unvarnished facts, there swept over me a great pity for Henry Standish. Indeed, I found myself voicing my thoughts to Felicia with:

"There's a young woman who's going to rule her house with an iron hand!"

Felicia's reply to this was:

"I couldn't have stood her around much longer! O, Bobby, I'd forgotten that girls burble the way they do!"

To listen to the woman, one would have thought that she had been leading a long life of self-sacrifice. Silence again fell between us. I hope I gave the impression of being immersed in my book. Light dawned on me.

"Felicia!" I said sternly, "you told him—I'll bet you anything you choose you told him!"

To this Felicia answered virtuously:

"I'm not one of those criminals who sit back and watch fools slap their own happiness in the face!"

She walked across the room, and turning suddenly, faced me:

"Think of her having the impudence of asking me if I minded—I minded—her talking much with you!"

She wagged her head as she gazed into the nameless depths of Rosalie's lack of tact. Then a puzzled look came into her face, and I knew she was wondering how on earth I had stood so much of what she called Rosalie's "burbling"; and I realized the gulf there was yawning between us, a gulf put there by Felicia's fatal lack of imagination. I longed to cry:

"O, Felicia, can't you realize that as a clever woman who finds herself a wallflower will dance gratefully with a 16 year old boy——"

I stopped. There was more in it than that. There came to me a vision of Rosalie, a little gay, glancing, laughing vision. The world of parties suddenly seemed to me a blank desolate. I glanced covertly at Felicia over the edge of my book. Good heavens! Did the woman suppose that one wanted intellectual conversation from girls like Rosalie; wasn't warm youth, and pretty looks, and gayety enough?

And now, it was all over. I had been played scandalously. No more would Rosalie chirrup at my side! Then a vision of how she must have bored Felicia came to me. I smiled cheerfully to myself; for, after all, a good deal of the joke was on Felicia.

MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

Clothes May Not Make the Man But They Do Make Him Sit Up and Take Notice.

MARGARET DEANE stood in her office, pinning her taupe colored hat to her taupe colored hair and entirely oblivious to the painful result. Her mind was soaring far above harmonizing tints, for for the first time in her thirty years of life romance was calling to her from afar. As she stood, smiling absently at the gloves she was pulling on, the raucous voice of her stenographer sounded from the outer office. Margaret had had occasion to reprove the girl earlier in the day and she was now expressing herself very forcefully, regarding Miss Deane's personality, evidently thinking herself and her confidante alone.

"Say, did you know that Pittsburgh editor is coming out to see Miss Deane? What do you suppose he'll think of her!"

"Not much of her looks, that's sure. Stand her in a shadow and you couldn't find her—she's all the same color, skin, hair, and——" here the door banged as they left and she stood, still gazing at her gloves, but the absent smile was gone.

What would he think of her? That had not occurred to her. She had always been so finely lacking in self-consciousness that she rarely thought of herself as an entity, which was one reason she was the highest salaried woman in the office as well as a probable cause of romance always sidestepping. Thoroughly engrossed with her work on a large magazine, she might not have awakened to this lack in her life had she not received a short time before a rather rude jolt.

Mr. Elton, the handsome bachelor editor, had stopped at her room one day with some papers he wished to discuss with her. As usual, he was brief and business-like, leaving the room as soon as he had explained his wishes in regard to them. A few moments later Margaret passed through the hall and saw him chatting with Miss Clemens, the pretty brunette who did the illustrating for the fashion section. As Margaret walked by them she heard him say, "Have dinner with me tonight. I owe you that if I ask you to stay overtime." The expression on the man's face was enough to startle her and this remark did not tend to lessen her sense of upheaval. He was laughing, interested, looking at the girl before him with intense appreciation of her physical charm. Margaret had never before seen him save as the cold, indifferent editor, and it was as though she saw a stranger. And then the invitation! He had often kept her overtime, but no invitation had ever been forthcoming. She felt as though Mr. Elton were not the only stranger she had suddenly met, being in the hold of a feeling so new to her she did not recognize its green eyes; and thoroughly awakened to the delight such an invitation—from him—would bring her.

At 5 she went to his office with the papers and again was greeted with the impersonal attention and business-like courtesy. For the first time in her life she felt "out of it," and this sense of restless dissatisfaction was renewed each time she was brought in contact with Elton.

About this time her correspondence with Eric had begun and she had unconsciously responded to the fillip her pride had received and thrown herself into it with more interest than it might otherwise have aroused.

When "Norah's Lament," a poem she had written, was published in an eastern magazine, the editor, Eric O'Shaughnesy, wrote to her asking her to submit another, and taking it for granted only a Celt could so delineate the heart of an Irish peasant, he hailed her as a compatriot. The correspondence had lengthened into a more or less regular affair and of late an increasing familiarity had caused her to stop dictating her replies. This morning's letter had commenced "My dear Norah," for he insisted that if not Irish by birth, she was at heart and he wanted to meet her. He would be in Chicago the following week, would she lunch with him at Raynor's?

O'Shaughnesy held no mean position in the world of letters and her satisfaction in receiving this invitation had been intense. But the stenographer's comments had jarred her complacency, and now feeling she had been lashed across the face and all the world could see the marks, she slung (no other word will express her frame of mind) out of the office and entered the elevator. Confronted by her face in the mirror of the car, she stopped as though she had never seen it before and stood engrossed till she heard "main floor" bellowed louder than usual, and realizing the man had called it twice, she started and left with a mechanical "good night."

"And she ain't so much of a looker at that," meditated the man; "but them women's all alike," lumping the kaleidoscopic sex with masculine generality.

Still feeling she shrank from observation, Margaret started north, deciding to walk to the boarding house she called home and try to forget the words which had caused her such misgiving. But suppose they were true, and they probably were, what would Eric think when he saw her?

Entering the dining room, her problem still unsolved, she caught sight of Elise Martin, looking, as usual, like a bit of exquisite porcelain. Margaret had never noticed her particularly; she never said anything worth while, a continual "joshing" being her strongest characteristic. But now a great envy of Elise's finished appearance came over her—how did she do it!

After dinner she went slowly upstairs, waiting for Elise, who would have passed her with a nod, but Margaret said, "May I speak with you a moment?" opening her door tentatively.

"Why, surely," quoth Elise, almost falling downstairs in her astonishment; for this was almost the first time Margaret had spoken directly to her save with the usual greetings.

"Miss Elise, I am in a little difficulty and I need advice. I know no one to ask but you—that is, no one who seems to be so qualified to help me."

"Advice from me—I—you—why, Miss Deane, I feel awfully flattered to think I can advise you in any way."

"It seems such a foolish thing to talk about," said poor Margaret, "I hardly know how to begin. It's—it's"—with a plunge—"my clothes, or rather my appearance. I overheard a remark tonight which—well, it wasn't pleasant and it opened my eyes to a condition of which I have never thought and with which I don't know how to cope. You see, Miss Elise," she said, gathering courage as she saw interest and no disdain in the face opposite, "I have always worked so hard, have been so interested in my work, I have not taken time to think about dress. It has always seemed foolish to spend any more thought on it than I could avoid. But you always look so perfect, I thought perhaps you could tell me how to dress well without wasting too much time."

Elise laughed a little. "Dress is like anything else, I guess. There isn't anything given to us for nothing; if it's worth while one has to work for it. The girls who think they can dress without time and trouble look just that way when they get their clothes on. I don't spend much time now because I have learned how; but, O, Miss Deane, you should have seen me when I first came to Chicago! Goodness! I was a sight! But you see," shyly, "I'm different from you; I can't just open my mouth and have something interesting to say. I have to look pretty or no one would notice me and I wouldn't have a good time at all!"

"Did it take you long to learn and do you think it would take much of my time?"

"It depends on how much you want it. And then," hesitating a little, "I don't want to be preachy, but is it all a waste of time? Back home my mother used to say everybody could give some one something. I haven't any great amount of brains, but I have looks, so I give them; you like to look at me, I have seen you do it. Now take yourself; do you think it would rest a tired human being to look at you, or that it would give any one a pleasure?" Margaret remembered the elevator mirror and shuddered, and Elise went on. "I do rest you and give you pleasure because I don't let my nose shine and have learned how to do my hair."

"You are a dear little philosopher," said Margaret, looking at her with sudden liking, "and now tell me, how would I impress you, how would I impress a man at first?"

Elise laughed. "I'd think you bought the first thing you saw whether it was becoming or not, and put it on without a look in the glass. As for a man, honestly, I don't believe he'd notice you at all."

Margaret's vanity being still young and tender, squirmed, and Elise, seeing this, added hastily, "But you could make him notice you. You see, Miss Deane, you're all right the minute you start talking, but what good does that do you if a man doesn't even see that you are there. The men can bleat all they want about companionship, I notice when a man sizes up a roomful of women to find a companion he doesn't pick the most sensible looking one, but the prettiest."

The scene in the hall of the office flashed into Margaret's mind and Elise's words were significant as she recalled the expression on Elton's face as he listened to Miss Clemens' babble.

"Do you think you can show me in three days how to dress so a man would want to talk to me, or at least, so he would not be dreadfully disappointed the first time he saw me!"

"You just bet I can!" said Elise vehemently. "When it comes to clothes my heart is sure in my work. And hair," she added, pouncing on Margaret and pulling out hairpins with much vigor, "why do you yank it back so tight. It's a right pretty shade, too, if only you wouldn't wear browns next to it. They make it look faded. There! Now look at yourself!"

"Why I look young!" exclaimed Margaret.

"Of course, and you'll look pretty before I get through." Elise was unconsciously patronizing, but the loosened waves of her hair had so thrilled Margaret with possibilities that she wasn't even amused, but submitted to an inspection of her entire wardrobe and heard with perfect calm the edict, "You must have all new things!"

The next days were the most exciting of her life. She squandered ruthlessly on mere clothes with which to please a mere man the entire sum she had laid aside for some long coveted books, thus proving conclusively in this case the power of matter over mind. She had "facials" and manicures, a shampoo and a "natural" wave put in her hair. Elise wouldn't let her have a marcel. "It wouldn't suit your style at all; it's too artificial, and I want you to look as though your clothes were sort of born on you, not just stuck on as an afterthought." (By which you will note Elise was, after her kind, an artist.) "And you must wear all new things Sunday. Clothes are like friends, you have to get acquainted with them before you feel easy with them."

On Monday Margaret paralyzed the office force by appearing in petunia broadcloth trimmed with fur, perfectly booted and gloved for the first time in her life, and with her hair waving under a smart little hat and veil. It was an ordeal, but her habitual lack of self-consciousness carried her bravely through and the sense of being well gowned was a bulwark in itself. Excitement, helped along a little by the "facials," had brought a flush to her cheeks and a sparkle to her eyes that changed the little drab nonentity she seemed into a charming woman.

This was the day she was to meet her Eric, so at 1 o'clock she entered the writing room of the Raynor and glanced about for the man—tall, fine looking, gray haired—whom she unconsciously expected to come forward to greet her. Alas! a short, almost grotesquely fat man approached, and in an uncertain voice announced himself O'Shaughnesy. Poor Margaret! The bricks of her castle in Spain were rattling about her ears as she returned his greetings; for the charming, semi-sentimental letters had not prepared her for a man whose silhouette would indicate that he might wax poetical over a bill of fare, but would hardly waste time on anything (to him) less inspiring.

At the table the kindly cloth somewhat hid his rotundity and she might have been consoled by the really fine leonine head and brow had not his squeaky voice robbed his most earnest attempts to interest her of their dignity. When a tender sentiment starts on G in the bass, darts to middle C without warning, and abruptly volplanes back to a husky tenor, one is apt to ignore said sentiment, however lofty, in wondering at the ability of vocal cords to loop the loop unexpectedly. In short, the meeting was not an unqualified success; it was summed up by O'Shaughnesy, who, having escorted her to the office, said to himself, "A charming little thing, but lacks the sparkle her letter would indicate. Too quiet for me."

Inwardly wondering if she would be able to erect a new edifice on the old Spanish site, she was so absorbed that as she entered the building she almost collided with a man, tall, fine looking, gray haired! It was Elton, and in response to her bow he stopped suddenly. "Miss Deane, I hardly knew you. I—I—you are looking remarkably well," he finished abruptly. Then recalling himself, "I have just come from your office. An article from Washington has come in that I want to talk over with you; could you wait for me tonight? It may be a little late."

"Certainly, Mr. Elton, I am in no hurry tonight."

"Stay, if you have no engagement perhaps you could have dinner with me. We could drive up north somewhere and talk the article over in the car?"

. . . . .

You, who announced that the pen is mightier than the sword, you stopped too soon in your search for potent factors; witness, St. Anthony, that when it comes to the subjugation of man, becoming raiment has the pen backed off the boards!

"My pen, at all events," thought Margaret as she waited for the elevator. She entered the empty car and without a qualm faced the mirror.

"It paid!" she said.

"Ma'am!" said the startled elevator man.

something wrong. But the tide's rising fast and I'm anxious about him."

"You needn't be disturbed," Halliday answered with a touch of grimness. "He'll have to come back this way and we'll wait until he does."

His anger had grown worse. The wastrel had caused Jessy to run a serious risk, but, in a sense, Spence was to blame for this. Halliday did not mind whether Jack returned or not, but meant to have a reckoning with Spence, who had tempted both and trapped the dissipated lad. For all that, he tried to talk away the girl's uneasiness when he had helped her into the punt and made her put on his oilskin jacket. By and by a measured beat of wings came out of the dark; harsh, clanging cries fell from overhead, and a wedge of dusky objects moved across the sky.

"Geese," said Halliday. "Somebody has disturbed them."

The geese vanished, and everything was quiet, except for the murmur of the tide, until Jessy looked around as she heard footsteps on the bank.

"Keep still; I think it's Jack," said Halliday, putting his arm around her as a figure appeared.

The man stopped abruptly when he saw the punt; but Halliday called: "Come on. It's Jessy and I; we want to talk to you."

Jessy rose as her brother approached, but Halliday held her back. "Wait a moment; I've a question or two to ask him. Were you in the plot to drown me, Jack?"

"No," said Nichol, starting, while Jessy, who made a sudden movement, looked at him in astonishment. "On my honor, I know nothing about that!"

"It's lucky I can believe you," Halliday answered sternly. "Still, you let Spence think I could be bought."

Nichol hesitated. "I didn't, exactly; I don't know what I said. He made me talk about you one night when I had been drinking."

It sounded plausible, but Halliday stopped Jessy, who tried to speak. "I suppose you meant to join your friends and the tide turned you back?"

"That's not your business, Dick."

"I can't agree. It's your sister's business, anyhow, which makes it mine. Your father's an honest Canadian, and you're selling your country to German spies."

Jessy shook off his restraining grasp. "It isn't true; he's been foolish, but he can't be so bad as that! Why don't you deny it, Jack?"

"He can't," said Halliday. "You must face the truth, dear. Look at him, if you doubt me." Then he turned to Nichol. "Better drop the dangerous business, Jack. Your nerve's not good enough."

There was silence for a few moments, and Jessy shivered as she watched her brother, who stood awkwardly still. Then she said in a strained voice, "You can't go on with this, Jack. It's unthinkable!"

"I'm afraid it's too late to stop. I got in too deep before I really knew what I was about. Spence lent me money and tricked me into doing something that put me in his power."

"He'll throw you over when it suits him," Halliday interposed. "You're too soft for the job, but you know enough to be dangerous when he's done with you. Have you thought of that?"

"Sometimes," Nichol admitted. "But how can I get out of it? The risk will come if I try to leave them. You don't know how well they're organized."

"There is a way," Halliday answered. "I believe we could put you out of their reach if you leave it to me." He stopped as a flock of curlews flew screaming down the creek, and then resumed with a grim smile: "They're coming now! Have they a boat?"

"Yes; old Jim's fishing punt that he keeps on the middle sand. He doesn't know what they use it for."

"They'll need it," Halliday remarked, and, after bringing Nichol across and landing him and Jessy, pushed off the punt as three men appeared on the opposite bank. When about twenty yards off the party stopped and gazed at the others.

"Is that you, Nichol?" one of them called.

"It is, but he's staying here," Halliday answered. "I seem to recognize Mr. Spence's voice."

"You do, but don't meddle with this matter, Halliday; it's too big for you. Come across at once, Nichol. We can't wait."

Nichol hesitated, and then moved forward, as if overawed, but Halliday, who had knelt down in the bottom of the punt, waved him back.

"You certainly can't wait, but I won't allow you to bully Nichol," he said to Spence. "He's beginning to see what a fool he's been."

"One's a woman, and Nichol daren't show fight," another man remarked meaningly.

"Bring the punt across," Spence ordered Halliday. "We're armed, and I've got you covered."

"I expected something of the kind," Halliday replied with a harsh laugh. "A pistol fires one bullet and is pretty uncertain in the dark, but there's a canister of 'B' shot in the punt gun, and it will sweep the bank. My finger's on the trigger, and I rather wish you'd shoot."

The others drew back from the water's edge and began to consult in low voices, but Halliday, putting a paddle over, turned the punt's bow so that the muzzle of the long gray gun followed the group. While the men whispered and hesitated his voice rang out harsh and stern:

"Nichol has done with you, and you can't wade across or reach land from where you are; but you shall have a chance you didn't give me. Get back to your boat, for your lives, before the tide catches you!"

For a few moments they stood undecided, while the gurgle of the current, the splash of gathering ripples, and the beat of the surf on the lower flats came ominously out of the dark. Then the group broke up, there was a patter of footsteps across wet sand, and three shadowy figures faded into the mist.

"Now help me to heave this gun out," said Halliday, as he ran the punt aground. "It will mean a day's work to clean the lock afterward, but the punt won't carry it and us to the marsh."

They laid the heavy gun upon the sand, the others got on board, and as he paddled up the creek Halliday remarked: "This is going to be a busy night for me. Spence's gang won't pull the fishing boat far against the tide, and I must warn the coastguards and motor scouts before the ebb sets in. Then I mean to drive you, Jack, across country to catch the early morning train."

Nichol, who had been talking to Jessy, looked around. "I'd forgotten my risk for a moment. Spence will try to track me if he gets away, and expose me if he's caught. Where's it safe for me to go?"

"To the army," Halliday said dryly. "When you've joined one of the new battallions, they'll take care of you. You're going to serve your country now."

"O, Jack!" said Jessy. "That's the very best plan—and don't you think you ought?"

Nichol laughed, a strained, shamed laugh. "After all, I'll try. The other thing leads to trouble, and is mayn't be too late to change."

They landed soon afterward, and Jessy took her brother aside and spoke to him for a few minutes. Then she came back to Halliday smiling through her tears.

"You have given him his chance, and he'll take it. I'll never forget this, dear."

"He's safe now," said Halliday quietly. "When you come to think of it, his future's plainer than ours. He has only to keep straight and do his duty; but if I did mine, I'd give up the struggle to farm Marshcote and try to let you go."

Jessy kissed him. "You can't do that, Dick, and, if you could, I wouldn't consent. Things will get better, and if they don't we'll wait."

She left them, and at 6 o'clock next morning Halliday put Nichol into a north bound train.

A month later Jessy and Halliday stood in the street of the county town while a new battalion marched past. Jessy's eyes sparkled as she watched the lads swing by with heads up and shoulders squared.

"I had a letter from Jack this morning, and he's happy and doing well," she said. "Did you hear anything more about Spence's gang?"

"They were all caught by the coastguard, but the thing's to be kept quiet."

Jessie sighed as the tail of the battalion went by with a measured tramp, but her glance was proud as she turned to her lover.

"Brave lads! But one can serve one's country in other ways," she said. "When treachery would have paid you well, you were true to the flag, dear."

French Lessons for the Boys Who are going "Over There"

A Series of Twelve Lessons That Gives a Vocabulary of 1800 Words With Correct Phonetic Pronunciation.

SECOND LESSON

In Grove's conversational French (copyright 1918 by W. Scott Grove, Scranton, Pa.).

One lesson will appear each week.

By memorizing each lesson as it appears, correct expressions will be learned.

The conversation should be repeated with companions who are interested in the course.

"Study aloud to train eye, ear and tongue together," suggests the author of the course.

"And save each lesson of the series for practice and reference."

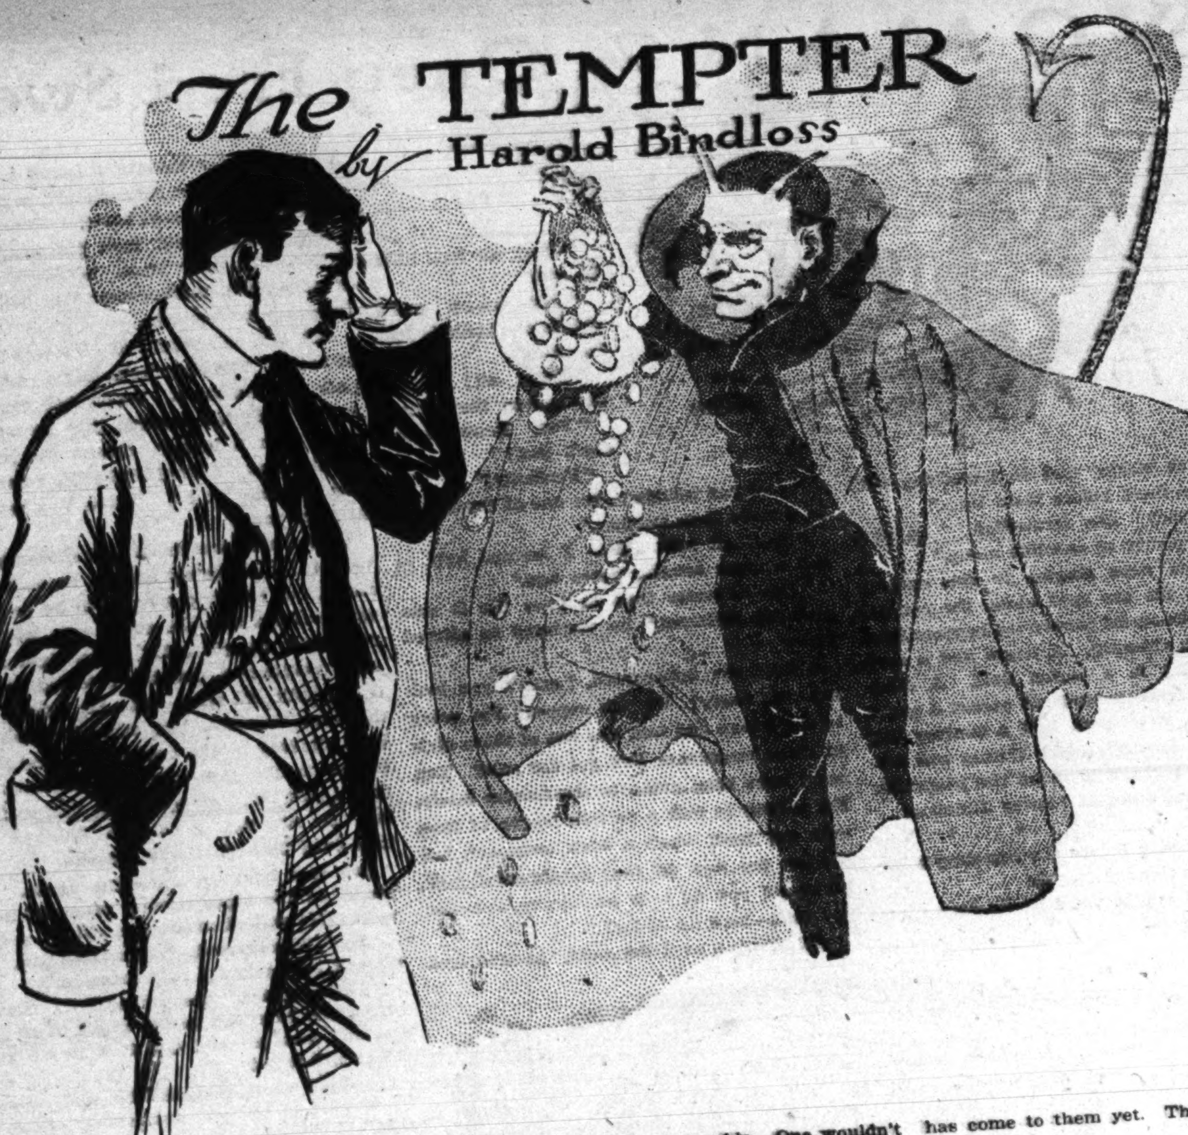
The TEMPTER

by Harold Bindloss



Into a Trap—and Out Again.

IT was market day when Halliday of Marshcote farm sat moodily in a corner of the smoking room at the George. This was the best hotel in the small New Brunswick town, at Canada's most southerly point, near the sea. Across the bay he could glimpse from the window the smoke of the little town of Eastport, on the Maine coast.

Spence, who had just gone to the telephone, had invited Halliday to meet him here. He had bought some oats from the farmer at a good price not long ago, and hinted that they might be able to do some further business, but although they had lunched together he had not come to the point yet.

Halliday was a big, toil-hardened man on whose face the lines of care were getting deep. He had not always been a farmer; it was on his improvident father's death he abandoned another profession and took up the lease of Marshcote for his delicate mother's sake. The land was poor and Halliday embarrassed by lack of capital, but by stern economy and determined effort he paid off the worst of his father's debts and kept his mother in some comfort until she died, though the struggle left its mark on him.

In the meanwhile he fell in love with his neighbor's daughter, Jessy Nichol, and Nichol frowned upon his suit. He said the lass had been well brought up and should not marry a poor man, but if Halliday could get free of debt and stock Marshcote properly he could talk of it again. Not long before this Halliday had borrowed money to improve his land and stock from a family friend, who promised not to press him for repayment so long as he met the interest, but as he was leaving to meet Spence a letter from a lawyer arrived stating that an installment was overdue. This was a fresh embarrassment, because it meant that he must sacrifice some young cattle he had hoped to fatten and make a good profit on.

While Halliday pondered the matter Spence came back. He was a well dressed fellow with genial manners, and, although Halliday did not know much about him, had lately visited the farmer, buying produce and occasionally selling patent fertilizers.

"Now we'll get to business," he said, giving Halliday a cigar.

"I'm willing. You have waited some time."

Spence smiled. "That's so. As the matter's important, it was necessary to find out something about you. Well, I understand you're not particularly prosperous."

"It's true enough, but I don't see——"

"I'm going to show you how to earn some money without much trouble. One wouldn't imagine you to be timid or hesitating."

Halliday looked at him with grim amusement. "I'm not; but if you expect me to buy shares in some chemical fertilizer business or order a job lot of the stuff, you've come to the wrong man."

"I don't expect it. I'm willing to pay you for a service."

"Then, if the money's right, I'm on."

"Fifty dollars a night for three hours' work! But there's some risk."

"That doesn't count," said Halliday, whose heart began to beat with hope.

"Very well. Your farm's at the head of ———, I think. I want two strong horses that can carry a packload across the flats at low water and an outbuilding to store some goods in."

"What is the stuff, and where's it going?"

"On the whole, it might be better if you didn't know," Spence answered meaningly.

"Ah!" said Halliday, "you're afraid that I might talk?"

Spence gave him a keen glance. "No! You'll find it wiser to keep quiet if you take our money, but it would simplify matters if you ask no questions and merely carry out your orders. We'll want the horses for three or four nights at $50 a trip, and for as long again after the tides work round. In fact, the business might go on for some little time."

Halliday frowned as he struggled with a strong temptation. Four hundred dollars would go some way toward clearing off his embarrassments. It would help him to keep the best of the young stock, which he must otherwise sell to pay his debt, and, after all, it was not his business to find out what Spence was doing. Besides, the payments might continue, and if he could save a little money Nichol would relent; but he pulled himself up sharply as he looked out of the window.

A recruiting sergeant stood in the market square talking to a group of farm hands by the potato carts. A squad of young lads in khaki was marching down a street, and a poster on a wall announced that Canada needed men for the army. Halliday could not enlist, because he was lame, but as he glanced at the poster he felt a curious thrill. Men were giving their lives for the mother country in her hour of need, and was he to take money from an agent of her foes? He suspected this was what Spence's offer meant, and his face set hard.

"I think I've said enough," Spence, who was deceived by his look, resumed. "It's uncomfortable to be in debt, but that's a difficulty you can avoid. We might do more than we promise if you serve us well."

"You've said too much," Halliday rejoined, and added sternly: "Hold on! Don't get up!"

Spence sneered. "Have I wounded your patriotic feelings? But don't be a fool! You can't hurt me without getting Miss Nichol and her father into much worse trouble than has come to them yet. This ought to keep you quiet!"

Halliday, who had been puzzled, saw a light. Nichol had a wastrel son, who had vanished from the countryside some months ago, and it was rumored that his father had paid a large sum to save him from arrest. It looked as if the lad had somehow fallen into Spence's hands and told him about Halliday's affairs. The latter hesitated because if he exposed the fellow he might revenge himself by betraying his victim.

"Be off!" he said hoarsely. "I'll risk putting the police on your track if I hear of you again."

Spence left, and Halliday asked for his bill.

"The other gentleman has already paid it," the waiter answered.

Halliday asked how much it was, and then took out some silver. "Here's my share. Put the fellow's dirty money into the soldiers' tobacco box."

A thought struck him when he reached the street, and, going to the postoffice, he telephoned to the lawyer who had written to him.

"About that notice," he said. "Creighton was my father's friend and promised he wouldn't press for his money if I got a bit behind."

"I sent no notice," the lawyer replied. "Mr. Creighton told me I could give you time."

"Ah!" said Halliday without surprise. "Well, there's a mistake somewhere, but I'll come and see you soon."

He left the postoffice with a frown. "Spence's trick; a clever rogue!" he said. "I'd have been his to do what he liked with if I'd taken the first $50."

Well, that was done with, but his obligations must be met, and he went home regretting the money his visit to town had cost. Hard work and stern self-denial must be his lot, but if he did not shirk either he might get straight some day, and Jessy had said that she would not give him up.

Wild fowling was the only amusement he allowed himself, and he made it pay when the geese were about, for his homestead stood near the marsh, which, seamed by miry creeks, projected like a long tongue into a wide stretch of sand covered by the tide at about three hours' flood. Blacksyke, Nichol's farm, occupied rising ground on the edge of the bay, but the rest of the shore was swampy, and the country behind it lonely.

The sands were dangerous, because two streams wound through them in scoured out channels up which the tide runs before it flows across the flats. Near the marsh tongue a shifting gutter generally connected the channels, and at the mouth of the bay a strip of deep water led out to sea past the Scar. Boats drawing six feet could lie there at low ebb, and Halliday understood how well the spot would suit Spence if, as he suspected, the fellow meant to smuggle off supplies and information for enemy submarines.

One night when there was a new moon he left Marshcote with a 10 bore gun on his shoulder and launched a shooting punt in the creek. It had been raining hard lately, and more water than usual was coming down. Thin mist hung about the marsh, but he thought the geese were on the lower flats, and, paddling between the sands, he shot a mallard drake. It fell into the cross gutter, and when picking it up he noted that the hollow had been deeply washed out.

After this he let the punt drift and watched the banks, lost in gloomy thought.

He had heard nothing more of Spence, and, as Marshcote commanded the safest way across the sands, imagined that the fellow had changed his plans. Still, the bay would suit his purpose well, and he might perhaps try to make some use of it with Jack Nichol's help. Halliday had given the coastguards a hint to watch the Scar channel when the tide served at nights.

After a time the harsh cry of bernicle geese came out of the distance, and he ran the punt ashore. The birds were feeding by the other creek, and, since it would be a long way round by water, he decided to cross the flats and try to creep up near enough to use the 10 bore. Leaving the punt, which carried a big, fixed gun, he spent an hour or two crawling around muddy pools and lying on the sand; but feeding geese post sentinels, and he could not elude their watchfulness.

In the meantime the tide turned, and when the water began to flow up the channel he knew he had waited long enough. It was some distance back across the bank, and the sand was soft; besides which, his heavy sea boots hampered him and his weak leg gave trouble when he put much strain on it. In consequence, his progress was slow, and on reaching the creek he frowned as he saw a broad stream of water flowing toward the land. It rippled noisily over the shallows, and the flakes of scum that floated by showed how fast it ran. He must hurry, or he might find his punt out of reach, although the grapnel would prevent it floating away.

After floundering for a time along the oozy bank he stopped in alarmed surprise. The punt was not where he had left it, and the tide seemed to be rising remarkably fast. The hoarse murmur of running water came out of the dark, and he thought it would now be filling the cross gutter between him and the marsh. If so, he would soon be cut off, and he gazed up the channel eagerly until he made out a faint gray patch. It was the punt, floating near the other bank, and he must reach it before the water got too deep. The current boiled about his knees soon after he plunged in; then it swept out the skirts of his oilskin jacket, and his sea boots filled up. The sand slipped away beneath his feet, and he had to brace himself hard against the stream, but he struggled on until he felt the bottom rise, and presently grasped the punt.

Furious anger seized him when he got on board. No marshman would have moved the craft, because one could not reach the shore from the middle sands after the tide had filled the cross gutter. It looked as if Spence and his friends were on the flats, and had taken the punt across and waded back while the water was low, with the object of giving him a stern hint or perhaps of drowning him. He knew too much, and if they were engaged in treasonable work they would not hesitate about taking his life. Well, he had cheated them, and although he was cold and wet he lighted his pipe while he pondered the matter.

Since he did not think they had seen him, Jack Nichol, Jessy's scapegrace brother, must have told them he went shooting at nights, and they would know he was not far away when they found the punt. Moreover, they were, no doubt, now on the flats and might come back. Putting a fresh cap on the big punt gun, he determined to wait.

Shortly afterward a single figure appeared in the mist, coming from the marsh, and he noted with surprise that it was a woman. As she came nearer he recognized her and ran forward with a cry.

"Jessy! What are you doing here?"

"Looking for Jack," she answered breathlessly. "Have you seen him?"

"No. But what——"

She signed him to be silent. "He tapped at the dairy window and asked old Martha for me when I was at St. Andrew's. Perhaps he was afraid of father's seeing him, because he wouldn't wait and stole away down the meadow to the sands. I knew he must want something badly, or he wouldn't have ventured home, and went after him as soon as I got back."

"I expect he wanted money," Halliday remarked. "How did you cross the marsh?"

"The water wasn't up to the plank."

"It will be over it now. But has Jack been about before?"

"No," she said hesitatingly, "not at the house, but Tom, the dairyman, thought he'd seen him once or twice at night. I don't understand it, though I'm afraid he's doing

OVER HERE—The Story of a War Bride

by Ethel M. Kelley

SYNOPSIS.

Elizabeth, on her eighteenth birthday, is a sweet little "bud" who looks on the war abroad as an irritating and necessary evil. She hopes America won't get into it—war would spoil so many things for her. And it certainly would take away Tommy, her oldest suitor, already at Plattsburg. Though she doesn't know it, she is really falling in love with Tommy. Lester, heir to millions, a pacifist, and one of Beth's suitors, proposes and is turned down, though her mother favors the match. In the meantime her interest in the war and Tommy deepens. Beth visits Greenwich village and meets the freaks. Tommy hears and is jealous. They quarrel. "Making up," they are married quietly. Her interest in the war grows deeper.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT.

AUGUST.

WELL, he came home to me with the bells on and spent three seraphic days in our fiendishly hot apartment. I must say that he has the most beautiful nature any human being ever had and the most considerate manners, even to his own wife, in weather that makes a devil almost of every man.

At the end of that time he said to me without any preliminary: "Beth, I want to volunteer for special service and go over with the crowd that's going over now. Shall I?"

"Why do you want to do that?" I said.

"I'm crazy to get there."

"To the front?"

"It would take three months of training at least in France. I want to get it over. You've no idea how tedious the work here gets or how helpless you feel training—training while those devils over there——"

"Well, I have," I temporized, "from your letters. The war comes first to you, doesn't it, Tommy?" I added.

"First, last, and all the time."

"Where do I come in?"

"You don't come in—you're me. See?"

"So we can be separated, you mean, without it making much difference?"

"So we can never be separated?"

"Well, I guess we can't," I said.

"Do I go?"

"Take me with you."

"That might be arranged. It might be fixed up for you to come over later with that Douglas girl. You could take up one of the shorter nursing courses and get ready pretty quick. Of course, nobody has any business over there now unless they can be of use."

"O, do you think I could?" I cried. Then I remembered. "It would probably be better if I stayed at home with my mother," I said. "There are things to do here."

"I only thought you might want to. I'd feel safer if you were with your parents."

"It isn't the safeness," I said.

"I only suggested it. I don't know what I'll strike, of course. God knows I don't want you anywhere that I can't personally look out for you."

"I don't want you anywhere that you can't, Tommy," I said.

"Well," he said, holding me off to look at me somewhat later in the conversation, "do I go?"

"Of course," I said.

We had a week—seven days and three hours—together after it was settled, though we did not know how long it was going to be until the last minute, of course.

Mother and father went off to the seashore—he for a week and she for the rest of August and September, on account of being fortunate enough to be invited to stay that long and being worn to a frazzle, or something as near a frazzle, whatever it is, as mother could ever be. We were housekeeping by ourselves. We decided not to count off hours and minutes but to live out those days as if they had no beginning and no end, and so we did. The weather, fortunately, got quite cool and comfortable. Cook got amiable, and Bessie positively angelic, especially since we used to send her away and wait on ourselves at dinner about all the time. So for the first time we were together and really comfortable, without being rushed to death. Even the honeymoon week Tommy was doing so much business all the time that we had to snatch our time in between it, but now we could loaf and invite our souls, and, as Tommy said, they came.

I felt as if I had never had my husband before. I never knew him before. I never remotely dreamed that any one could be so nice. When you love a person at first you don't care how nice they are or aren't especially, as long as they are yours, and you can be a pig about them; but that feeling changes. You find you have to have faith in what they are outside of what they are to you. If they didn't have a certain amount of nobility you would feel degraded—you couldn't help it.

It was very fortunate for me that I happened to get my eye on Tommy instead of on somebody less worthy. I just don't see how I could have stood loving anybody else or how I could have borne being parted from any one who was less wonderful. When Tommy goes abroad I go—in his veins; and when I stay here quietly waiting for something he doesn't know is going to happen he is beside me every time I draw a breath. I suppose it would be too much to ask of God to feel like that about your husband and have him with you, too.

"Tommy," I said along about the first day—on account of trying not to be a human hourglass I don't know exactly when anything happened, though having the kind of mind that usually knows I can hit it pretty near in looking back—"there is something in my sould that I am not telling you."

"Yes, dear."

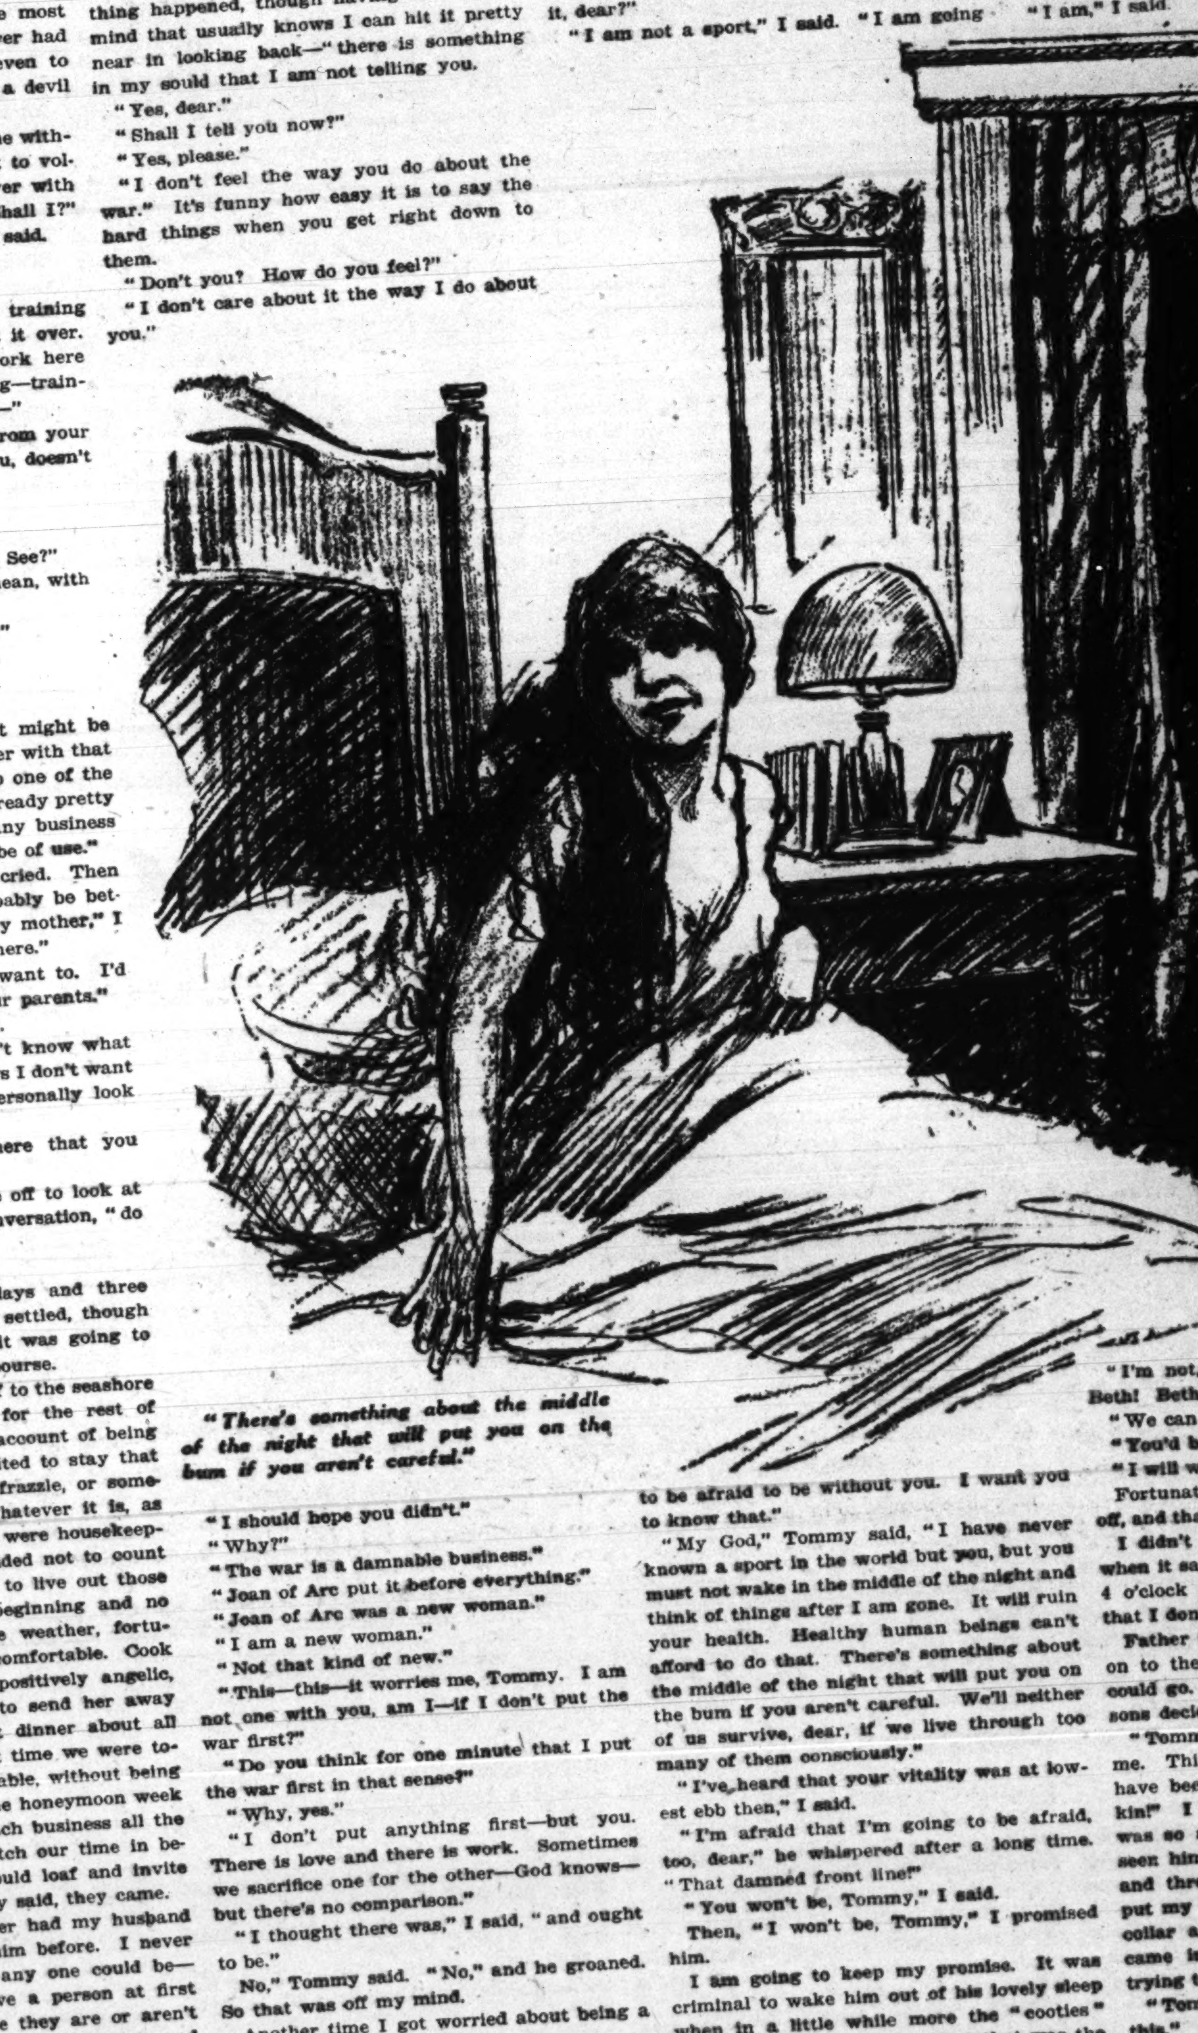
"Shall I tell you now?"

"Yes, please."

"I don't feel the way you do about the war." It's funny how easy it is to say the hard things when you get right down to them.

"Don't you? How do you feel?"

"I don't care about it the way I do about you."



"There's something about the middle of the night that will put you on the bum if you aren't careful."

"I should hope you didn't."

"Why?"

"The war is a damnable business."

"Joan of Arc put it before everything."

"Joan of Arc was a new woman."

"I am a new woman."

"Not that kind of new."

"This—this—it worries me, Tommy. I am not one with you, am I—if I don't put the war first?"

"Do you think for one minute that I put the war first in that sense?"

"Why, yes."

"I don't put anything first—but you. There is love and there is work. Sometimes we sacrifice one for the other—God knows—but there's no comparison."

"I thought there was," I said, "and ought to be."

No," Tommy said. "No," and he groaned. So that was off my mind.

Another time I got worried about being a sport, and told him that.

"I am afraid to be without you," I told him at night, waking him out of a sound sleep, I am ashamed to say, to confide it to him. "When certain things happen to me I am afraid I am going to be too much afraid." If he had been in full possession of his faculties he might have understood this too well, but being still practically in the arms of Morpheus he didn't get the significance of it. I had made up my mind not to tell about Obadiah—I call it Obadiah to myself—because I felt it would make it harder for him to go, and, of course, I didn't want to worry him any further. "I am not a sport, dear," I said. "And I am afraid I get a great deal of credit for it under false pretenses."

"You are a sport," he said drowsily and quarrelsomely.

"Tommy," I said, "would you mind waking up—awfully?"

"I should," he said, "but I will. What is it, dear?"

"I am not a sport," I said. "I am going to be afraid to be without you. I want you to know that."

"My God," Tommy said, "I have never known a sport in the world but you, but you must not wake in the middle of the night and think of things after I am gone. It will ruin your health. Healthy human beings can't afford to do that. There's something about the middle of the night that will put you on the bum if you aren't careful. We'll neither of us survive, dear, if we live through too many of them consciously."

"I've heard that your vitality was at lowest ebb then," I said.

"I'm afraid that I'm going to be afraid, too, dear," he whispered after a long time. "That damned front line!"

"You won't be, Tommy," I said.

Then, "I won't be, Tommy," I promised him.

I am going to keep my promise. It was criminal to wake him out of his lovely sleep when in a little while more the "cooties" will be doing it, I suppose; but that was the most comforting conversation we had, I think. I can live by it as if it was a little light we had set going. Two people couldn't be closer than we were after we had said those things to each other, and the funny thing was that we both went right to sleep in the middle of knowing it.

I thought we might be going to have the eighth day together after all. All day on the seventh we sat gaspingly waiting for the notification that Tommy's boat was to sail, but it didn't come. Father was in town at his club at the end of the telephone when he wasn't in his office, ready to do anything that was required of him, but by that time I had decided in my own mind that Tommy wouldn't be called to go for another ten days or so. I don't know why I had, but I had.

Tommy took me in his arms before he told me, but of course he had told me by merely doing so.

"It's tonight," he said. "We go on board tonight."

"Well," I said.

"Be brave, dear."

"I am," I said.

"I'm not," he said miserably. "O, Beth! Beth! Beth!"

"We can do it," I said.

"You'd better come over."

"I will when I can," I said.

Fortunately we had to hustle to get him off, and that took up our minds.

I didn't see the boat sail. Nobody knew when it sailed. I think I felt it sail at about 4 o'clock the next morning. If it wasn't that I don't know what it could have been.

Father took me down to the dock and on to the boat. We were next of kin and could go. At the last moment the Richardsons decided they couldn't stand it.

"Tommy," I said, "I am glad you married me. Think how perfectly terrible it would have been if I wasn't legally your next of kin!" I had to joke with him because he was so all in, poor Tommy. I have never seen him so cold—hands and face and neck and throat—and so miserably shivering. I put my veil around his neck over his khaki collar and he let it be there. His breath came in long painful gasps, and he kept trying to control it.

"Tommy," I said, "you mustn't feel like this."

"I'm so cold," he said.

The boat was a rather smelly one, but it looked all right. Tommy's room was forward and comfortable.

"I wonder what kind of roommates I draw," he said, pointing to the different kit bags that were crammed in beside his. I never knew, of course.

It seems strange that he should have cried and I shouldn't when we kissed each other good-by.

"Dear, it's only for a little while, and we can bear it," I said.

"Beth," he said. Beth! Beth! Beth! I never loved you till this minute. You're such a sport; you—you take it out of me."

"That will be all right," I said, still trying to cheer him up.

I don't know what our last words were. I guess they weren't anything. I gave poor father a dreadful time, though, by going out of business in the taxicab.

. . . .

Father came in unexpectedly one day and found me knitting with pink and white wool instead of the universal gray or brown. I had found the directions in a book and was sailing along quite unconcernedly with the garment it portrayed when I was caught at it.

"What are you knitting, Piggie?" he inquired carelessly.

"A—a soldier sweater," I said, and I held it up. Then I bent my head again quickly and went on working.

Father came over and stood beside me, looking down at me. He was very much affected.

"It's all right, daddy," I said, "don't worry."

"Have you told your mother?"

"I haven't told anybody. Dr. Fitch told me." I didn't think Roland counted—since he only guessed.

"Didn't Tommy know?"

"I thought it would give him too much to be anxious about."

"So you let him go without telling him."

"Do you think that was very wicked?" I said.

"He might not have gone if he had known."

"Yes, that was what I was afraid of."

Father held out his arms to me. I tried to go into them on account of not hurting his feelings, but I didn't get it accomplished.

"I can't about that," I said, "not yet." Father's eyes filled.

"My funny, brave, wise, little daughter," he said.

"O! I can about that," I said, and we hugged each other vociferously.

He wanted to send for mother in the country and have her come home at once and be told. He wanted to send me to the country, etc., but I said:

"Father, I want to stay right on this one spot, where letters and cables will reach me quickest, and not be bothered."

And he saw my point.

I was perfectly calm about Tommy's being on the water. I used to imagine circumstantially how it would be if a submarine periscope poked its nose above water and the passengers heard a dull report and saw a thick cloud of smoke, and then all was confusion and panic and darkness, but the picture didn't get me at all. I knew it wasn't going to happen. I was sure beyond all reason that such a danger could not be. I read all the submarine reports, too, and it wasn't because so many of the transports had reached the other side safely. It was just my feeling, and it was the right one, too.

In due time we got a cable merely dated Sans Origine, which I thought at first must be a desert island or something, that said, "Arrived safely." Imagine a cable from my Tommy marked Sans Origine. If that was without origin then nothing in this world has any.

I shall have letters soon, and letters from Tommy are beautiful and living things. Any one who has not had letters from Tommy can not know how warming and strengthening they are. The unworthy idea is with me that I shall have to let Mrs. Richardson read them, and that she will show them to Mrs. Godfrey. "Does it matter?" I say to myself again and again, and the answer is always, "Yes, it does matter. It matters awfully." I have not been to see Mrs. Richardson for a while now. I am afraid she will make a fuss over me, and I don't want her to.

Going to France—father says Tommy probably landed at Boulogne—seems a terrible thing in prospect, but when you have actually done it by proxy it doesn't seem so bad. There we are, Tommy in the flesh and me in the spirit, with our composite feet on the soil of France. It's a queer thing that France doesn't choke you up now so much as it used to before we got in. It's our happy hunting ground now, and we're going over there to hunt the Hun.

"Over there—over there—
And we won't come back till it's over—over there."

I don't want Tommy to be too bitterly disappointed, but I rather agree with Lester that the war is practically finished now. The press is full of peace feelers. The German reply to the pope had a very specious and fishy sound, but still the argument goes on, and still the Germans want to talk about it, and this talking about it, seems to me, shows which way the wind blows. Tommy won't think it is right, I know, but still if it comes he will come back to me, and we can talk it over together.

Father says that if the war ends now, America will be spoiled for life; that if we once get the idea that our just holding up our hand is enough to stop a war, we will never be any good again in any way. He says that we are cock-sure and unthorough and otherwise objectionable enough now, nationally speaking, but that if the war is disposed of by our intervention before we've had any real chance to fight, why, we might just as well adopt "something for nothing" as our slogan and give up trying to pretend we're any good at all. He raves and raves over our national streak of yellow and the way we are now showing it in various ways.

I know Tommy wouldn't think so, but then he wouldn't think the war was going to stop either. He won't believe it when it does unless Germany just announces that she's beaten, herself, and willing to deliquesce from the map. (Deliquesce—evaporate à la the homely snail when you put salt on him.)

I suppose I rather slump in my highest feelings when Tommy isn't with me. I am going to try to be all that he expects of me, and just as brave as he is, but I am not going to begin right away. I am going to indulge my lower feelings just long enough to get somewhat rested in my highest ones. I am doing practical things like getting up money for the library drive. I think it is fine to buy the soldiers books, because they can be used in civil life afterward.

Dr. Fitch and I have nice little conversations together. He says I am healthy, and I think I am now. He says that he thinks I will find that I will grow very fond of Obadiah. I suppose I shall be, but gracious, there's a whole lot to be considered about him. I guess he can have a local habitation with my family, and a name—pro tem and sur—has been already provided for him, but after all—who is he going to be anyway? A baby at first, I suppose, and then a person—like other persons. The whole business is very queer and a trifle alarming. I don't think about it very much—especially not in the middle of the night. Obeying Tommy's orders about midnight machinations of the brain.

I wonder what good there is in this going to hear music, and strengthening your mentality and doing things like that? I've given up coffee and tea and setting-up exercises, though I do take a few of the milder ones. Also I've stopped fooling with guns in any way. I think that I will take a chance on strengthening my mentality and not try to improve myself artistically and musically. You would feel so foolish going to a concert or an art exhibition with a direct end of that kind in view. I don't see why it isn't a good idea to behave just as naturally as you possibly can and leave the rest to Fate. Everybody always says, "My parents never consulted me about coming into the world"—but—how could they? There are lots of things that I would like to get Obadiah's views on with relation to our mutual future together, but it can't be done. So as George says, "Why worry?"

Eileen is trying her best to get me to go over with her, and thinks I'm a weak sort of piker not to be willing to. She knows I could work it if I wanted to. "Man proposes and God disposes," but it doesn't do her any good to tell her that, unless I tell her what God disposes, and if I did that—she'd know.

"How could you let Tommy go to the front?" Dolly Grainger keeps asking me. "Why didn't you use your influence with the men of your family to keep them out of this horrid war? It's all right now that they can parade around and wear a uniform, but when we are at peace again—what then? They will have lost so many years of their lives with nothing to show for it."

GUINEA GOLD

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

CONCLUSION.

AT last, one day, when Rupert called at the store, he saw the capable mistress of the place making preparations for departure.

"Off to port?" asked Dence carelessly, leaning an arm on the rail.

"Bless you, no," said Mrs. Carter. "I'm off to Cripps' reef tomorrow at daylight. It's full time I was there now."

"Who's taking you up?" asked Dence.

"Well, that's the question just now," replied Mrs. Carter. "German Harry's got fever—he was going—and I can't leave the store without any one, so Tim's got to stay. I think I'll ask Mike. He's not doing much on his claim."

"What about me?" demanded Dence, looking at her with a face devoid of all expression.

"You?" Mrs. Carter turned, her hands on her hips, her Elizabethan eye fixed hard and keen. "I thought you wasn't set on going up to the Iri, anyhow."

"Don't know that it matters what you've been thinkin'. I'll go. I know every inch of the way. I'd—rather."

"Very well." Mrs. Carter turned back to her pile of goods. "You be here at half past 5 tomorrow sharp. Don't fool. And—I'm obliged to you, Mr. Dence."

Much had been done to improve the way to the Iri field since first the discoverers tracked it out. Rivers had been spanned by logs or by liana suspension bridges. Swamps had been "corduroyed" in the worst places. Bush huts had been put up at the usual camping grounds. Nevertheless, it was a terrible road, and Mrs. Carter, not so young as she had been, was fain to cut some of the longer marches in two. It happened that she did this just before reaching the alligator swamp; and, the latter part of the way proving easy, they found themselves arrived at the height above the swamp as early as 4 in the afternoon.

Dence opined that it was too late to begin the crossing now; they might be caught by the dusk. In daylight, experience had proved that there was little or no danger in crossing the swamp. True, a carrier or so had been taken by the alligators during the time of the rush, but these had simply courted disaster by leaving the corduroy path and going off into the swamps after crabs. Since the frequent coming and going across had ceased, these last few months, the alligators had evidently increased in numbers; men camping on either side at night had been kept awake by the bellowing of the brutes down in the mud and slime below. Still, in daylight, and with common care, there was no risk to speak of.

So Dence explained to Mrs. Carter as that determined lady was stirring up the carriers to unpack the swags needed for the night. Mrs. Carter did not pay much attention to him. She seemed to have something on her mind.

"I wish," she said, when the dusk had come and the fire was lit and they were sitting on a log to sup, with the warm, wet scented forest close about them, and the bell-birds tank-tanking under the stars—"I wish I could have made better time of it. I reckoned on being there before now."

She tilted her tin panikin of tea and drained it; she was not tired, after the short day's walk, but she was thirsty, for the night promised to be sultry and still.

Dence made no reply; he was sitting huddled up on the log, chewing his mustache. He had been very silent all day.

The boys took the plates away, unfastened the sacks of bedding, and slung the mosquito nets under the roof of the open bush-house. It grew darker; the stars were hidden behind purple clouds.

"Where 'nother lantern stop?" called Mrs. Carter impatiently. It seemed as though "bush nerves" were abroad that night.

"Sinuabada (lady), altogether he pinish," quavered the boy she addressed.

"Finished? What d'ye mean?"

"He pall down along big river."

"Fell in the river? Fell in the river? You wait till we get in tomorrow, and I'll talk to you, you black bushman! Fell in the river?"

The native fled, trembling lest the promised "talk" should take place there and then. Mrs. Carter, slapping at the mosquitoes, remarked, in an aggravated voice, that it seemed likely to rain. Dence said nothing. He sat looking out into the illimitable bush, silent, chewing his mustache. His face seemed white in the dim light of the single hurricane lantern.

"There!" said Mrs. Carter at last, killing a mosquito with a smack that almost overbalanced her. "I'm full up with this. Dence, you may think to hide your head under a bushel" (Mrs. Carter's Biblical knowledge was growing rusty), "but you don't take me in. Good God, man, why are you spoiling your life over another man's wife like this? How many lives do you reckon you've got to throw away?"

"She's not spoilin' it," answered Dence, in a monotonous tone. "That's a job I did myself, and did thoroughly, fifteen years ago."

"You can keep your own secrets, I reckon," said Mrs. Carter keenly. "There's not a man in the territory knows anything about you, except what they've seen."

"And not a man will," came the answer. Rough, degraded, broken as he was, there seemed a certain dignity about Dence tonight.

"Well, however that may be, I say you're a fool to go on caring for Charmian Scott. Forget her, man! The world's full of women; and if you only knew it, one of us is pretty much as good as another."

Rupert Dence made no reply; he was saying something to himself that sounded like poetry.

"Mrs. Scott never cared a brass pin about you. She'll care less when she's got her baby."

Rupert was not listening to her. He was sitting with his elbows on his knees, and his chin in his hands, looking into the black-blue gloom beyond the circle of the lamp. A night-moth, big as a bird, swept into the light and out again, like a human soul flitting from dark to dark.

"Buck up, and look cheerful, if you can," commanded Mrs. Carter irritably. "You're not much of a mate to go through the bush with, I don't think."

She fanned herself jerkily with her handkerchief; the night was breathlessly warm. Rain could not be far away; the stars were surely fainter. Why could she not walk as she had walked ten years ago? She could have kept pace with almost any man in Papua—then. Why could she not have got farther on her way? There was no knowing whether . . .

"O, talk, can't you!" she snapped.

"I don't feel like talking," answered Rupert, without taking his head out of his hands. "I'll recite to keep the blue devils off, for both of us."

"Recite away," agreed Mrs. Carter. Rupert's recitations were famous all over the territory, but it was seldom indeed that any one could prevail on him to give one, unless he happened to be in the mood. The queen, in her heart, hated poetry, but she hoped his choice might be prose.

It was not. It was Lindsay Gordon's "Sick Stockrider." He began sitting, his head half bent down, but before long the poem gripped him, and he rose to his feet, and recited as he had never in his life recited before. The boys, frightened at first, became fascinated, and crowded round him, leaving the remains of their supper to the ants and iguanas. Mrs. Carter sat breathless, looking at his lit-up face, and feeling, without quite understanding, the swing of the lines. Rupert had a wonderful singing voice and he used it almost to equal effect in speaking when he chose. The queen was wiping her eyes and catching her breath before long; poetry was rubbish, but it did sound heartbreaking!

Rupert was nearing the end; his voice, clear as silver, sank like a fountain falling slowly back to its source. The lean, shabby figure in the worn khaki clothes, the hawk-

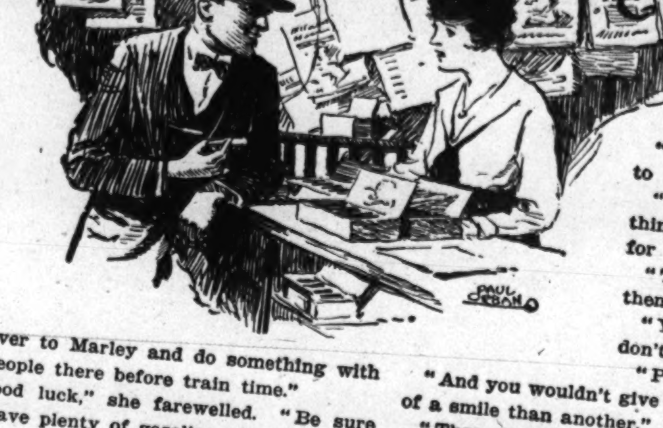
JUST A WOMAN

by Oney Fred Sweet

They Were Both Modern, Up to the Minute Folks, But Their Hearts Beat in the Same Old Way.



BOB WILSON had been on the road long enough to be thoroughly familiar with haughty hotel clerks, dreamy elevator youths, key rattling housekeepers, Gideon Bibles, American and European plans, and train schedules.

Also, after a fashion, he knew the girl at the cigar counter at the Magnolia inn. Deep down in his heart Bob knew that there was a better hotel at Carlsville than the Magnolia inn. The inn, in spite of its high sounding name, had threadbare carpets on the floors, the soap that reposed at the side of its wash bowls was of a villainous yellow hue, and the place was altogether too near the depot and the switch engine that never slept. Yet, whenever he made Carlsville, Bob stopped at the Magnolia inn, and his second act after registering was to cross over to the cigar counter and exchange a few trite remarks with the girl emerging there from behind the tobaccos and the chocolate bars and the magazines.

Miss Lela always gave him a smile. Deep down in his heart Bob knew well enough that she gave that same smile to all her customers, but somehow knowledge of the fact did not rob the smile of its charm.

Miss Lela had black eyes that flashed interest. Years back, she had lost all shyness. She wore waists that were filmy and feminine. She was a top notcher in the art of light banter—of saying much and yet nothing at all, of being familiar and yet reserved. It was her own cigar counter. She was making two sales result where there was a field for perhaps one or no sale at all.

"I can see, Miss Lela, that you're like myself—strictly business," remarked Bob, twisting the gas lighter toward the tip of his cigar.

"All the time," assured Miss Lela. "Everything's business nowadays. I'm going to have enough to take care of myself with when the silver threads start to creep among the gold."

"It'll be a long time before that sort of thing happens," smiled Bob.

"How's business with you?" the girl interrupted.

"Got a big order yesterday. With the line I've got now they've got to listen to me."

The switch engine clanged out in the yards. A cloud of black, smelly smoke filled the hotel lobby.

"Call for Mistah Wilson!" droned a chocolate colored bell boy.

"I'll have to leave you," finished Bob.

"So long, don't take any bad money," smiled Miss Lela.

For two weeks Bob Wilson hoteled and made train connections through the old south. The section was doing well. Crops were being diversified, towns that had laid dormant for years were being paved, Negroes were marketing their cotton and buying automobiles and getting gold put on their front teeth whether they needed it or not. Dixie was not only fragrant with the scent of magnolia blossoms and roses, but it was tasting the sweets of a new prosperity as well.

In the quaint old towns where George Washington had spent the night, where Lord Cornwallis had camped with his troops, where Lee had ridden at the head of his men, where Sherman had maneuvered, Bob Wilson spread out his wares in the hotel sample room. Straw hatted, tight trousered, alert, all business, he wired in orders to the house and figured up expense accounts. And eventually he stopped again at the Magnolia inn.

"I want you to try one of my new brand of cigars," suggested Miss Lela. "It's going to be a big seller. The boys all seem to like its flavor."

"I've got a new line, too, since I saw you last," mentioned Bob, drawing his hand over his chin. "I sold Mason & Mills a shipment here and I think by using a machine I can get over to Marley and do something with the people there before train time."

"Good luck," she farewelled. "Be sure you have plenty of gasoline along."

The birds were singing in the weeping willows as the car sped along the country road. Smoke curled toward the heavens from a log cabin chimney. A negro and a mule were plowing in a cotton field. A dilapidated rail fence meandered across a green pasture. A stone-wall, half a century old, followed the roadside. Bob Wilson was doping out a quotation to make the proprietor of the general store at Marley Junction.

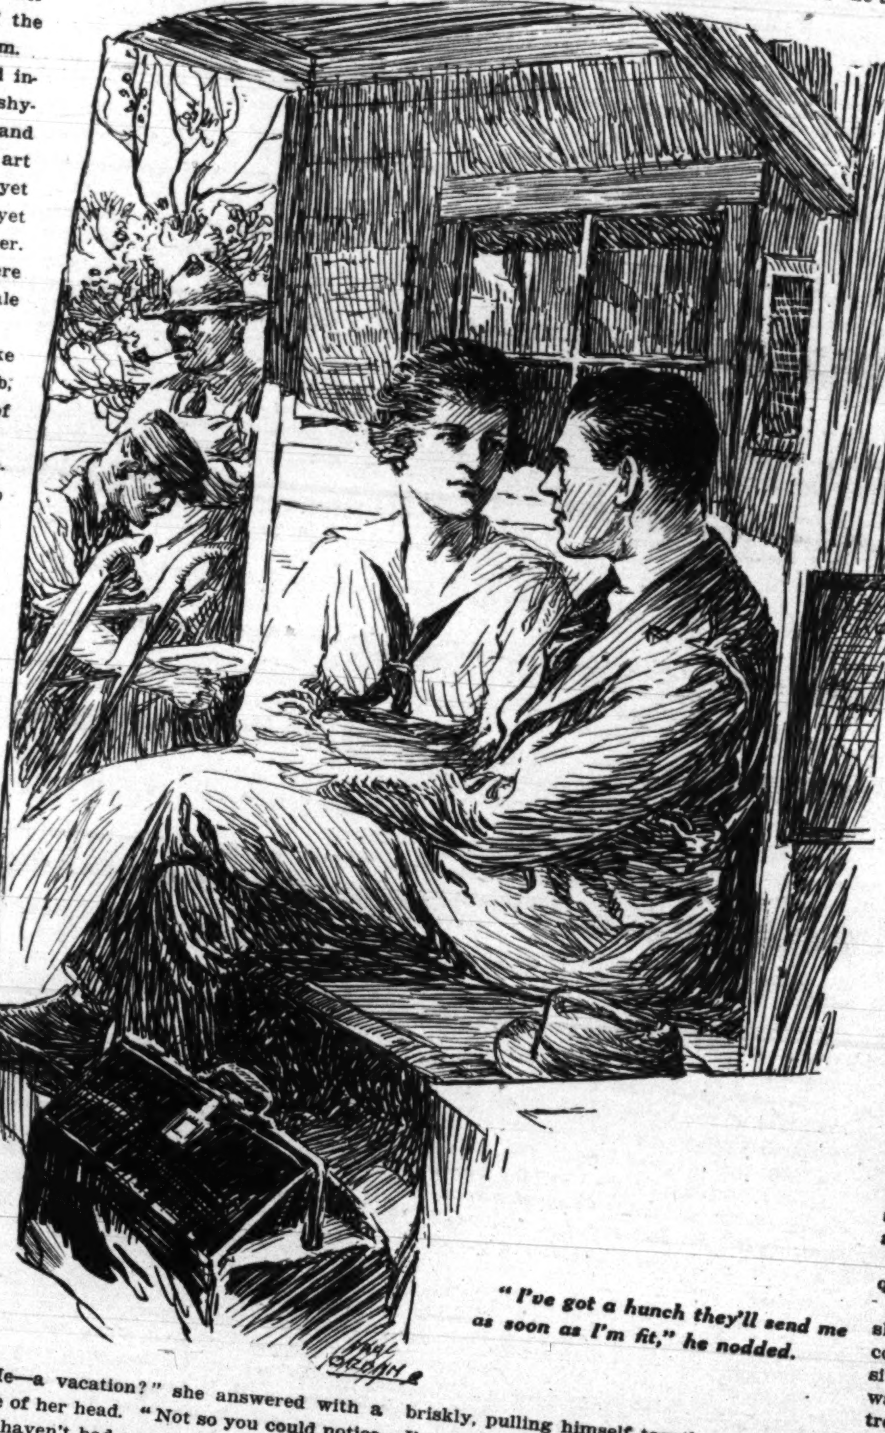
It was a month before the traveling salesman saw the cigar girl again.

"I thought maybe you'd be on your vacation," he greeted.



"I've got a hunch they'll send me as soon as I'm fit," he nodded.

"Me—a vacation?" she answered with a shake of her head. "Not so you could notice it. I haven't had a vacation for three years. I'm a business woman, not a society doll. What'll you have this morning?"

"What you going to do—be another Hetty Green?"

"I guess I'm stung on those La Pelna cigars," she went on. "I thought they must be good because they had such an unattractive label, but they've proved a lemon."

"So the only reason you're ever glad to see me is because I'm a customer," he sighed. "You smile simply to get a nickel out of me."

"Of course. I thought you knew that."

"And every man that comes in here gets just the same smile?"

"They all look alike to me."

"But each man thinks the smile is just for him."

"They all flatter themselves that way."

"You know men, don't you?"

"Perfectly."

"And you wouldn't give one of them more of a smile than another."

"They all look alike. I learned how to run a cigar counter years ago."

"But at some time in your life it was probably different," he ventured in altered voice.

"Say," she interrupted, "aren't you feeling well today? Do you suppose I'm going to stand here and talk like one of those girls in these magazines I've got for sale? You must have been going to the movies lately. I'm willing to talk a certain length of time with any man who's a cash customer, but I draw the line on that sentimental guff. What did you do over at Marley Junction last time—land an order?"

"Sold them a good shipment," he answered briskly, pulling himself together. "Good-by, I'm catching the 10:05."

"Good-by, Mr. Wilson, take care of yourself. Don't forget to come to see me when you come back this way."

* * * * *

He was gone. And late that evening as the train climbed through the dusk touched hills he noticed a house at the end of a tree lined path. The light of a lamp beamed from the kitchen of the house. It was a house far out of the way of the world, but it was somebody's home. Some man and some woman lived in that house out there by itself and there were kiddies there, too, without a doubt. And the path with the trees beside it—what a walk it would make at that time of the evening for a man and a woman who thought a lot of each other!

A cinder blew through the window and struck Bob Wilson in the eye. The conductor came through and took his ticket. In a little while now there would be another strange town, another one of the hotels, more haggling for business.

Bob Wilson thought of all towns in terms of hotels. The next town had a particularly poor one, he knew. When Bob came back to the desk to complain that he wanted a room with a bigger window the manager allowed that he would take the room given him or none at all. There was only one hotel in town.

On the breakfast table next morning there were a lot of dishes and an assortment of silver, but the food seemed to be served in sample form and the coffee was weak and cold. Bob bought a La Pelna cigar at the cigar counter—a counter presided over by a dyspeptic old man. The La Pelnas were dry and tasteless, but somehow Bob had been sticking to the brand. He saw things in the smoke that came from them. He saw a pair of black eyes that flashed interest. He saw now a house at the end of a tree lined path that was a home.

Bob was back in Carlsville again. She wasn't at the cigar counter when he registered. He waited about the lobby.

"Hello," he greeted. "I'd missed you. You weren't here when I first came in."

"That's queer," she smiled. "I haven't been away from the case to speak of all day. Couldn't you get any one to wait on you? What will it be?"

"I don't want a cigar," he said soberly. "I wanted to tell you something. Look at this."

He drew a card from his pocket.

"Uh huh," she observed, "drafted. I figured you was about past the age. When you going?"

"I'm leaving tonight. I sold my last bill of goods today."

"Well, in that case," she commented, "you'll want to lay in a supply of cigarets, sure. From what I've heard they're quite a comfort over there in the trenches."

"You're not interested at all about my having to go?"

"I always hate to lose a good customer."

"From the looks of things I think I'll be gone for a long, long time. I'd registered and all that, but I didn't expect to be called quite yet."

"I wish the war was over."

"Yes?"

"Yes. I'm losing customers every day."

"I really ought to have gone yesterday," he explained. "You know the government's mighty strict, but I made up my mind I'd make this town first."

"This town's getting to be a good town for business."

"I'm going to say good-by, Miss Lela."

"Good-by, Mr. Wilson, take care of yourself."

* * * * *

She had turned to wait on another customer. He picked up his bag and left the lobby.

He sat hunched over on one of the benches on the depot platform. Trucks were rattling about with baggage. An engine clanged. A baby cried. A group of Negroes lazed against a pile of trunks.

He looked up. She was sitting there beside him!

"Why, Miss Lela!" he gasped. "Aren't you afraid some one will run away with that cigar counter while you're gone?"

"I don't care," she answered. "I'm not a business woman just now. I'm—I'm just a woman."

He saw the glisten in her black eyes, the quaver to her lips.

"I thought I was all business woman," she went on. "I thought I had nothing in common with all those women who used to sit on balconies and breathe of roses and walk in gardens and wait by the old oak trees and all that stuff. I thought I was a new type, but I guess, after all, women won't ever change. And, Bob, you won't be any more like a traveling salesman in another week than nothing. Do you suppose they'll send you right 'over there'?"

"I've got a hunch they'll send me as soon as I'm fit," he nodded.

Her head lowered toward his shoulder. They were on a noisy depot platform, but what mattered the setting? His hand patted her black hair in a manner that had been in fashion before there had been such things as trains and traveling men and cigar counter girls.

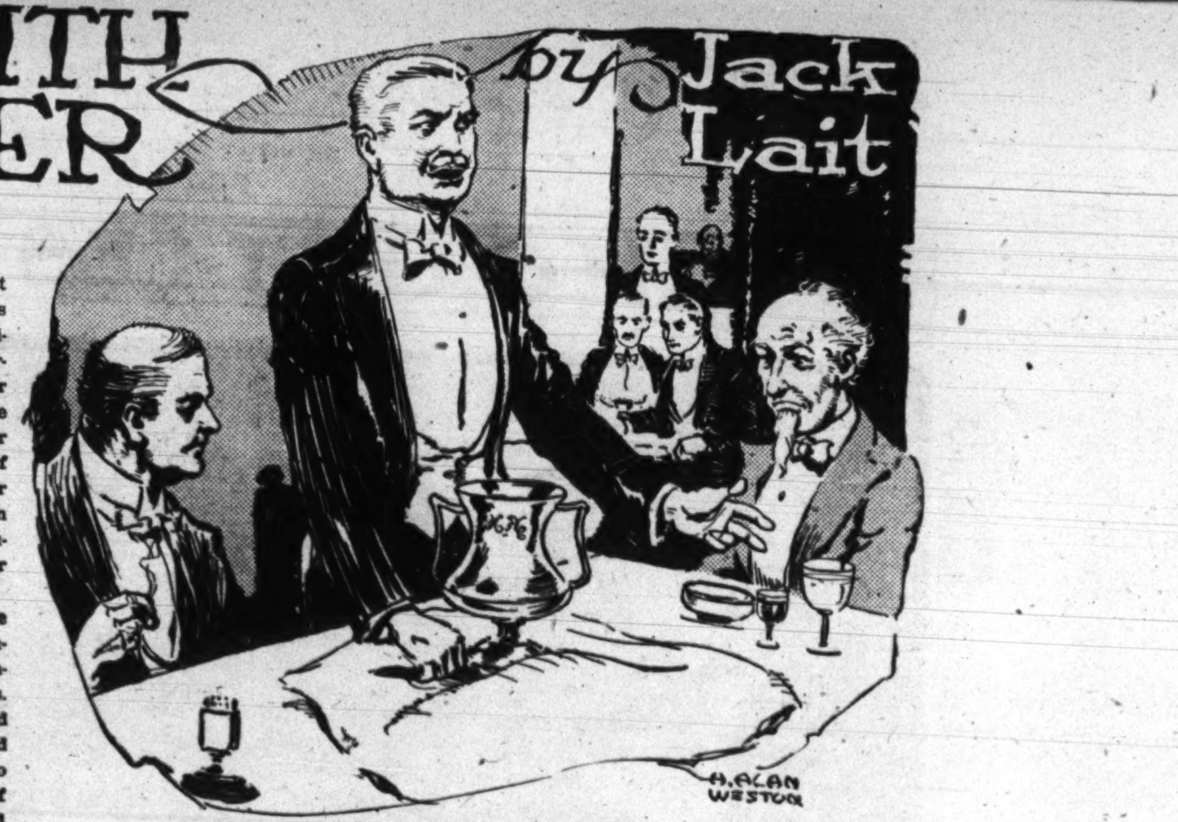
"Good-by, Bob," she whispered; "take care of yourself, and when you come back this way——"

He didn't mind the sudden crashing in of the train cutting off her words. He knew what she meant.

The MAN WITH THE HAMMER

by Jack Lait

WHERE IGNORANCE WAS BLISS—



"Here, gentlemen, is a man."

A GREAT railroad was giving a great banquet. In the great hall a great assemblage of railroad men, great and small, had gathered at the call of the president of the system, to do honor to one of its men.

And was it the traffic manager, who had outwitted rivals on other lines, who had caused the annual high peaks of freight and passenger carrying to grow higher, who was thus to be recognized and fêted? It was not. Nor was it the advertising director, who had caused the road to become known everywhere, whose clever compositions had standardized its slogan, whose total bill for space bought had grown each year less while the income owing to his tall assertions had grown greater. Nor yet was it the chairman of the board, nor the general passenger agent, nor the purchasing agent, nor the dining car superintendent, nor the master mechanic, nor the traveling vice president. It was none of these. It was no one with a mighty title or an imposing position.

The hero of this unique foregathering was a little man of inconsequential stature and negligible standing.

As the banqueters drew up to their carded places the guest of them all walked with ostentatious unostentation to his place at the long board where sat the high officials of the road, invited high officials of other roads, and specially selected notables from the worlds of finance, finesse, literature, legislation, agriculture, commerce, jurisprudence, and other branches associated with the innermost and primary needs of successful railroads.

All this was before the nation had assumed chaperonage over the arteries of travel and transportation, when a railroad could yet banquet one whom it held worthy, and charge the expense to profit and loss or maintenance of right of way. So the spread was magnificent, the wine was old, the flowers were profuse, and the cigars were long and heavy, as were the speeches.

It was none beneath the president himself who first arose to set forth in an address the identity of the honored banqueteo, the unassuming little party who sat well down in his chair, between the general attorney of the road and the attorney general of the state, hard by.

"My friends, fellow workers in the service of stockholders, press and public, guests, and you, my good man, whom we have collected here to signalize and to apostrophise:

"The rich and renowned, the proud and powerful, the famous and farflung G., V. & B., which I have the honor to conduct and to here represent, tonight pays tribute to its humblest yet noblest son.

"No possessor of a high sounding sinecure is he. Though almost every man in this room is an important factor in the operation of the line, probably not half a dozen of us here had ever seen his face or heard his name before tonight. I, myself, knew nothing of his existence, not to say his extraordinary worth and record, until I chanced to glance down a list of statistics regarding the length of service of employés and their percentages for efficiency as based on relative days given the road. To my amazement I found that this man, Henry High, had worked for the G., V. & B. for forty-two years, consecutively, on a seven day per week job, and had in all that time never missed a day. More, his work demands that he meet every train passing Miller Junction, a waylaid point in a far-off state, and in the forty-two years he has never missed one train.

"His task is to inspect the car wheels under the cars of the trains that stop at Miller Junction. In the forty-two years there have been forty-two times three hundred and sixty-five days, or fifteen thousand, three hundred and thirty-three days; adding nine leap years, the total runs to fifteen thousand, three hundred and forty-two days. Ten trains a day pull up there, making one hundred and fifty-three thousand, four hundred and twenty trains that he has met—met with loyalty and unflagging devotion—in his unparalleled career of service, fidelity, steadfast dependability. Each of those trains carried an average of six cars, and on each car were eight wheels; thus, multiplying the number of trains by six, the average number of cars, and again by eight, the number of wheels, we find that Henry High's hammer tap-tapped without once faltering upon seven million, three hundred and sixty-four thousand, one hundred and sixty wheels under trains of cars of the G., V. & B.

"During those two and forty years the world has run along, each man of the hundreds of millions of men chasing his phantom, following his ambitious or indolent aims. Kings have been born and dethroned and have died; children have come to earth and their children have borne children; two oceans have been married, the geography of the globe has been altered, the laws and customs of mankind have undergone marked changes, the progress of science has caused many revolutionary innovations, the seasons have swung from hot to cold and from dry to torrential—an age has been lived.

"Yet, through it all, this man has walked his one well worn path of endeavor, mindless of how swiftly the world whirled, looking neither to right nor to left, following only that one set light, that one white beacon, his lone beckoning star—duty!

"In those same forty-two years there were trains that washed away the road from his simple cottage to the junction station; there were drifts of snow that would be impenetrable obstacles to a man of weaker resolution; there were days of merciless heat out on that western prairie, there were days of pitiless cold there, too. Yet never once did he let any impediment, any circumstance, any condition, any situation, stand between him and his trust. Here, gentlemen, IS a man!

"Through all those years perhaps millions of passengers who had trusted themselves to the keeping of the G., V. & B. heard the sound of his trusty hammer, and it rang and echoed to them this great system's pledge, this great system's obligation to look after their safety, being met, being carried out.

"Whether he went on and on in his work with the high resolve of a hero pounding within him, or whether he went along in the simple routine of the modest man who merely does what is given him to do and never thinks to appreciate himself for the qualities and deeds that might serve to rank him with the immortals, I do not know; I have scarcely exchanged a dozen words with him beyond notifying him, after I had summoned him here, why I had summoned him—to make him the guest of honor at this imposing feast, to bring him before the other and more favored factors in the operation of our road, so that they might look upon this shrinking little individual and draw from him an inspirational lesson in super-devotion.

"Henry High, stand up."

The little man, blushing, rose to his feet. His hands, knotted and horny and still a bit grimy, for workingmen cannot whiten their hands in a day after years of soiling toil, projected from the cuffless ends of a rented dinner coat that fit him more than enough. The hands picked at the table cloth, the collar, low as it was, seemed to be choking him. He stood, wide eyed and fearful.

"Here," said the president, unveiling a tall package which had been brought to his side and set upon the speakers' table. "Take this loving cup as a lasting token of the acknowledgment from an unfeeling corporation of its gratitude, its appreciation, its understanding—its proclamation of your unwavering, undeviating, unbroken service to your duty and to its cause. With none to spy on you or urge you on, you have done your plain work with soldierly regularity and with a man's consistency. Upon this cup is inscribed 'Semper Fidelis,' which means 'Always Faithful.' The words are true. You have earned them for your crest, for your epitaph, just as you made them the guiding motto of your daily duty during the years.

"It is my further pleasure to announce that the G., V. & B., though a company often accused, as are all large enterprises, with being penurious and unemotional, has pensioned you for the remainder of your life at your full pay, and here relieves you of further work; you have done enough; you have come up at your post millions of times; you have, moreover, laid down a precedent and pointed an example which this road will hold before its thousands of employés for decades yet to come. You have earned your rest, thou good and faithful servant—may you revel in it and may it make the waning twilight of your life serene and comfortable, which is the just spoils of every man after he has fought the good fight, given a good account of his most useful years, reported and saluted for the last time in his place in the line before honorable discharge.

"We thank you, we who are indebted to you."

To the clatter of loud and prolonged applause the president sat down. The railroad men and visitors turned to one another and observed it had been a corking speech.

"He was deeply moved—truly sincere," whispered the chief engineer to the purchasing agent.

"I'll say so," granted the purchasing agent, "or he could never have made such a tip-top talk, especially on the occasion of giving away something. I've heard the old man wax eloquent on the topic of cutting down expenses, likewise on the subjects of increasing revenue. But I never had any idea he could fling words like that out of the box when letting loose of a valuable chunk of silver and a life pension."

High stood, fumbling at the loving cup. He had never seen one before, and, of course, had never conjectured that he might own one.

"Speech!" cried some one,

"Speech! Speech!" the cry was taken up at every table.

The blood mounted to the weathered cheeks of the laborer, who, with all that he was the hero of the feast, with all that the president's panegyric had held him up as a phenomenon, with all that he now owned a silver loving cup and could put "Retired" on his visiting cards, should he ever have visiting cards, still felt himself a commoner among the elect.

"Speech!" called the assemblage, en masse.

Henry High cleared his voice, which issued thin and uncertain, but which soon found its fullness as he forgot who he was and where, and told the unadorned annals of his years of dogged, monotonous, but almost holy attendance upon his appointed work.

"Gentlemen," said he, "this is all a big s'prise to me. Out there, in Miller's Junction, where I lived, an' where my neighbors knows me as Hank High, they won't scarcely believe this, becus they've seen me, man an' boy, for sixty-odd years, an' they never discovered that I was much account even out there, not to speak o' bein' brought here, to the city, an' held up to be a wonder before such a fine lot o' millionaires an' bosses as what I see t'night.

"I was about 19 when a section sup'rintendent—he's been dead an' gone these thirty years—hired me for my job. He was kind o' in a hurry. The man what had my job was jus' then tappin' the wheels under a train. He was going to quit an' had asked for his time.

"'Can you do that work?' the sup'rintendent asked me. 'Sure,' says I. So he asks me my name an' he puts it down. I went to work on the nex' train an' I been on the pay roll ever since. An' there was nothin' to it excep' to be on the job—that's all.

"Sometimes the trains was late—well, I waited; sometimes the roads was flooded—well, I waded; sometimes it was cold—well, I put on two pair o' mittens an' sheepskins an' felt boots; sometimes it was hot—well, I skinned down to my undershirt an' jeans.

"But it wasn' nothin' so wonderful, at that I had a job to do an' I done it. I never missed a train, that's true; but the great railroad that hired me never missed a first or fifteenth with the pay, neither, so I wasn' the only reg'lar one. That pay made it possible for me to marry an' to raise four children an' send 'em to school, an' to build myself a home up on the hill not far from the station, an' to lay by a little lump for my old years, becus I didn' never dream that I was goin' to be pensioned off in the prime o' life like this.

"Work runs in my blood. My father was a farmer, an' he wasn' none too prosp'rous, neither. Ev'rybody connected with my fam'ly had to work, to work steady an' to work hard. We never loafed aroun' in bed an' had our coffee brung in to us—not us; 4 o'clock a. m. we was yanked out by the foot, an' we had a day's hustlin' done by breakfast, which was at half pas' 6.

"If you kind gentlemen think I labored stiff an' steady for the G. V. & B., lemme admit right here that, while I never failed to be on the job for you, it was soft an' sweet compared with the diggin' an' pitchin' an' plowin' an' milkin' an' other kinds o' labor I did on my ol' man's scrubby farm.

"I never had myself sized up for no wonder. There was so many trains a day, an' so many times a day I picked up my hammer an' went down to the tracks. I never counted the wheels, or the days, the weeks, the months, the years as they went along; but I will say I never missed one, no not a single wheel.

"An' if for jus' that I'm entitled to get this feed, such a great speech from such a great man, this here silver bowl, an' a layoff with pay the rest o' my life, well—I'm much obliged, but I can say I didn' never expect it."

And Henry High sat down.

Flashlight photographs were then taken and the newspaper men quizzed the hero.

"And you tapped those millions of wheels with your hammer?" wondered a reporter.

"Hammer?" exclaimed High. "Say—I wore out eight hammers on those wheels!"

"Marvelous," said the reporter, as he made note. "And will you tell me something, please? Many times, when I sat in railroad cars, or when I stood in depots, I saw men doing your work—bending down and striking the wheels with hammers; will you tell me just what it is they are seeking, just what they are hitting those wheels for?"

"Doggoned if I know—I've offen wondered myself," said Henry High, as he polished his loving cup with the sleeve of his rented dinner coat.

[Copyright: 1918: By Jack Lait.]

like, high-bred face stood out in the circle of lamplight; behind was the dark.

"Taubada!" said an excited voice among the boys. Some one came forward, apparently pushed from behind.

Rubert stopped; the flame in his blue eyes went out. He unclenched his hands and looked at them oddly, as though they belonged to some one else.

"How I have been gassin'!" he said. He addressed the boy like one waking up from a dream.

"Well, what do you want?"

"Me boy belong Missi Kotti."

"One of Scott's boys, are you, by Jove! When did you come, and what do you want?"

"Me been come close-up sun he pinish (near sunset). Me gottum letter."

"Letter?" Dence's face changed. "Why didn't you give it before?"

"Me talk alonga boy."

"Confound you! Give it here! What do you mean by—— Mrs. Carter, it's for you!"

Mrs. Carter had sprung to her feet and snatched it out of his hand almost before he spoke. Bending over to catch the light of the lantern she read it, and passed it to Dence. Then she sat down on the log and burst into tears.

"O, my God, why aren't I ten years younger!" she said, rocking on her seat. "Why wasn't I here day before yesterday!"

Rupert had read the note in a flash. It was from Scott—a blot-spattered scrawl, scarce legible:

"For God's sake come on as quick as you can, wherever this meets you. Brabant is down with blackwater fever, delirious. I think Charmian is ill. For God's sake come. I have sent a carrying chair with the boys. Drive them all you can. Anderson can't leave Brabant—he is very bad. Make haste, for God's sake. GEORGE SCOTT."

Dence dropped the letter on the ground and pulled Mrs. Carter to her feet with a jerk.

"Are you game to cross tonight?" he said, his breath coming quick.

"Game? What do you take me for? Do you think all the gold in the country would keep me here?" demanded Mrs. Carter, sobbing loudly. "Cross? I should think so!"

"Do you know the risk?" asked Rupert gently.

"There's alligators, ain't there?"

As if in reply to the question a long, moaning bellow came from below, answered by another. It was a grisly sound—here in the forest, in the night.

Mrs. Carter listened to it, her face setting hard. She stopped crying, and wiped her eyes dry.

"Where's those boys of Scott's!" she demanded.

"Sinuabada (lady)—he stop along 'nother side."

"Other side—and, anyhow, not one of them would cross in the dark, if you drove them with bayonets. I reckon ours won't either."

"Suppose you come alonga we-fellow, I give you plenty kuku (tobacco)," suggested Dence to the head boy.

"Where me go?"

"Alonga 'nother side."

The boy's eyes dilated till they showed a white ring all round the dark-brown iris.

"You gammon, Taubada!" he panted.

"No gammon. Suppose some boy he come, tonight, I give him five pounds money."

The carriers drew back and huddled together, their faces showing mortal fear. Another snarling moan came up from the swamp.

"Hear him, Taubada!" trembled the carrier. "Me too much dam fright. Me no go."

"Dence, leave them alone," came from Mrs. Carter. She had just finished pinning up her dress and was rapidly snicking cartridge after cartridge into the .45 Colt she had taken from one of the swags. "They won't go, and I don't know as it's a square deal to try and make them."

"The risk is worse for you," said Dence.

"It's got to be taken. They haven't any call to throw away their lives, and I reckon they won't, anyhow. We'll have a lantern apiece——"

She broke off.

"That fool of a boy—there's only one.."

It was beginning to rain, a fitful dropping that promised the usual nightly downpour before long. Dence pulled a couple of brands from the fire and tried to make them burn. But they hissed and went out as the fall grew heavier.

"You'll have to go first," said Dence, turning away from the useless fire, "and carry the lantern. They're more or less afraid of light."

"I reckon I know about as much of them as you do. And what's to become of yourself?" asked Mrs. Carter. She had girded up her dress now and stuck the revolver in her loosened belt; her keen, handsome face looked much as usual, save for a slight paleness under the tan, scarcely perceptible in the lamplight.

"I'll keep as close as I can. And look here——"

"Well?"

"If anything should happen to me—don't you fool trying to do anything. Go on. You must get through."

Mrs. Carter looked at him. There was nothing that she could say.

For some unexplained reason they turned and gripped one another's hands before starting down the slope to the marsh, whither they were followed by the loud howlings of their boys. A peculiar booming cry rose up as they went, dominating all the other shrieks—the Orokiva death song.

"For delicate tact and consideration of your feelin's the Papuan takes some beatin'," observed Rupert dryly.

They were at the borders of the swamp now; the huge marsh ferns rose up and brushed their faces as they passed and the stiff spikes of the water loving sago palm swung low above them. It was raining hard and very dark; the hurricane lantern showed only a low circle of muddy track and rank lush grasses, poisonously green.

And suddenly, as though a tap had been turned on, a flood of sickening scent filled the air. It was warm and animal; it smelt of musk and decay. It was so thick that you felt you could beat it apart with your hands. There was no sound now at all. The bellowing had ceased.

The track went down into the marsh here; there was no more solid ground in front, only a glimmer of mud and water, with scaly sago trunks and clumps of giant speargrass looming dimly in the dark. Underfoot a narrow path of felled trees, laid lengthwise for economy's sake, stretched out into the gloom.

The man and the woman stood for a moment on the brink of the swamp, while the rain pattered in the pools and hissed on the lantern. There was still no sound. The darkness was thick as a wall. Only the stifling musky scent, with its hideous suggestion of a perfumed corpse, grew denser, in waves that could be perceived.

"God defend us, Mr. Dence," said Mrs. Carter in a low voice, "but I think they're all around." Her hand on his arm gripped him so tight as to bruise.

"Will you go back and wait till tomorrow?" asked Rupert in the same low tone. His eyes, blue fire in the lantern light, pleading, commanding, gave the lie to his tongue.

Mrs. Carter loosened the pistol in her belt.

"No," she said. Rupert could see that her nostrils were beating like a heart. She took the lantern from him and stepped out on the felled log track.

It was almost an hour's journey across the swamp, in the night and the rain, with the uncertain footing given by the slippery logs. The circle of lantern light showed only the perilous track and the oily glitter of mud and water close beside it. Twice a droning call came from far away; once the sound rose suddenly at their feet and seemed to shake logs on which they stood, while the musky smell beat up in a warm wave into their very nostrils. Rupert fired his revolver at the sound, but there was no splash or movement, and nothing to be seen. They went on. Neither spoke. The logs tilted and creaked beneath them as they crept along, and their feet sucked loud in the gaps between; the lantern clinked as it swung; their breathing sounded.

They were near the other side.

"O God in heaven!" cried Mrs. Carter.

The roughly laid logs swayed down and tilted; mud and water flowed over one side of the track. A huge gray head, with cold impassive eyes, had risen like a phantom of death from the slime, opening a gulf of white toothed jaw. The body of the creature, invisible under mud, bore down the logs as though a dray horse had rested its weight on them.

Mrs. Carter, shrieking, dashed her lantern at the horrible head; she had not time to reach for her pistol. Somehow, in the momentary withdrawal of the creature, she got past, on the sound half of the track. Then, behind her, came a shot, a struggle, and a splash—no cry.

She flung round again, rushed back, pulling out her revolver, and fired shot after shot into the darkness. Rupert Dence was gone. Sobbing with horror, she saw the mud and water heaving under the lantern light—saw a deep pool near at hand send out dark waves. The track was empty.

"If anything should happen to me, don't try to do anything. You must get through."

She remembered.

"No use," she panted, reloading her revolver, while sobs shook her from head to foot. "A regiment couldn't save him now—but if he'd only called out in time! He's given his life, as sure as ever—— O, how am I to—— Mary Ann Carter, don't lose your head! Don't dare! You get through, I tell you."

Panting, shaking, beating back her tears, she made the last piece of the track and climbed up on the other side. Safe! But what of him?

"He gave his life," she said, letting the tears go at last. "If he'd called out I might have hit the brute—but he wanted me to get clear—for her."

The rain had passed; the stars shone out. The night was very still.

Mrs. Carter looked up to the arch of eternal splendor, high above the spiring palms.

"If ever a man went straight to heaven, whatever he's been or done, it's Rupert Dence," she said.

She ceased her tears. She gathered herself together. She went up the slope. The boys and the carrying chair were waiting on the top.

Mrs. Carter was widely known in Papua as a nigger driver. She had never earned the title so fully as she earned it that night.

. . . .

It was one of the New Guinea diamond days. The river dazzled unbearably down at the foot of the cliff. It seemed as though no roof, no shade, were dark enough to shut away the sun. Under the deep hung palm leaves that thatched the house above the river it came, this burning noon, dropping white hot pencils on the empty lounge and deserted work table in the outer room, leaving latticework of molten silver in the inner chamber around the borders of the carefully guarded shadow that lay, all day and all night, about Charmian's bed.

Charmian was lying in the heart of the shadow asleep. Her little son slept in a white hung basket at her side. Mrs. Carter, her back turned to the bed, was busying herself, somewhat unnecessarily, it seemed, about the tidying of the dresses that hung on the wall. Beside the bed, his strong brown hand laid lightly on the flower pale fingers that drooped over the edge of the sheet, sat Scott. He had been there since early morning; it was now near noon.

"George, leave her, and let me stop; you never had a bite to eat today," said the figure at the wall, somewhat thickly, without turning around.

"I won't leave," answered Scott. His face in the last two days had grown a span smaller, his eyes looked out of dark caves. "There'll be time for everything when——" He stopped.

Mrs. Carter, her face curiously wrinkled, but her eyes dry, turned around from the wall.

"George—don't you eat your heart out," she said. "We did what could be done. If all the doctors in Sydney had been here it would have been the same."

"Brabant's still delirious. He was a hundred and six yesterday," was Scott's only answer.

"Six, or six hundred, it don't matter," declared the queen. She crossed the room and looked at the sleeping face. The eyes were ringed with violet, the delicate nose stood sharp and high. "Nothing matters," said the queen.

There was a pause; the short, quick breathing of the child sounded in the quiet room. Charmian's breast heaved slowly, silently.

"Will she not wake up?" asked Scott, keeping his hungry eyes fixed on her face. The minutes for looking on that face were numbered now.

"No telling. She might."

They sat there silently; Mrs. Carter's fan swept back and forward over the brown-curled head on the pillow. A minute—or an hour?—went by.

"She wasn't made for long life—anyhow," said Mrs. Carter, her hand laid on Scott's head as on a child's.

"She had her day." Another pause.

"She said to me, just after—— I don't know as I ought to tell you."

"Tell me," said Scott, both hands now clasped about the drooping fingers on the bed.

"She said—'I've had his son—she can't do more.'"

"I never knew she knew," said Scott, looking up, startled. "I never told her."

The room was still again, the sun rays sank—sank down. The day was waning. No need to guard the shadow around the bed; it deepened as they watched. And now on Charmian's face the shadow deepened, too. The quiet breathing fluttered; the lips dropped apart. Scott saw her eyes were open.

"My love!" he said, his face close to hers. "Charmian—are you awake?"

There was a slight struggle, and then: "I'm waking." And, very faint, "Good-by."

They sat beside her, afterward, for almost another hour; and, in the gathering shadows, neither knew when Charmian woke at last.

. . . .

Anderson handed the glass to his friend.

"Colombo all right," he said.

"Colombo," agreed Scott, looking out to the blue horizon. The Macedonia plowed steadily across the quiet sea. A dark line was steadily growing out on the edge of the world.

Scott felt curiously moved at the sight of the growing land. It was the old world's first outpost—the first returning glimpse of the lands above the line that he had left two years—could it only be two years—before. Now the last link with the new, unbroken countries was left behind, he had parted from Australasia. As for the Red sea and the Mediterranean, and Marseilles, and "Gib," they were next thing to home.

Much interest had been aroused on the Macedonia by these two passengers, about whom no one, early in the voyage, could obtain any information. It was generally supposed, up to Perth, that they were important colonial dignitaries traveling incognito; afterwards a report went round to the effect that they were two Russian princes in disguise. When it leaked out, through the industrious "little bird" inhabiting the Marconi mast of the P. & O. liner, that Anderson and Scott were two miners from New Guinea, who had found a fabulously rich gold mine, and were off to spend the proceeds, public opinion wavered. Had they enough gold to gild the undoubted squalor of their occupation? Public opinion, helped by the little bird, decided that they had. The romantic possession of a motherless baby, by one of the mysterious passengers, turned the scale still further. The stewardess in charge of little Rupert was interviewed, coaxed, and bribed to tell all she knew.

"I shall be home in three weeks," said Scott. "Joe—you remember——"

"What?"

"What I told you that night we left Port Moresby."

"Yes, I remember," said the big miner, standing up against the rail, his hands hanging down at his sides. Anderson had no nervous tricks—Scott used often to wonder how he could keep so still for so long.

"I've been thinking it all over, again and again. You know, my letter missed her—I've found that out since—and she never really knew anything except that I'd been up country for a long while, and got out of reach of mails; she thought me dead, I believe."

"Yes."

"I am going to see her the minute I get to Ireland. I mean to tell her everything."

"And then what will you do?"

"I don't know."

. . . .

But some years after, when his little daughter was first laid in his arms, he remembered the all but last words spoken to Mrs. Carter by Charmian, and knew that she, at least, had known.

The Scotts have a beautiful country house not far from Balmoral, on the Lisburn road. There are leather chairs in the dining room and velvet chairs in the drawing room, and there are conservatories, and a motor garage, and a stable with one or two good saddle horses. Scott has a small yacht with a motor, and uses it in the summer time. Janie has carriages and furs, and more than one solid silver tea set. They agree excellently well; Scott is growing a little stout, and thinks of standing for parliament one of these days.

Janie is a just and kindly stepmother. The toys of her little girls are never better than Rupert's, and she always remembers to kiss him every night, and to call him dear. Sometimes, when she sees his father holding him nursed in his arms of an evening, looking at the honey brown eyes and scarlet lips of the child as a man may look at the picture of something loved and lost, she goes away to her own room and sorts linen determinedly, with a hard set lip. She does not believe in crying. Sometimes, too, when Scott takes one of his rare fits of restlessness, and disappears for a week at a time, flying down the channel on his yacht—southward, always toward the sun—she feels a strange fear creep about her heart. But she does not believe in worrying; there are the children, and there is duty.

. . . .

By the Iri river the grass grows over Charmian.

THE END.

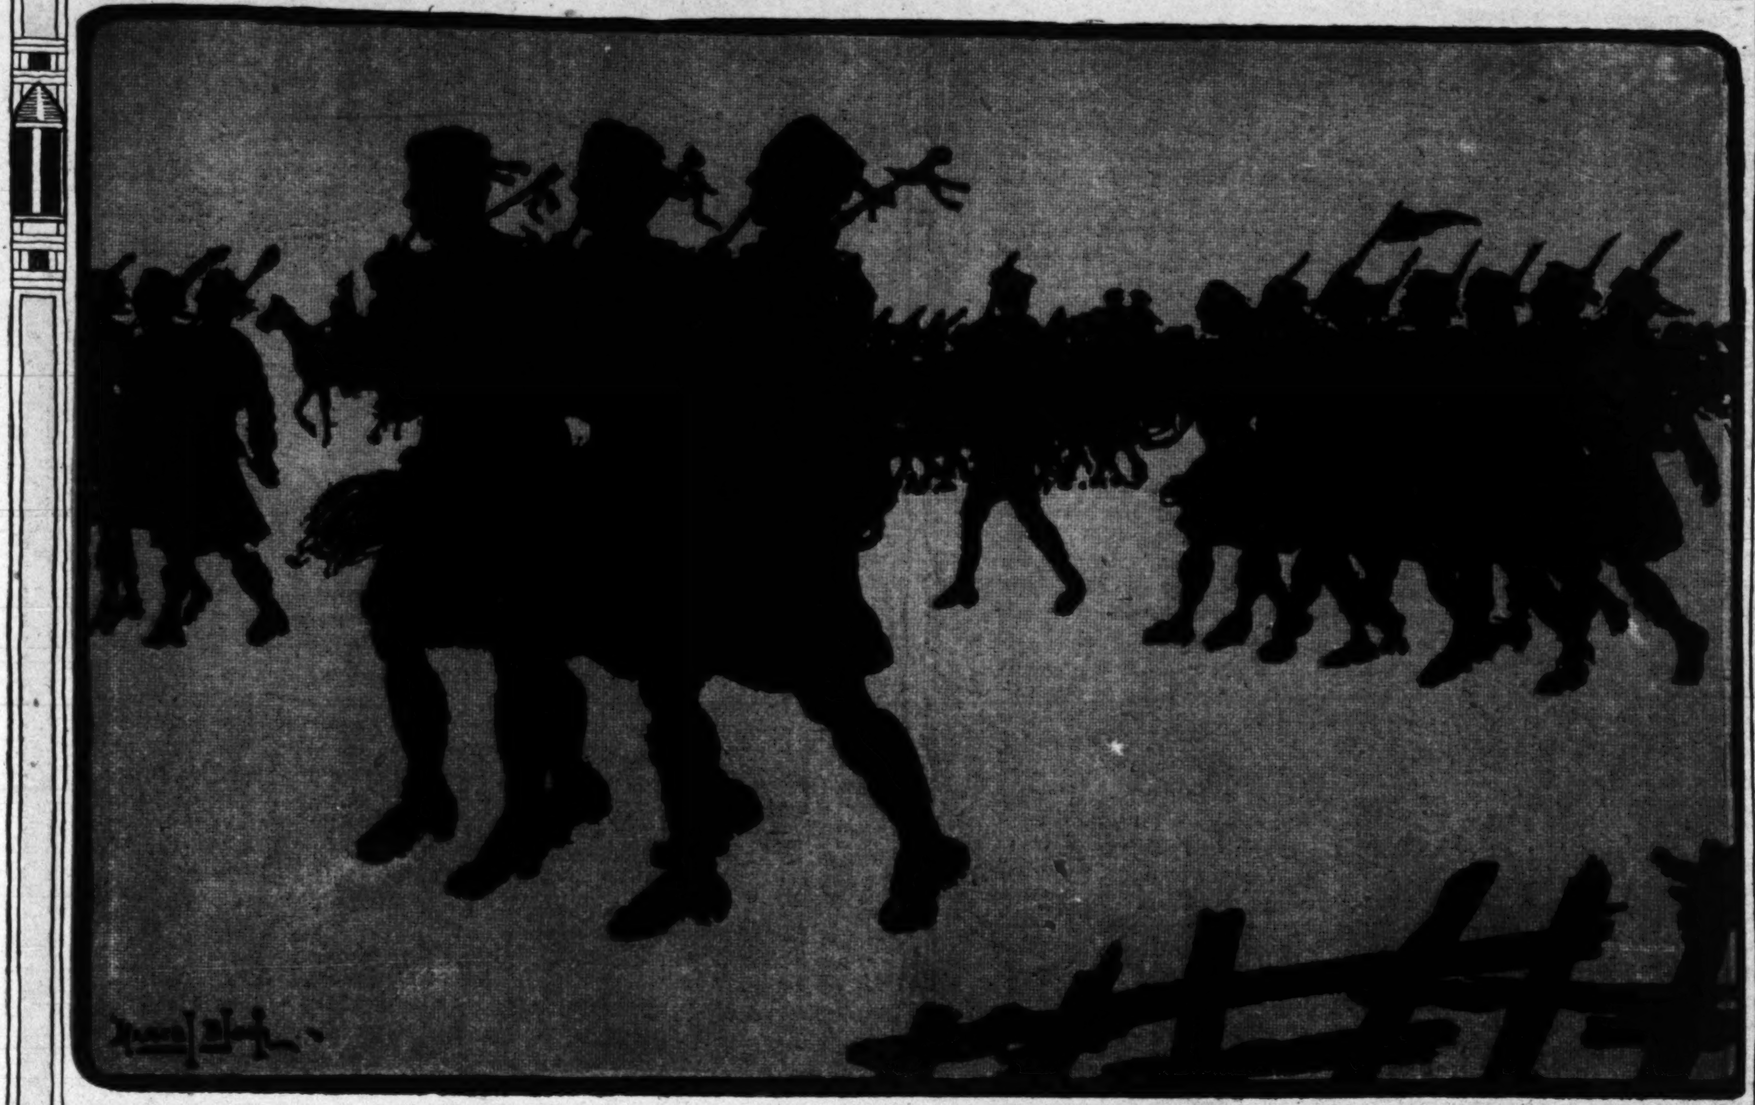
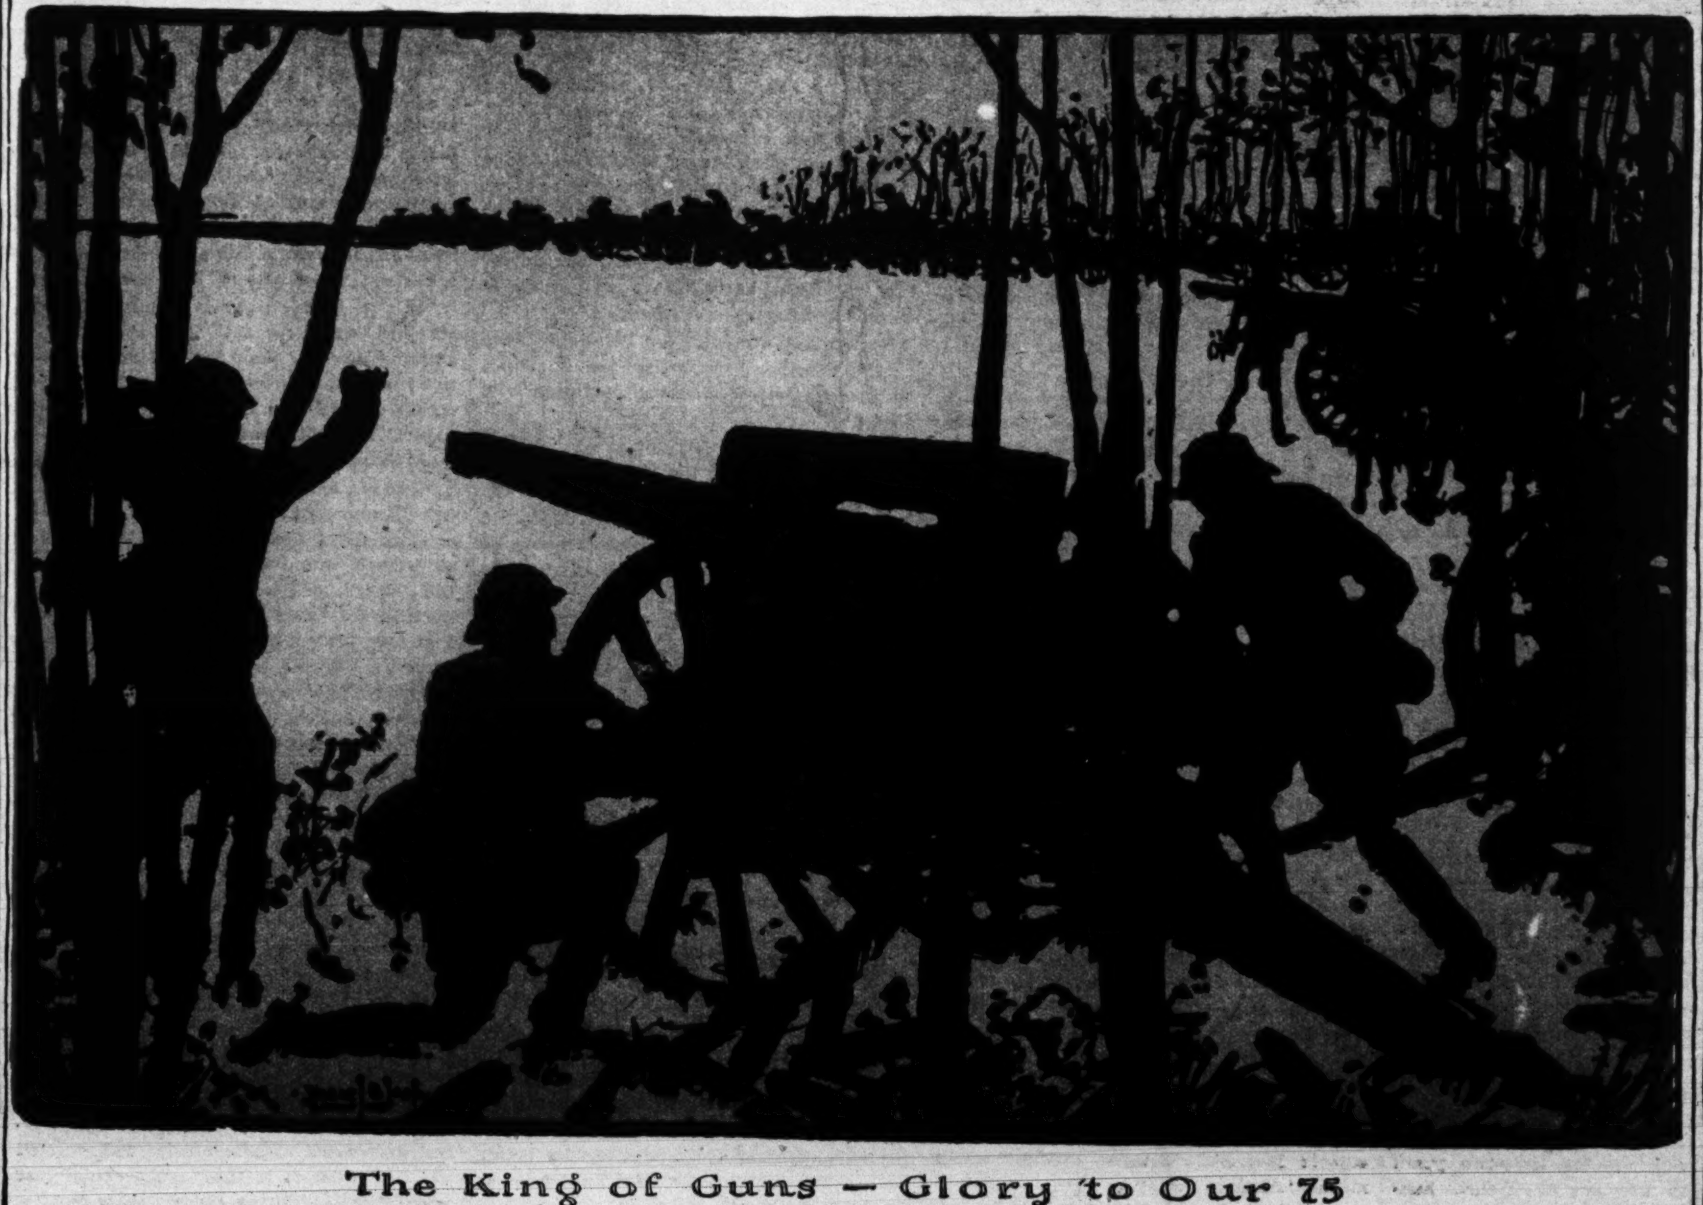
SILHOUETTES by BLOCH



The Brave Tommies



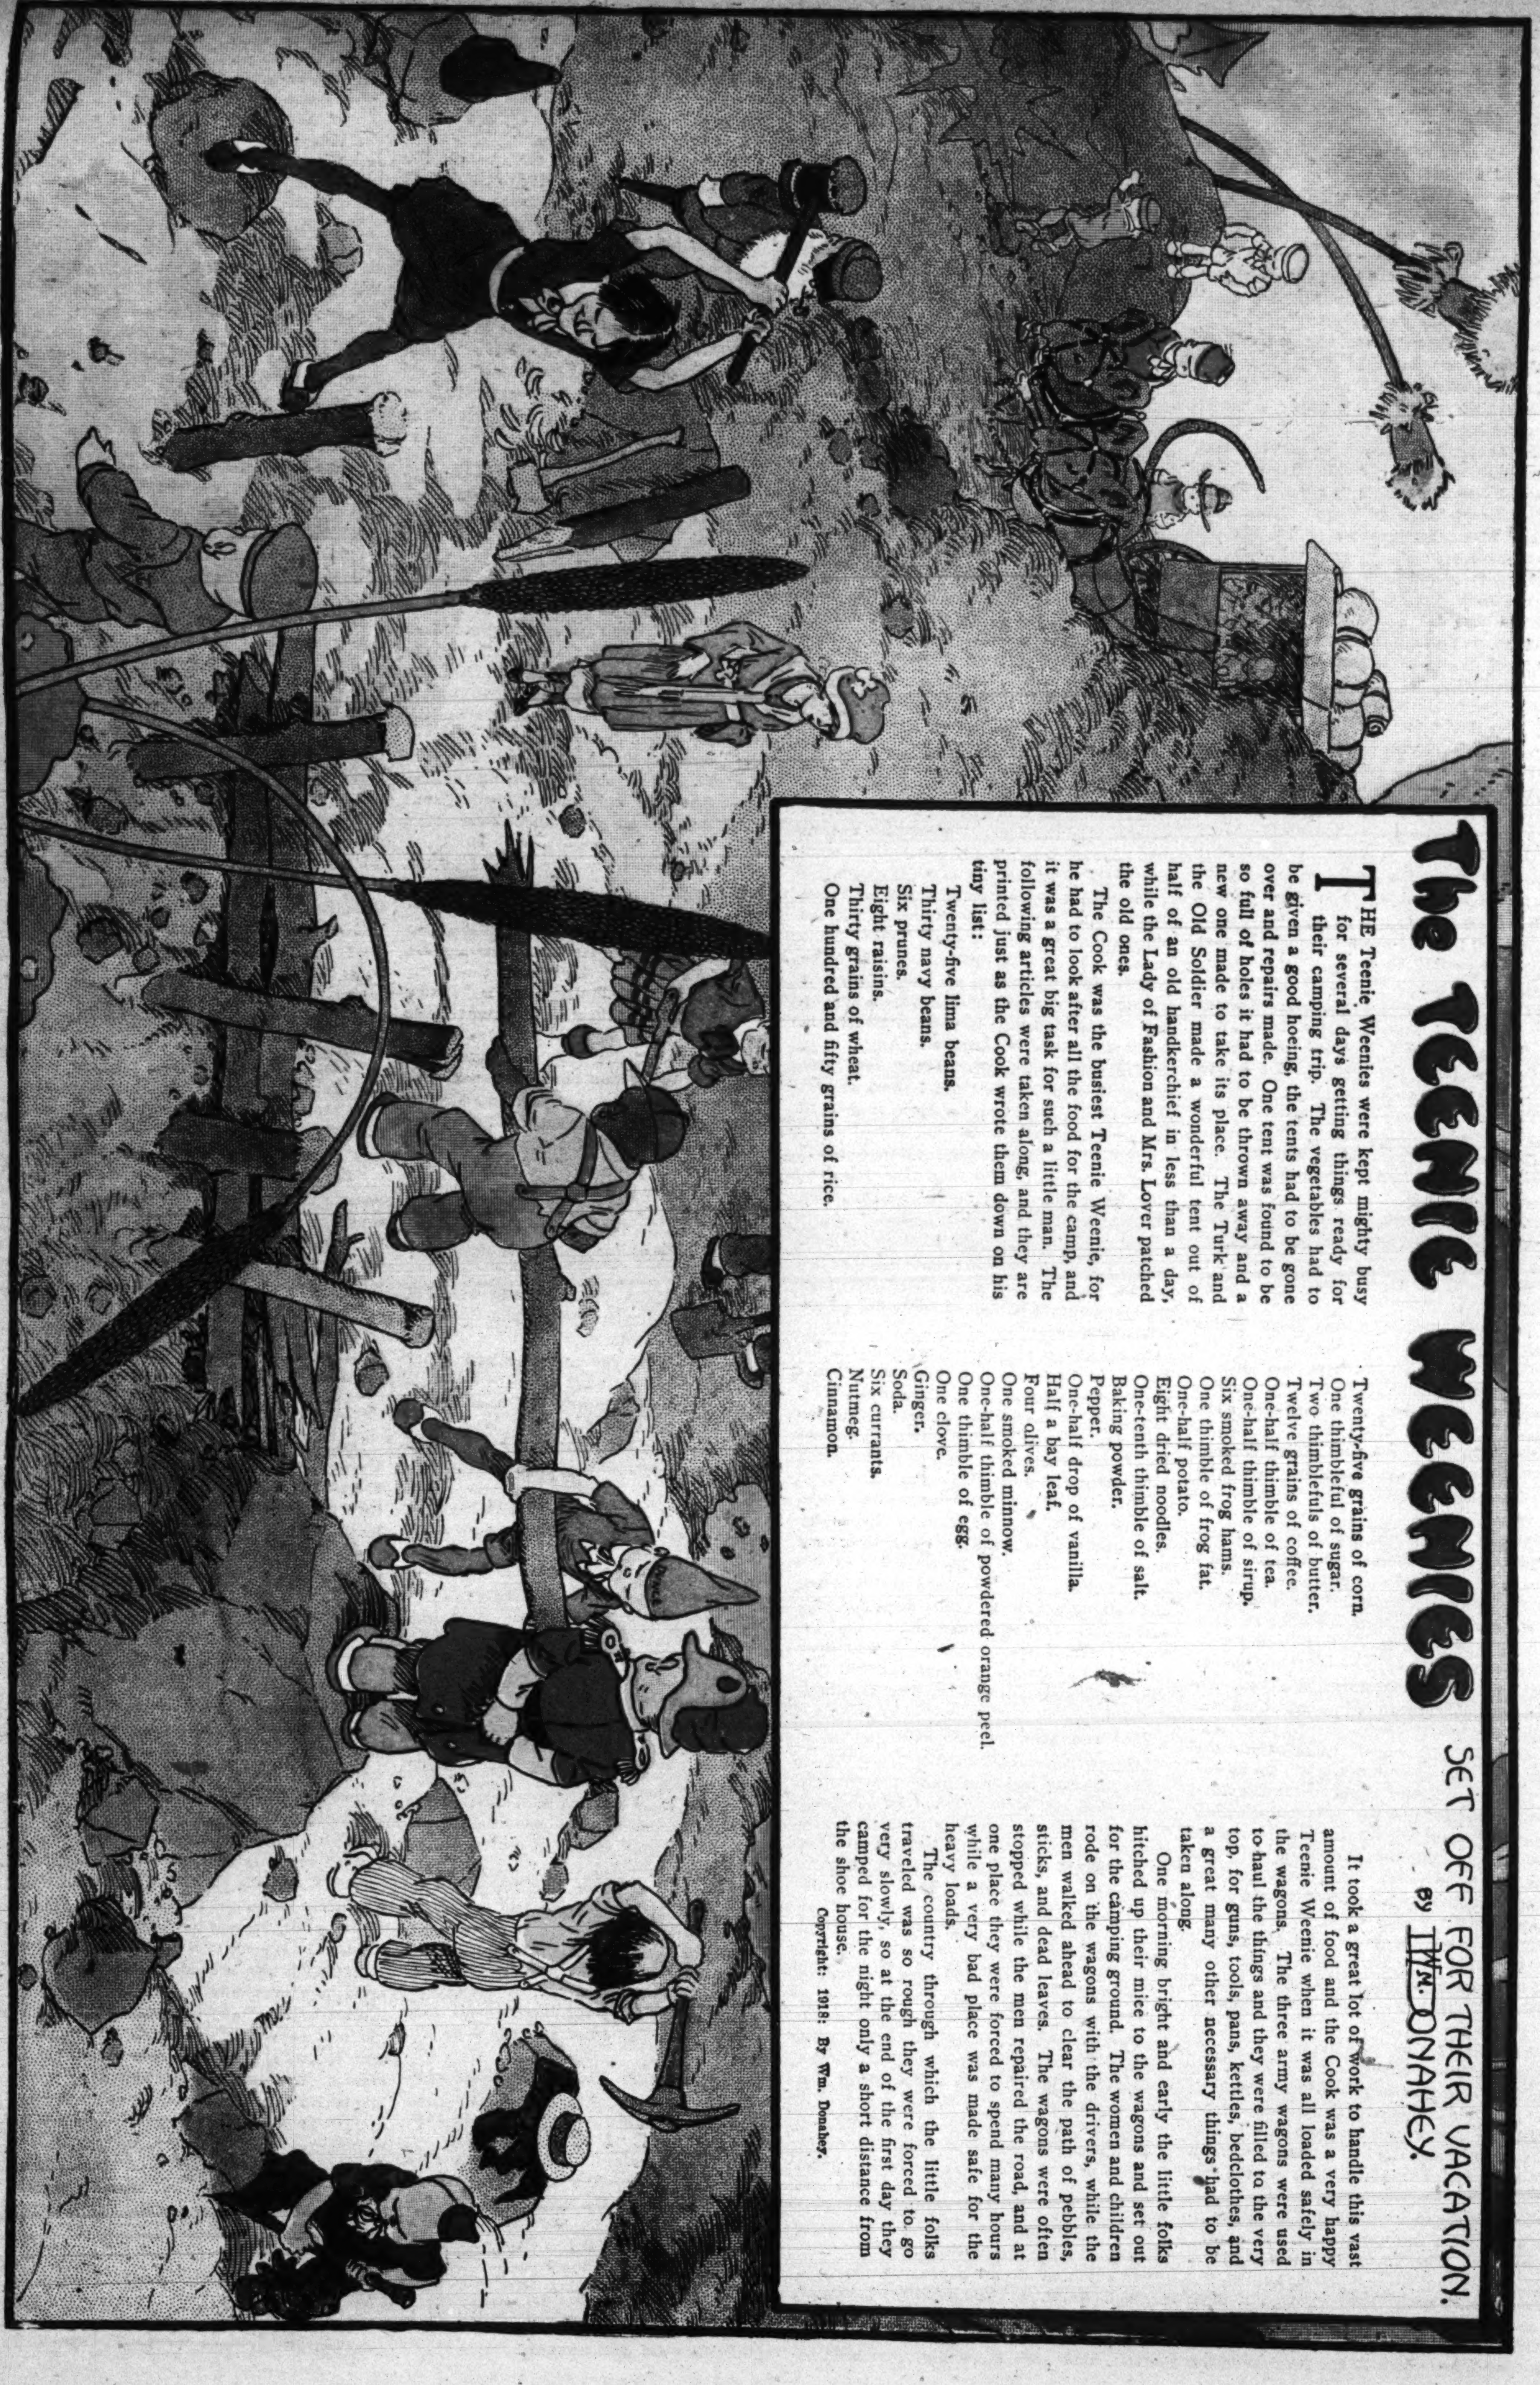
The King of Guns — Glory to Our 75

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

MARCEL BLOCH is a young French portrait painter belonging to the modern school of painting. He was born in Paris in the nineteenth century. He has exhibited at the salons of the Independents in Paris in 1909 and 1910. More recently Bloch has undertaken a striking series of pictures relative to the war. Two of the series are shown here.

The figures in each picture are distinct and distinctive. They are vital, real, alive.

"The brave Tommies" march forward to the swing and lilt of the bag-pipes, their nailed boots clamp-clamping on the paved street in all the glory of a dress parade. The wind that raises their flag on gentle breath, and sways the ribbons on the highland bonnets, may fairly be felt. And in the other, "The King of Guns," the thunderous roar of the ceaseless cannonade need not be heard to make one see the eager gunners sighting, loading, firing. The line of batteries drawn to the edge of the shot-up wood speaks for itself. The 75s of France, backed by the sons of France, speak loud. Bloch has heard their call and epitomized it in his pictures.



The TEENIE WEENIES

SET OFF FOR THEIR VACATION.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies were kept mighty busy for several days getting things ready for their camping trip. The vegetables had to be given a good hoeing, the tents had to be gone over and repairs made. One tent was found to be so full of holes it had to be thrown away and a new one made to take its place. The Turk and the Old Soldier made a wonderful tent out of half of an old handkerchief in less than a day, while the Lady of Fashion and Mrs. Lover patched the old ones.

The Cook was the busiest Teenie Weenie, for he had to look after all the food for the camp, and it was a great big task for such a little man. The following articles were taken along, and they are printed just as the Cook wrote them down on his tiny list:

Twenty-five lima beans.
Thirty navy beans.
Six prunes.
Eight raisins.
Thirty grains of wheat.
One hundred and fifty grains of rice.
Twenty-five grains of corn.
One thimbleful of sugar.
Two thimblefuls of butter.
Twelve grains of coffee.
One-half thimble of tea.
One-half thimble of sirup.
Six smoked frog hams.
One thimble of frog fat.
One-half potato.
Eight dried noodles.
One-tenth thimble of salt.
Baking powder.
Pepper.
One-half drop of vanilla.
Half a bay leaf.
Four olives.
One smoked minnow.
One-half thimble of powdered orange peel.
One thimble of egg.
One clove.
Ginger.
Soda.
Six currants.
Nutmeg.
Cinnamon.

It took a great lot of work to handle this vast amount of food and the Cook was a very happy Teenie Weenie when it was all loaded safely in the wagons. The three army wagons were used to haul the things and they were filled to the very top, for guns, tools, pans, kettles, bedclothes, and a great many other necessary things had to be taken along.

One morning bright and early the little folks hitched up their mice to the wagons and set out for the camping ground. The women and children rode on the wagons with the drivers, while the men walked ahead to clear the path of pebbles, sticks, and dead leaves. The wagons were often stopped while the men repaired the road, and at one place they were forced to spend many hours while a very bad place was made safe for the heavy loads.

The country through which the little folks traveled was so rough they were forced to go very slowly, so at the end of the first day they camped for the night only a short distance from the shoe house.

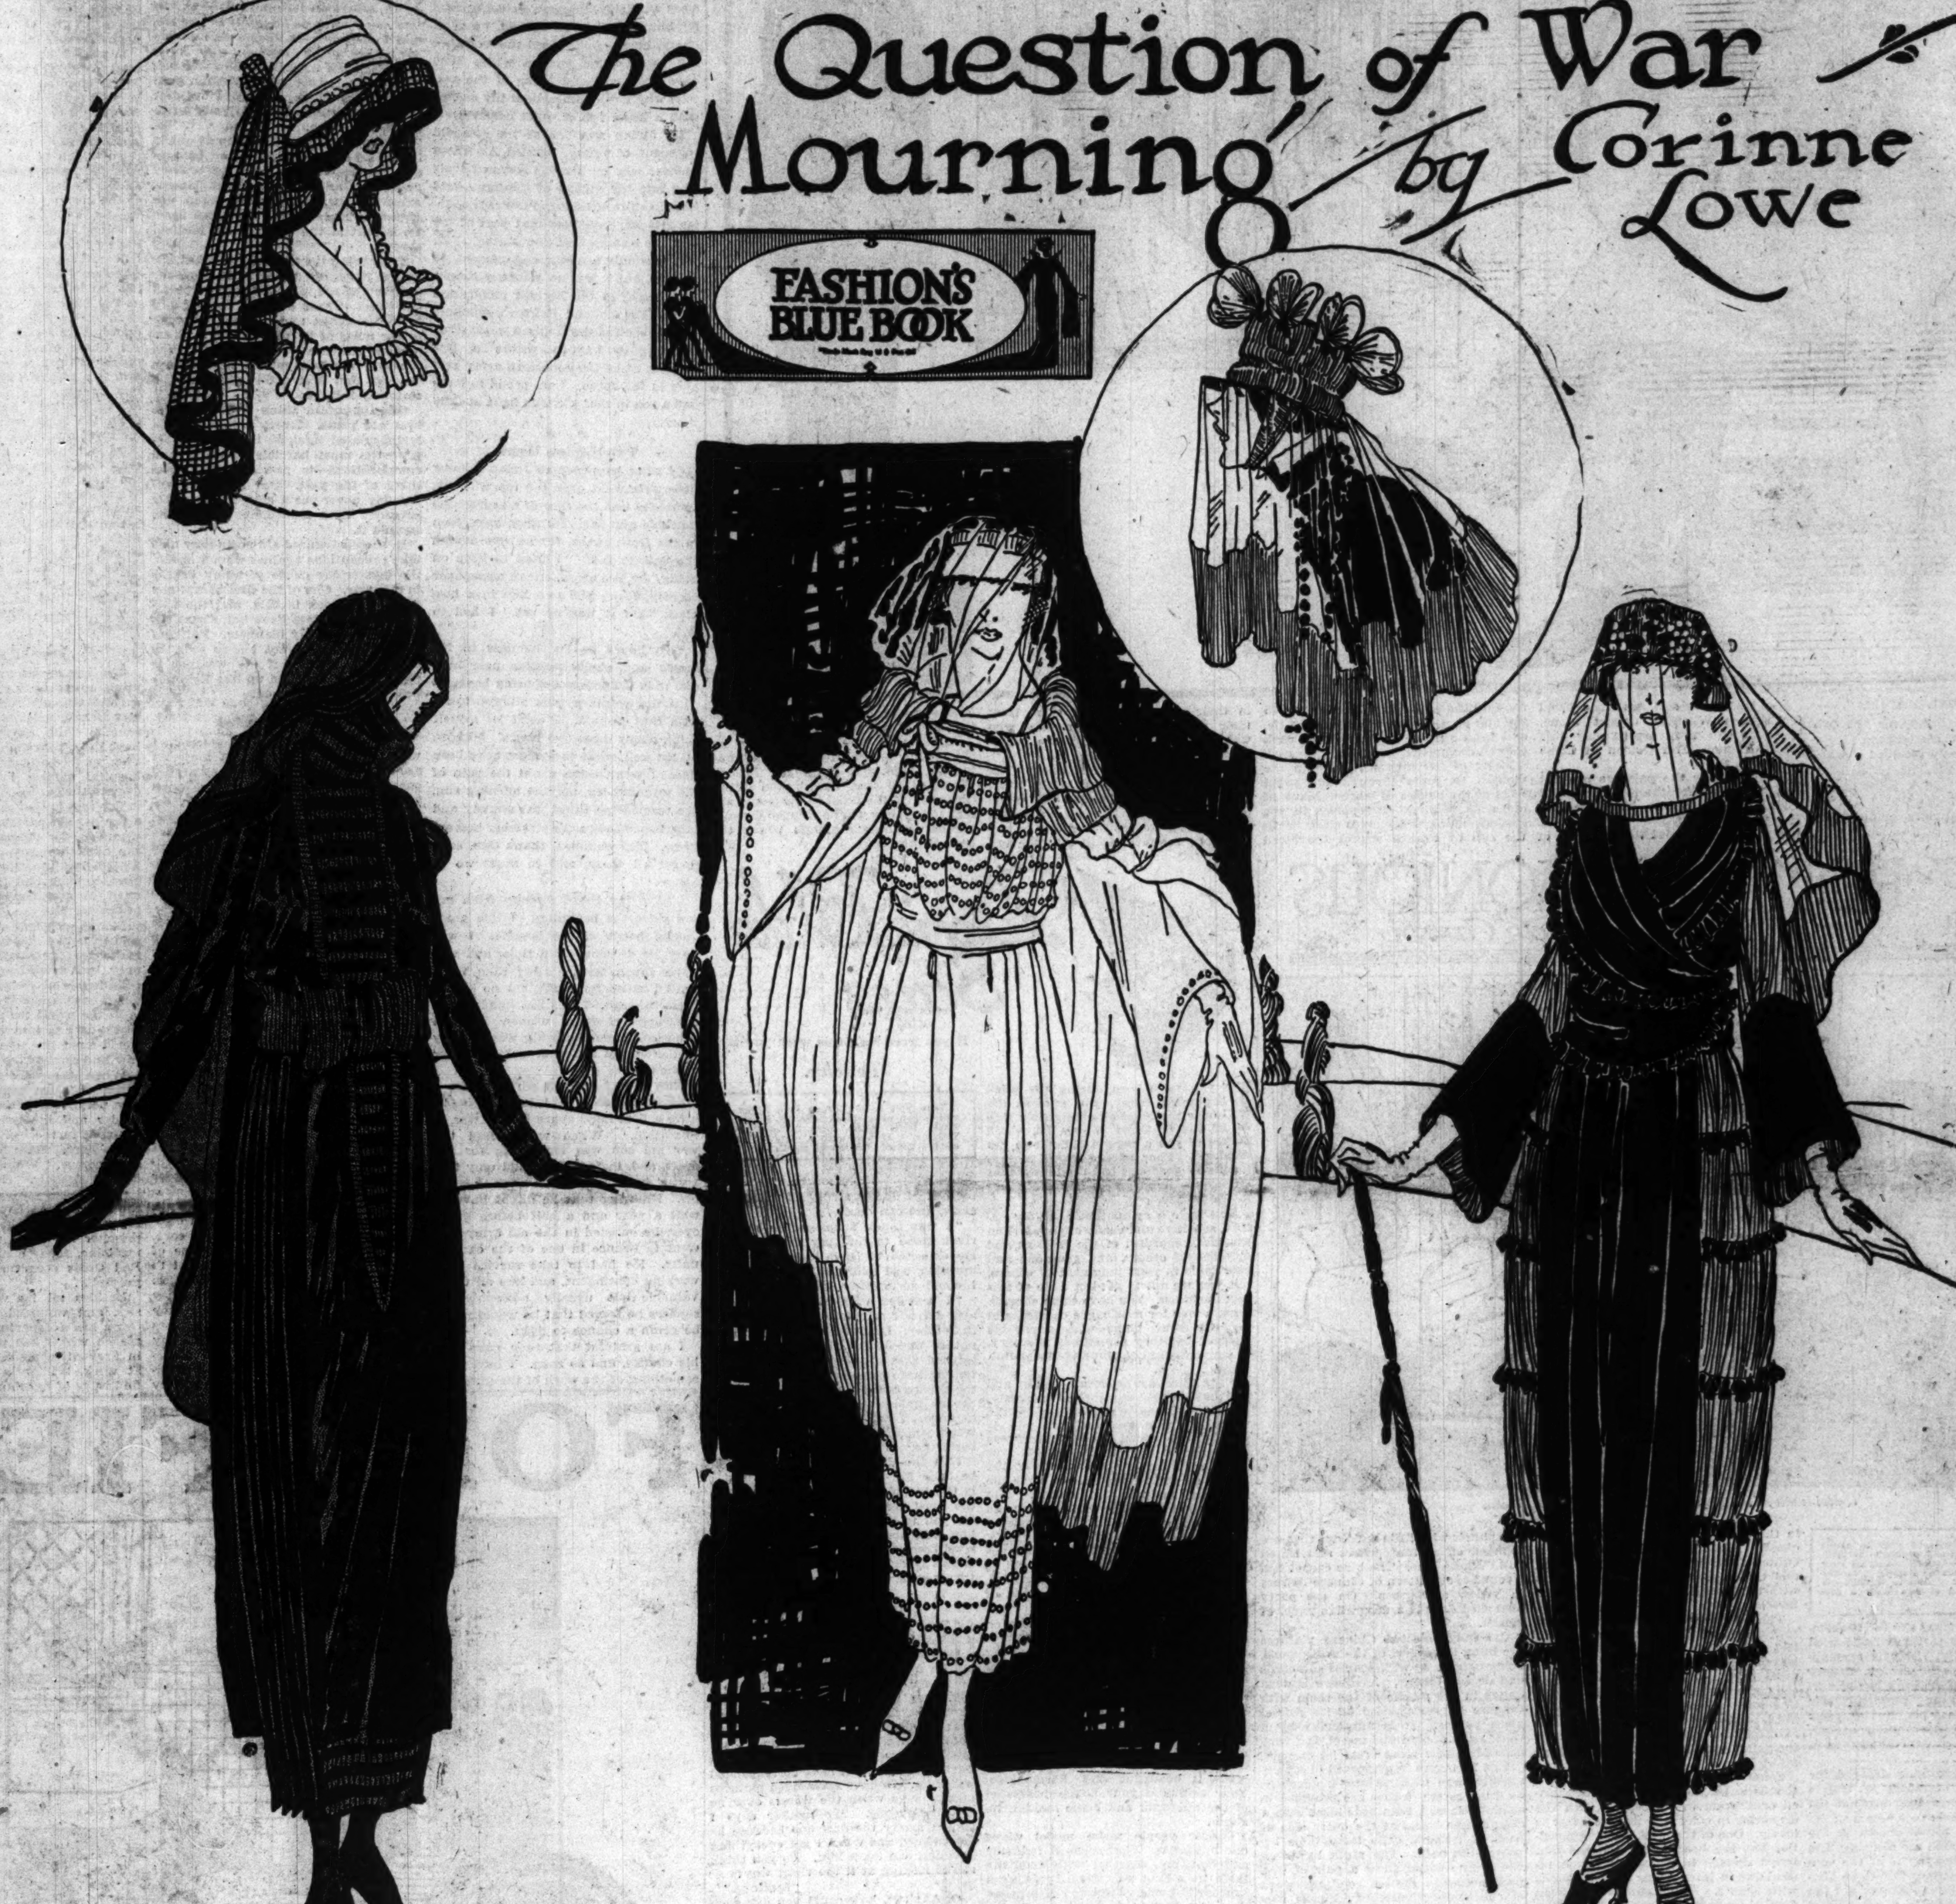
The Question of War Mourning

by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This war has changed many a fluffy little person who before last year never was allowed to go to school without at least one limousine and two maids into a useful war worker. She is now running about all by herself making bandages, typing five hours a day for some branch of patriotic service, and otherwise boldly facing noon in Fifth avenue. Her brother, who formerly spent his time running away from himself, has, in aviation, or infantry, or ambulance driving, got the first glimpse of his cherished self as a mere molecule in a tremendous organism. Both have found themselves in losing themselves.

Certainly the attitude to mourning has been one of the strange phenomena of the great crisis. In England, where the formal garb of grief used to receive due amount of attention, most women have entirely done away with it. In France, where crepe veils and gowns too often became mere coquettish fripperies, mourning has at last become an expression of grief. Here in America, now that the solemn word is touching so many homes, the question arises at once as to our attitude in the matter.

First of all, let us say that we ourselves have always recoiled from the term "correct mourning." How can one be correct and mournful at the came time? It is absurd as saying "dainty war," or that we thoroughly enjoyed a period of great unhappiness. Now when the occasion for mourning is fast coming to so many American families the idea is really ridiculous.

Indeed, our own opinion in the matter is decidedly with the English. They wear no mourning at all—most of these brave across the seas sisters of our. They have no time for indulging themselves in the egoism of grief. They who have lost so much must dedicate themselves to the supreme sacrifice—that of keeping on with their daily lives. There is no cheering bit of the spectacular about this program. It simply means the day by day heroism of going on as if nothing had happened. It means keeping up the spirits of those who have not fallen by a brave display of the ordinary exterior.

And who can say what it has not done for the boys about to go—to be surrounded by this sane, reassuring background of women dressed as they have always been, of homes having the same garden teas and dinner parties that have always taken place? To understand this, let us look at the reverse of the picture. If Englishwomen had not subordinated their own personal sorrows to the larger good every English lane and village and city would be filled with desolating black, for now after four years of war there is hardly a home on the dauntless island which has not given toll to the war. Think of the effect on the minds of the departing soldiers—a nation clad in crepe!

So, whatever may be the final attitude of our own country to formal garb of grief, we ourselves cannot help urging this picture of England as it is today.

If, however, signs of personal grief must be indulged there can be no doubt that they will be modified. Women will wear mourning for a shorter time and during this period the type of black will be something much less oppressive than the old gruesome crepe.

Indeed, among the wholesome indications of our present tendency nothing is more convincing than the number of white gowns and hats offered by leading specialty shops. For summer the white mourning gown and hat are particularly urged and in the center of the page we are showing a costume of white suggested by a Fifth avenue shop which is devoted to the sale of mourning wear.

A white crepe de chine simply made and trimmed with large white beads is here accompanied by a cape made of several layers of chiffon. This cape is trimmed with collar and border of white faille. As for the toque, this is a perfectly plain little shape hung with a white chiffon veil draped evenly about the crown. Such a frock as this may be worn all winter. Certainly the effect is infinitely less depressing than those old solemn weighted garments of black.

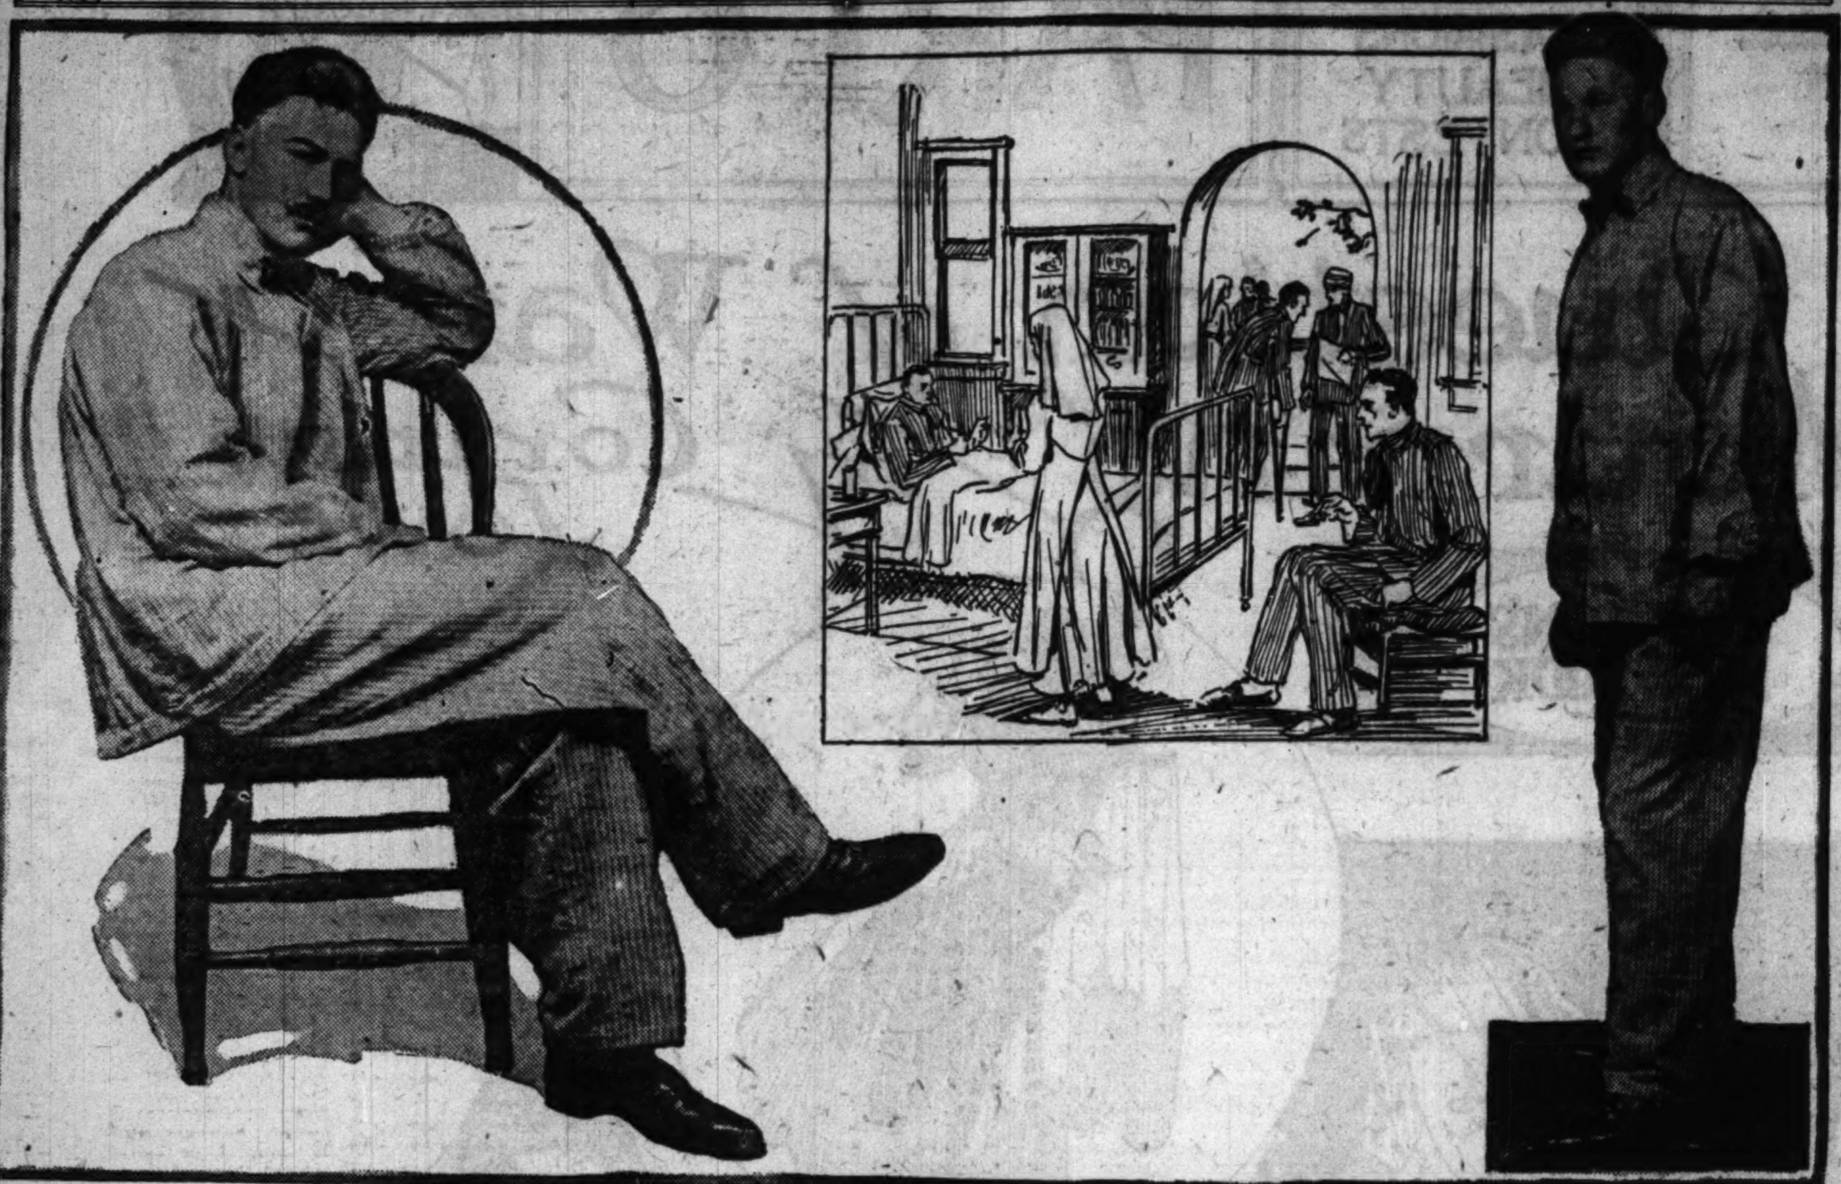
It used to be that the woman in mourning never appeared at any social function. To a large degree this custom has disappeared. Now that the war is here we shall shut ourselves up even less. We owe too much to those who are left to hide ourselves in the old way. Nevertheless there are certain conventions which do remain with us. One of these is that a woman in a long black veil such as is seen to the left should never appear at any public amusement.

This particular bonnet is of the black faille which is used for so much of the mourning millinery. It has a stiff upturned brim and a soft crown to which is attached a veil of chiffon banded with satin. The frock which goes with this is of dull black charmeuse showing below and at the sides of the panels a black chiffon slip. This chiffon slip, banded in grosgrain ribbon, is further revealed by a deep V outlined in grosgrain and interpolated by a wide girdle of grosgrain. A costume like this is used by a widow during the first period of mourning.

At the right is a graceful frock which shows the type of afternoon wear permitted to those who are not in "heavy mourning." This is a combination of crepe de chine and chiffon in which the former material is used for surplice bodice, the deep cuffs of the peasant sleeves, and the front and back panels. Black faille ribbon, closely plaited, is banded on the chiffon skirt and about the bodice. With this is worn a hat of black crepe trimmed with black grapes over which is thrown a net veil bordered in chiffon. As will be seen, the border of this is deeper in the back than the front.

One prominent society woman of New York has done much to sponsor the custom of wearing white mourning. To this same woman is ascribed the combination of white hat with black veil which is shown at the upper left. This particular model is a poke shape of white crepe draped with a heavy, square meshed black veil. It, together with the purple crepe de chine hat at the right, plaited and strapped under the chin and trimmed with purple chiffon stretched over circular wires, strikes to our mind entirely too frivolous a note. We do not advocate it. We simply show these hats as we do the rest of this mourning wear with the purpose of giving what the New York shops show at the present time.

PATRIOTIC and PRACTICAL NEEDLEWORK by Clotilde



THE HOSPITAL PAJAMAS.

The American Fund for French Wounded, 60 East Washington street, Chicago, has recently received a cable from its Paris headquarters: "Send at once," it reads, "25,000 pairs of pajamas." The Red Cross also has received urgent messages emphasizing the need for these garments.

The Red Cross and American Fund for French Wounded cannot alone, eager though they are, supply this great demand. The women at home must help them.

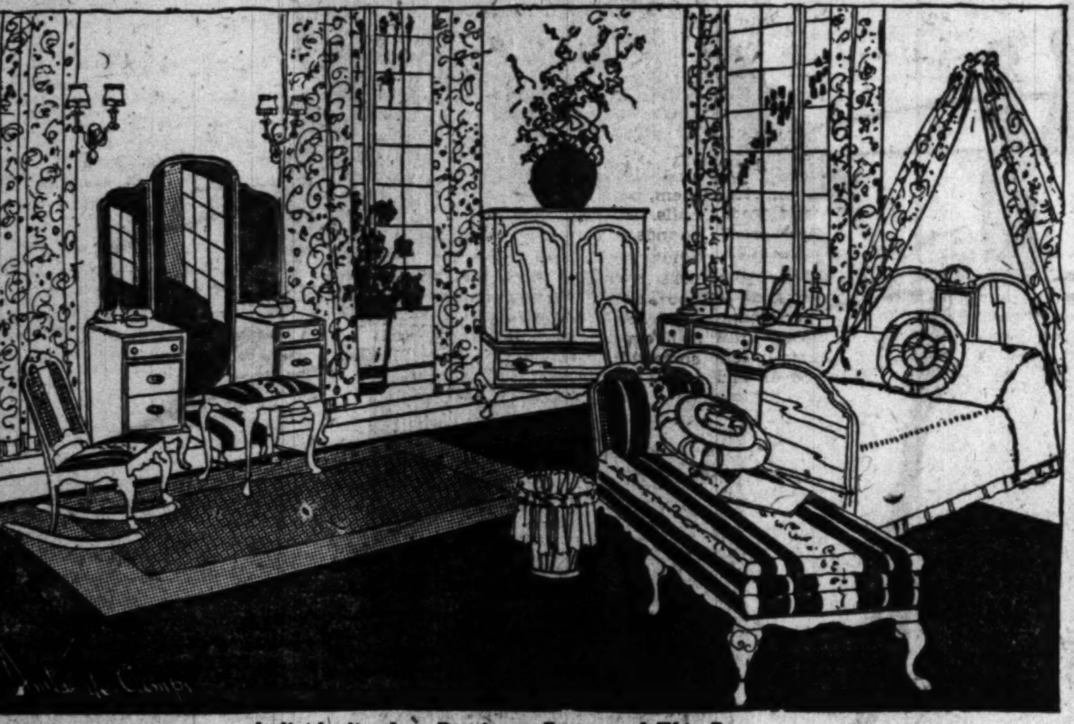
It seems that the pajamas are not designed solely for the ill or wounded soldier confined to bed. More are they needed for the convalescent man who, just able to get about the corridors of the hospital and sit an hour or two in the sun on a garden bench, dons a tie, and feels himself, in his suit of dark colored flannelette, completely dressed.

Many of our men will walk in the months to come through the great halls of the houses of mercy. Many of our sons will rest themselves in the gardens, idling on bench or chair, while the sun of France warms the blood in their veins and gives them back their strength. It is our men who want the suits for which the cables from Paris are asking.

Directions for the pajamas: The hospital pajamas are cut in the usual fashion, with the exception of the collar, which is like that on an outing shirt. Dark colored flannelette is preferred by the men, as in that the suit is less conspicuous and more suited to the kind of wear given it.

Patterns for the pajamas may be obtained by sending 10 cents in stamps to the American Fund for French Wounded, 60 East Washington street, Chicago. If the finished garments are sent there, they will be shipped directly abroad to those hospitals where the need is greatest.

The HOME HARMONIOUS
by Anita de Campi



Individuality Is a Dominant Feature of This Room.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

HUMAN demands are far too comprehensive to be satisfied with mere utility. This is exemplified in home furnishing. Beauty must be clearly in evidence in our surroundings, however practical our choice of things may be. In fact, their usefulness, if it exceeds their beauty, will make them prosaic almost as a kitchen stove.

There is an increasing demand for furniture that is dignified, yet simple in character—things that are not too striking, yet that have a touch of individuality. The pieces shown in the accompanying sketch are pleasing. The set in brown mahogany is of the conservative type that bids fair to be lastingly popular. Novel features are the pier glass in the dresser, which is used as a dressing table. The drawers at the sides have sufficient depth to accommodate toilet bottles and are finished with lock and key, which in this era of the high cost "dolling" insures some protection against the ravages of the transient maid given to sampling her mistress' beauty wares.

The room is cool and pretty in coloring, as well as in the drapery fabrics employed. Noticeable are the solid wood doors to the chifforobe, the six legs of the day bed, and the dressing footstool to match. The prejudice against rocking chairs seldom extends as far as the bedroom, though the best authorities on exclusive furnishing omit them even here.

Light and airy are the summer draperies pictured here. The fabric used for both bed and window curtains is a cream madras, with a delicate floral design carried out in light pink, primrose yellow, and sage green. The lining is of pink sun fast. The day cover of the bed is of jade green armure, edged with a tiny pink silk plaiting, pink pillow. The upholstery fabric is jade green rep striped with walnut brown velvet, and a touch of pink is seen brocaded in the tiny flowers on the green rep stripes. The floor covering is a seamless chenille, the color of blue plums. The little basket is covered with pink silk.

The latest made to order bed has a low head board and no visible foot board. The cover for such a bed is so conspicuous, falling, as it does, over the foot to the floor, that it must of necessity be of the best to justify its prominence. One that has been made for a trousseau is of blue and white checked silk with a rosebud embroidery in the center of every alternate white check. Another glowing affair has a quilted down cover of mustard yellow, and this is tied down at the corners with thick coral colored silk cords and tassels.

The draperies in this room are of mustard colored linen, overprinted with large coral pink peonies and dull green leaves. The curtains are edged with coral colored fringe and trimmed at the bottom with bands of coral taffeta. The toilet accessories are Frenchy, of gilt lace stretched over coral silk. The furniture is French gray, the side walls the palest mustard, and the carpet midnight blue.

Some of the new painted furniture that is tinted and decorated with painted ornaments to correspond with the draperies in color and floral scheme is lovely. One of the most pleasing novelties has the head board and the foot board divided in a manner much resembling in form a pair of chair backs with splats. The openings between give a sense of airiness. Altogether the design is graceful and distinguished. On the narrow splats are little trailing floral paintings.

The chifforobe is much the same in shape as the one pictured here, but a bunch of flowers is painted in the center of each inset panel of the doors. These panels are pale green, almost white, while the remainder of the article is like the other pieces in the room, painted an oyster green.

The walls are ivory tinged with green, and divided into wide panels by means of little grayer green moldings. An oval rug in the center of the room is of bluish violet and turquoise, hand braided. The shield candle shades on the side walls are of parchment, with a posey painted at each center.

A charming bedroom is in delicate coffee and cream (mostly cream), having flat scalloped lambrequins in eighteenth century chintz printed in floral stripes, in which peach color predominates. The under curtains, made to draw, are of a cream white raw silk. The day cover for the walnut bed and dresser covers, which are under glass, are of peach colored brocatel. The toilet bottles and accessories are of bottle green glass. The little shield shades of the candle light as well as the dresser drop light cover are of filet lace over peach taffeta. Before the dressing table is a little bench with its cushion pad covered with fine cross stitch embroidery.

Small things may contribute toward the success of a room, as is attested by the accessories used in the finishing of a new hotel bedroom. This room, which is one of an expensive suite, is carried out in a somewhat oriental style. The pale putty walls are divided into panels with little moldings that are rounded off at the corners and tinted dull Chinese blue. The blue carpet has a round spot pattern of Chinese flowers in yellow and green. On the putty enameled door is a decorative panel of storks.

Carefully selected Chinese pictures are hung in several of the wall panels, being caught up with scarlet silk cords and double tassels. A square lantern hangs in the middle of the room with Chinese figures painted on its ground glass panels. It is suspended by a thick red silk cord and tassel, and varicolored tassels hang from its corners.

The furniture is composed of an unusually large dressing table (no dresser, as drawers for clothes are provided in shallow closets), twin beds inset with a cane somno stand at the outer side of each bed, and a little lamp table between the beds. The night lights on the somno stand show a pair of Chinese porcelain figures on teakwood stands under shades of Chinese brocade done on thin green silk.

There are, too, a comfortably pillowed chaise longue, a dressing stool, and several chairs. On the table between the beds is a telephone covered with a little embroidered case. All of the furniture is lacquered in black, with raised designs in characteristic dull colors.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

MRS. C. D. R.: A delicate fawn color would be your best choice for wall covering. Vary this to deep cream in rooms that are dark. It is the fashion to have the rooms done virtually self-colored throughout. Use linenized cretonne for your inside draperies over glass curtains of light ecru voile. Your old English oak is quite all right as it is.

* *

MRS. C. H. S.: Use light color painted furniture for your sun room. Use figured cretonne for slip cushions and plain light colored cotton repp for draw curtains for the windows. Make a slip-cover for the couch in linenized cretonne to match the curtains.

PERPLEXED: Choose gold colored silk gauze for your windows. Make them on slender rods and rings to draw easily back and forth. Weight them well at the bottom.

B. H. K.: I should have the chaise longue, a trough for the few favorite books, and a writing desk with a good mirror above it. Day bed covering on the bed, plain light neutral walls, and deep cream linenized cretonne inside draperies for the windows over transparent glass curtains.

IF you were born during the week beginning today, you entered life under the tropical, changeable sign of Cancer (June 21-July 21), which makes of you a person difficult to understand. Your nature shows a complexity of good and bad attributes that is perhaps not equaled anywhere else in the zodiac.

You have a sympathetic, kindly nature, sensitive and easily offended. You are just, regardful of the feelings and opinions of others, and generous and charitable in your judgment of others, but you are apt to get but little of this sort in return. You have some shrewdness, a love for music, are careful, and lay out your plans with admirable method, but they sometimes miscarry, to your intense chagrin and disappointment.

Your aims are generally high, and you have a fair measure of curiosity. Your intentions are the best in the world, but you often feel that you do not get due credit for this, and you have periods of deep depression over reverses that may come into your life.

Like all Cancer people, you have the maternal instinct pronounced. You are original, daring in thought; fearless in investigation. You would make a good, conscientious physician; gentle, sympathetic, thoughtful, but determined. Your intuitive power would be largely drawn on in your diagnoses, and you would not follow the lead of any school.

If a woman, you are active in church or society work and a mentor often to the young girls of your circle. They are not afraid to come to you with their disappointments, hopes, and mishaps, for in you they find a dependable, helpful friend.

You are quiet, and think deeply, as a general rule, but you have a high temper, and may act under an ill advised impulse. You love home, and try to make it beautiful and harmonious. Your genius is your home—possessed of the maternal and home making instinct.

Cancer people make model wives and husbands. Your sense of industry and economy, together with exquisite taste, go a long way toward making a successful home. Deprived of a home, you may become a wanderer on the face of the earth, unhappy in yourself and a source of unhappiness to others.

Your colors are orange, green, and russet; birthstone, emerald and black onyx; you will be fortunate when the moon is on the rise, and should avoid entering on new business during its decrease.

A marriage of a Cancer man and a Taurus woman, April 21-May 21, is sometimes happy, because of the great sympathy of the latter sign, but it is likely that a union with Pisces, your opposite pole, Feb. 20-March 21, will prove most harmonious.

Natural to Write.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am writing to you because I believe you can give me the kind of advice I want. I am a girl of 17. My mother is dead, and my father and I live in a hotel here. As my father is a traveling man, I am alone most of the time and am often very lonesome. Two years ago a boy in high school asked me to keep steady company with him. I refused at first, as I thought it silly for a girl of my age to have a steady friend. When he explained that he only meant to be a brother to me I consented, thinking he would be company for me during my lonely evenings.

For two years we were together most of the time. He was never affectionate with me, and I learned to watch for his coming, and to tell him everything. One evening last summer I accompanied him to a park, and as we were sitting by a lake I was much surprised and frightened when he caught me in his arms, and made me listen while he told me how he cared for me. I finally struggled out of his arms, and ran home.

"I was much surprised on my arrival home to find my father there. He expected to leave again the next morning, and told me that if I wished I could accompany him.

"I traveled with him all summer, and did not return to school till late in October. I was very much surprised not to find Ralph there, and I soon learned that all through the summer he had been seriously ill, and the doctor thinks there is no hope for his recovery unless something can be done at once. I am distracted, and please won't you tell me at once what I had better do. THELMA."

Has the doctor any idea what can be done for the boy, Thelma? What is the trouble with him? It would be the most natural thing in the world for you to write him a letter and tell him how sorry you were on your arrival home to hear of his illness. You might send him some flowers for old time's sake.

Advice Not Good.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am going with a fellow who has been spending quite a bit of money on me. He never told me he loved me, but the other night he proposed and it surprised me so I said 'yes.' I only love this man for his money, and if he did not have that I would never go out with him, not to think of marrying him. I am much in love with a soldier whom I have never met, but have corresponded with him. We have exchanged pictures and he says when the war is over he will marry me. My mother says I should marry the first one because he has money, and when I get everything I want I can leave him. Do you think she is looking at it the right way? "ANXIOUS."

O, Anxious, how could you ask such a question? How could you think for a moment that there was any possibility of your mother looking at it in the right way, when she advises you to marry the man and then leave him? I'm afraid she is not the best person in the world to guide you. It would not be right at all.

A SOLDIER'S MOTHER IN FRANCE
BY RHETA CHILDE DORR

CARING FOR THE WOUNDED.

SOMEWHERE in France the soldier son for whom I wear my service pin lies wounded. A few hours before I sat down to write this article I heard the news, and almost as soon as the first shock had passed I thought to myself how much worse I should feel did I not know what wonderful things were being done for him at that hour. I said, "I must hurry, hurry, and tell all the women I can reach, other women whose sons have been wounded, some of the reasons why I can think about my soldier with a heart full of quiet confidence."

My Julian was one of the splendid regiment of young, untried American soldiers who on May 28 stormed their way into the village of Cantigny, and who, in spite of repeated German counter attacks, have held that part of the line like a stone wall ever since.

It was only a minor engagement, to be sure, but it was so gallantly fought that it gained the highest admiration of the French and British commanders. It showed the civilized world what is going to happen within a few months, when the American army gets over in full force. I am proud to have had a son in that glorious fight at Cantigny.

Two Helpless Hours.

Of what happened to Julian I know little. He went over the top with his comrades into the face of a murderous machine gun fire. He must have been in the front ranks, for he was among the first to fall. "I tried to keep on going," he told an American newspaper correspondent who saw him in a hospital, "but it was no use. I had to flop."

Two hours he lay helpless in No Man's land, shells bursting near him, and with the prospect of being bayoneted if the Germans were allowed to regain that ground. I don't let myself think about those two hours. I know, all too well, what they must have been like. I won't think about the pain of the wounded leg, nor the burning sun, the tormenting thirst, the anxiety and impatience before the stretcher bearers came. The wounded, thank God, soon forget all these, and so must we at home.

I have not heard directly from my son since the beginning of this great second battle of the Somme. I was near his division for a time, and was never much farther away than Paris until I sailed for home, but no letters came through. I was like hundreds of thousands of other women here in America, in not knowing whether my soldier was in action or out of danger in the rear.

Now that I know I am glad, for I sympathized with his intense desire to have a first hand share in this war of liberation. When we entered the war my son was too young for the draft, and, in fact, he would only this spring have been called upon to register. Knowing that he might have to wait a year and a half before going over, he enlisted in the old army and went to France in one of the earliest units. He had to take service in a working contingent, and like all those valuable but usually noncombatant soldiers he feared that he would never be given a chance to fight.

I am grateful that they gave him his chance, and so soon. I have seen something of the work of the unspeakable Hun. Since then I have never been sorry for our fighting men. The only men I am sorry for are those who live in these times and never have a chance to join the allied armies.

Tender Care for Wounded.

I am thankful that my son lived through his first battle, and I am especially relieved to hear that he is in an American hospital. I have visited many of those hospitals in France, and I am going to devote this article to telling other women who have wounded men over there how our soldiers are cared for when German gunfire strikes them down. I cannot think of anything else today, nor write of anything else.

The wounded are picked up as quickly as possible, the stretcher bearers and ambulance men working bravely under fire, and often in great danger. All musicians, military bandsmen, are stretcher bearers, and the same service is part of the work of the medical corps.

They bring the wounded to what are called advance dressing stations or regimental aid posts, directly behind the lines. These stations, indeed, are in the trenches, and the doctors work to the noise of bursting shells and exploding shrapnel. In these trench dressing stations minor wounds are dressed, and first aid is given to the seriously injured.

One important thing is done in the first aid posts. Every wounded man is inoculated against tetanus. Lockjaw—the most horrible of all wound complications—is now practically a thing of the past. Our hospitals will possibly never see a case, because our surgeons take immediate precautions against it.

In these advanced aid posts they also take precautions against wound shock, the mysterious cause of many deaths in this war. One of the first symptoms of wound shock is cold, and the surgeons and dressers have hot, sweet tea on hand and many blankets. Patients are given cups of hot tea as soon as they come in, and if the weather is cold they are wrapped up like Eskimos before they are sent on.

Every Hurt Treated.

About wounded men in general, I want to say that the great majority are only slightly injured. They are all conscientiously treated, even small scratches being dressed carefully, because every wound is an infected wound, and, if neglected, might cause death. But most of the casualties are able to walk back to their next base, the field, or evacuation hospital. Those who are seriously wounded are transported in ambulances.

The field hospital is located near the battle line, but out of range of the guns. They are near enough, however, to be vulnerable to the gentlemanly Boches, who make a specialty of dropping aerial bombs on wounded soldiers and women nurses. We have had tendered us by the French government a number of fine buildings in various towns of northern France, in which we have established our field hospitals. In these operations are performed and sick men are kept for treatment.

Because of their nearness to the danger line many field hospitals have no women nurses at all. The work of caring for the wounded is done by enlisted men of the medical corps under the direction of ward masters, noncommissioned officers as a general rule. Army surgeons, of course, are in command, and the men receive good care.

Possibly because of the absence of women these field hospitals are apt to be rather bare and unattractive places. Men have complained to me that they had nothing to read. Some said they thought there ought to be a few posters or pictures on the wall. To lie all day staring at a blank expanse of whitewash gets on the nerves of the sensitive. Somebody might get up a society to furnish magazines and pictu[illegible] pers to field hospitals in France.

Fine Base Hospital.

After the evacuation hospital [illegible] the base hospital. Only those [illegible] which promise quick recovery are [illegible] long near the front. As the war continues those beds will be needed for the freshly wounded, and the chances are that our men wounded in this battle will soon be sent, in fine hospital trains, to the vicinity of Paris, or towns farther south.

I visited an emergency base hospital established and maintained by Johns Hopkins hospital, and I should be well satisfied to hear that my son was being cared for there. This hospital is situated in a pleasant wooded spot not many miles from the ancient town which is our general headquarters. It has a main building of brick, an old French country house, but many of the hospital wards are in temporary wooden buildings.

Johns Hopkins itself, with its millions of dollars invested in buildings, has no better equipment than this temporary base hospital in France. It has no better doctors or nurses, and as for its head nurse it has the best head nurse Johns Hopkins ever produced, Miss Bessie Baker.

I know other hospitals, one in a medieval town in central France, several in a pleasant suburb of Paris, and one, perhaps the most picturesque of all, in southern France, a few miles from the large seaport which admits many of our ships weekly. This hospital is housed in an old French chateau that in its garden plan reminds me a little of the White House in Washington. The front garden is small and formal, with a wonderful hedge of white and red camellias. Back of the chateau the large garden slopes in a series of blossoming terraces down to a great river which flows into the sea a few miles beyond. I cannot think of a lovelier or more restful place in which to spend a convalescence.

Best of Nursing.

The quality of nursing in our hospitals overseas is so high that it has excited the admiration of the French and British soldiers. They beg to be sent to "the American hospital." I have heard French officers say that they would be glad to have the entire hospital system in France turned over to the control of the Americans.

The fact is that we have worked out a far gentler system of caring for the wounded, for changing dressings and the like, than any other nation. The British are scientific but Spartan. The French have had few trained nurses until this war. Our nurses are the best in the world.

I shall not fret about my wounded soldier, and I hope other women will make up their minds to bear ordinary bad news from over there with calmness and courage. We cannot possibly escape suffering and pain. It is in the world for us to bear, and until the war is won women all over the world must live in a sisterhood of sorrow and anxiety.

When the word comes, "He is wounded," just remember that he is also being taken care of by the most tender and humane means any government in the world ever devised for its soldiers. Even if the dreadful message comes, "Wounded and missing," do not despair. Even that is being looked after by a large department of the Red Cross. Every missing soldier is traced, and if he is found to be a prisoner his needs are provided for—medicine, food clothing, letters—the Red Cross sees that he gets them promptly.

Besides all its work of relief for sick and wounded soldiers, the Red Cross has a department of medical research which has performed wonders in preventive medicine, and it is still at work, brilliantly and tirelessly, to find ways of fighting pain and death.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

DOMESTIC SCIENCE AND THE PLAIN COOK.

THE old fashioned cook feels jealous of the cooking school girl, especially if this cook does not live in that happy region where the "mother-daughter clubs" flourish. The old fashioned cook is foolish in not accepting the work of the school and getting all she can from it, as complementary to her own. If she reads much on cookery she does accept some things.

The school has gathered together the practices of dozens of old fashioned cooks and studied out principles of general application from them. In a sense it has codified cooking. When people have mental training enough to study out principles they usually have training enough to think further, and the schools have thought further, often much further into cooking problems.

The cooking school has thought further in that it has adopted methods of carefulness such as exist in the chemical laboratory. It has thought further in that it has linked up its work with physiology, because dietetics, which it should teach effectively but seldom does, is the physiology of eating.

But taking the old fashioned cook's critical part for a moment, we may say a word to justify her criticisms, although we think it would be better for her to offer her sympathies. One of the differences between the old fashioned cook and the girl in the domestic science class is too often the difference between a woman who needs the freedom of rolled up sleeves, and the woman working in a georgette crêpe waist with sleeves coming close around the hand.

Choosing Right Clothes.

This difference is a more fundamental one than might at first appear. Cooking requires free movements. You cannot stand at arm's length from a saucepan or the potato you are peeling with any comfort to yourself or complete effectiveness. You use up twice the energy you should, which is waste, and a thing that does not make you love your work. It is really actual waste of food as well as of some more vital stuff.

Of course the girl who goes out from home to school wants to look well dressed. She goes to other classes besides that in which she cooks. The getting of the right clothes for each and all the needs of life is one of the most difficult of the tasks of womankind. It is no wonder at all that the girl student does not have just the most suitable garments. Who does have that cannot give the most of her time and thought to one subject?

Yet I, representing for the moment the old fashioned housewife, do have something of a quarrel with the clothes the girl wears when she cooks. In the chemical laboratory she would be more practically covered for her work. If she were an art student she would be in an apron with some proofs that it was capable of valiant service, not that I would uphold for a minute the art student's love of smooches unnecessarily as well as those inevitable to work.

We are on the way to reform from the white uniform imposed for a time by the home economics people. White uniforms in our dirty cities are not a practical guard. The girl in a white uniform cleaning fish is as likely to hold that fish off at arm's length as though she had on a dress of georgette.

Garden costumes highly suitable and some not so much so are getting a good deal of attention. Note that they are not white but in general dirt color. Now gardening is not any dirtier and not so sloppy as most kitchen work—not that I justify anything but inevitable sloppiness. The garden costume must give as much freedom as possible. There is exactly the same need of freedom in doing cooking. With freedom you use less strength, and the work is in every way easier and pleasanter.

At bottom the thing I am really fighting for is greater cleanliness in kitchen work. The first article I ever wrote on food had this subject of cleanliness. Dirtiness in handling foods has given me more discomfort through all the years I have been concerned with foods than any other one thing. And this has not been wholly because I have rather high standards of personal cleanliness but because people who eat dirty foods are running great risks. One of the worst sorts of dirts is that which comes from dishes half washed and used to eat from or cook in and from foods prepared in a slovenly manner. The commercial handling of foods is making some gigantic strides toward greater cleanliness.

As an example of a food that makes dirt and seems dirty let us take fish. We may be facing a time when we must eat more fish. These fish must be handled better by the trade—in a more cleanly way—and women must be dressed when they prepare them for the fire in the right way or they will hate to prepare them. To be sure, the butcher will do all the work of scaling and boning the fish if you ask him to, but if the fish lie any time after this operation without the right sort of attention they are practically flavorless when cooked, and this is not likely to increase consumption.

Now a woman dressed so as to have freedom of action can scale a fish, even in the confines of a kitchenette, without covering everything in it from ceiling to walls and floor with scales and sending some of them into the next room. After such a performance the work of cleaning up is enough to bring sorry apprehensions. I am not speaking of a hypothetical case but what I have seen with my own eyes.

When cleaning fish one may make a little box with newspapers for three sides, the fourth being one's own proper covering. A little board which can be thrown away or kept in some suitable place or even the white paper toweling will do as the thing on which to rest the fish. A plate should stand ready for the cleaned fish.

Trifles Make Perfection.

It seems slovenly to me to lay a cleaned fish on the draining board of a sink, even though this be of enamel, and it makes more work than putting the fish on a plate. For washing a special pan should be used. To use the dish pan to wash foods or to wash out jelly bags, cheesecloths, or any such cloth seems to me reckless and wrong.

If I seem to be making a mountain out of a mole hill it is because I believe that it is trifles that make perfection in cooking and health, and because that from the attention I have given to the subject these many years I believe my opinion is worth something.

Yes, and I have also been rather enraged of late at the people who impudently set up as dietetic experts, domestic science teachers, and professional conservationists who are recommending, with great authority, practices that are quackish or quackery pure and simple. To be so unthorough as some of these people are is to me most distressing, and if matters go on as they have been going for the last few months half the women and a good many men are going to constitute themselves food authorities on what in business would be called "shoestring capital."

Yes, these people have slovenly minds as well as slovenly practices in the kitchen, and I do not know which of these is responsible for the most harm in the end. At any rate, I know that the work of domestic science is suffering because there are so many people of slight equipment setting themselves up in the profession, and if ever we needed to have sound work it is now.

Much Theory, Little Practice.

But to come back to the old fashioned cook with her coffee cup, her sifter, her handful, and other uncertain and inexact measures, and the cooking school girl in her georgette sleeves and long distance methods, but using standard cup, the scale, and the thermometer. Let us see if we cannot recommend something that will bring them nearer together, that each may learn from the other.

In some cases, I believe, the cooking of the country is actually suffering because those who have the theory mainly and nothing but laboratory practice are lecturing and demonstrating to crowds everywhere. On the other hand, the woman who has had a little bit of highly amateur practice in her own kitchen, and thinks it her duty to go into public food conservation work, can do far more harm because much more ignorant of food principles. I have my evidence in black and white that women like this latter sort are active. I have some of their atrocious recipes as well as statements that show their pretenses. I hope such are not as numerous as I fear. I am sure one of their great rewards is getting their pictures in the papers.

A woman now engaged over a wide field in doing conservation work, and one who has worked alongside the cooking laboratories for years, made the statement the other day that she thought that no laboratory bread recipe should be published until it had been tried by six practical housewives. I would not agree with her entirely, because I know some splendid recipes have gone out from laboratories which hundreds of housewives have failed with because they do not measure as accurately as the girl in the laboratory. Often a housewife who can make truly lovely bread cannot give the recipe to any one because she says take a "sifterful" or some other indefinite quantity.

More Care Needed.

As to recipes, those I know to be best I dislike most to put into print, because people have so little realization of how much the skilled hand counts in executing a recipe—and cleanliness.

For illustration we might take vegetables. A little more of cleanliness, a little more of care, makes all the difference in the world in the cooking of these highly delicate foods. Their flavors are almost volatile. The cook should know their character. She should understand that they have soluble elements which can easily be leeched out, leaving them tasteless.

Take cabbage! I believe I will never print another recipe for cooking it because I am not sure that it does any good. People will cook it in their own fashion, and then when they try to put it with something else, say in my fashion, they get a coarse instead of a refined dish.

But of course I will print cabbage recipes again. A great thing that some one has to do is to bring closer together the practical cook and the cooking of the schools. I had a great deal of training under wonderful practical cooks before I became a person of the schools. In trying to estimate which sort of training has been of the most service I can come to no decision. But I do know that the hundreds of hours that have gone into blending the two sorts of training have brought me all the progress I have made in food knowledge. It is great to have had both sorts!

The SUCCESSFUL HOME GARDEN :: by J. F. H. Heide

Questions on gardening will be answered in this column, if of general interest, or by mail if a stamped envelope is inclosed. Address Mr. Heide, care of The Tribune.

No. 125.

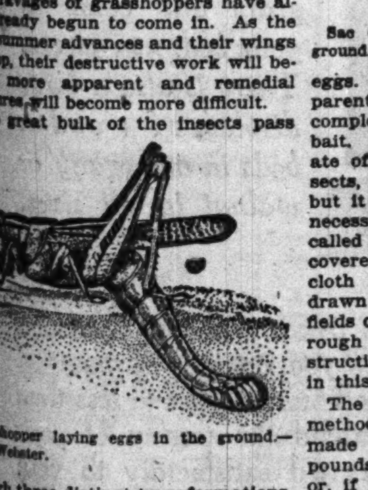
[Copyright 1918 by J. F. H. Heide.]

Sow or plant now in the garden string beans, early beets, early carrots, Swiss chard, early sweet corn, garlic (sets), midsummer (white) radishes, winter radishes, parsley. Transplant now from the nursery bed or set out boughten seedling plants, summer savoys, early cabbage, early (self-blanching celery), celery cabbage (petsai), kale, kohlrabi, leek (for larger plants).

Sow now in the nursery bed for subsequent transplanting—Winter endive, midseason and head lettuce.

GRASSHOPPERS AT WORK.

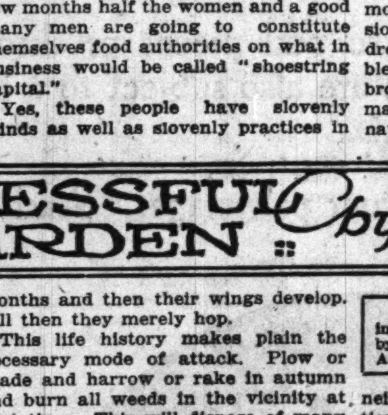
THE usual complaints about the ravages of grasshoppers have already begun to come in. As the summer advances and their wings develop, their destructive work will become more apparent and remedial measures will become more difficult. The great bulk of the insects pass through three distinct transformations. Starting in the egg, they hatch out larvae—that is caterpillars, grubs, or maggots. These go into a resting period, taking the form of pupae. They emerge from this as butterflies, moths, flies, or beetles, the mature insects which lay the eggs.



Grasshopper laying eggs in the ground.—From Webster.

The grasshopper has only two stages. When full grown, in August or September, it thrusts its tail into the ground to form a sac or pod in which it deposits its eggs, filling it almost to the top, and seals it. In dry seasons, particularly in hard baked, clayey soil, the eggs are deposited in the crowns of weeds and other plants. The eggs generally hatch in May or June, in this latitude, and the young immediately begin their career of destruction. They molt in about three months and then their wings develop. Till then they merely hop.

This life history makes plain the necessary mode of attack. Plow or spade and harrow or rake in autumn and burn all weeds in the vicinity at that time. This will dispose of many eggs.



Sac or pod of grasshopper eggs in the ground.—From Walton.

As soon as the plague is apparent in early summer set about to complete their destruction with poison bait. Repeated spraying with arsenate of lead, as for other chewing insects, will protect individual plants, but it is not practicable on the scale necessary to exterminate them. So-called hopperdozers, pans of kerosene covered water with an oil soaked cloth back three feet high, may be drawn on skids to trap them, in large fields of low forage crops, but uneven, rough ground, fences, and other obstructions render them of little use in this vicinity.

The most available and cheapest method of attack is with poisoned bait, made as follows: Take twenty-five pounds of coarse flaked wheat bran or, if unavailable, ordinary middlings or alfalfa meal. Mix this thoroughly, while dry, with one pound of white arsenic or Paris green, or with two pounds arsenate of lead (powder form). All three are deadly poisons and must be closely guarded. Then add six finely chopped oranges or lemons or an equal number of crushed tomatoes. Finally add two quarts of strong smelling low grade molasses.

Instead of the bran or substitutes mentioned, an equal quantity of fresh horse droppings, without straw, may be used. In that case the molasses is omitted and a cheap pair of rubber gloves is worn, as, in any case, the mixture must be thoroughly kneaded.

After first confining poultry, this mixture is scattered broadcast over the premises in the early morning. An ample quantity is provided for, that neighbors may use it in infested localities. Just as with all insect extermination, it is vain effort unless the community makes it the concern of all. As these strong arsenicals may injure fruit trees and fruiting shrubs, they must not be brought in contact.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—The leaves of our poplar tree [the only shapely large shade tree we have] are becoming eaten with holes, as yet only on the lower branches. Is there any way to save this summer's shade?—Mrs. B. H. S.

A.—Probably the cottonwood leaf beetle, a striped beetle which feeds on the leaves of poplars, cottonwood, and willows. The remedy is to spray [not sprinkle] with arsenate of lead, a poison prepared as follows: Five teaspoons of arsenate of lead [paste], one gallon of water, and one-third ounce of dissolved laundry soap. The same spray may be used for all leaf eating insects.

Q.—Please advise me about petsai or celery cabbage. 1. How should it be cultivated? 2. What is the proper time to plant or transplant? 3. How should it be served? J. V. S.

A.—1. Sow in the nursery bed between May 11 and June 10, in a drill about one-half inch deep, two to three seeds to the inch. 2. Transplant to the garden bed [or row] between June 15 and July 15, spacing about sixteen inches each way, in the home garden. 3. Boiled or as slaw or salad. It is like cabbage, with less odor.

Q.—1. What vine would you recommend for a situation which gets only five hours' sun a day? I wish a dense screen. 2. Is Japanese anemone hardy in Rock Island county, Illinois?—A. B.

A.—1. Japanese morning glories as an annual; wild hop [Humulus japonicus] as a perennial, giving satisfactory growth the first year; cinnamon vine [Dioscorea Batatas], as a handsome perennial, little trouble by insects, but small the first year. 2. In well drained soil, properly protected with a winter mulch of leaves or straw, yes.

Better Housekeeping By Mary Bronson Hartt

BANISHING SUMMER PESTS.

MOSQUITOES are a problem for the town authorities, backed up by public opinion. Everybody knows that all pools that have no fish in them and all swamps should have the surface coated with kerosene to keep the mosquito larvae from coming to maturity. Individual householders must help, however, by seeing that all waterbutts are screened and the surface of the water covered with a film of kerosene. If the butt is provided with a tap near the bottom the floating film of oil will not injure the water for washing purposes.

Mosquitoes are such swift breeders that tiny pools collecting in empty cans or in the rain gutters if the spouts are stopped by dead leaves, or even the water in the guestroom pitcher, if left standing too long, may raise a crop of "skeets." Kerosene rubbed on the window and door screens makes them unattractive to the little pests.

Joss sticks for the veranda certainly make us feel we are doing something to spite the mosquitoes. The less poetic and somewhat malodorous Japstick, which burns in a flower pot, does quite as much to rout the enemy.

Fussy people who couldn't afford a screened porch have been known to wear after dark a voluminous mosquito veil gathered like a motor veil round the brim of a big sombrero and falling round the feet. One such fusser I knew was a man, and he had a neat buttonholed opening to allow for the fire end of his cigar.

For mosquitoes on the ceiling have a weapon ready. To the end of a broom stick sawed off square, tack a tin cover from a baking powder tin. before going to bed fill the tin with a little kerosene, locate the "skeets" waiting to sing you to sleep, clap the kerosene cup gently over one after the other and bag them every one. Flies on the ceiling yield to the same treatment. Some say it is the fumes of kerosene, but soapy water is just as good to catch flies with. My impression is that when cupped they try to fly, strike the tin and fall in.

Traps for Mice.

The best time to provide against mice is when the house is built. Put a clause in the contract requiring that the flooring of every room shall run under the lathing to the outer wall, and that the strip of boards between the outer wall and the inner shall be coated with cement. Then watch your contractor like a lynx to see it is done. Any holes left around plumbing or any sizable cracks you can fill with cement yourself before moving in. Finding their natural runways stopped, the mice will pass your house for more convenient quarters.

Tacking tin over mouse holes is all right, but filling their holes with soap with broken needles embedded in it, as one woman says she does, really doesn't seem sportsmanlike.

Better an honest trap that guillotines the little beast on the square. The kind of trap that cages the mouse uninjured and leaves him half terrified to death all night, saves the trapper's feelings at the expense of the mouse. If a spring trap gets bent so it does not instantly stun the victim, throw it away.

Some of these are made more enticing by a wee mirror which makes the approaching victim think he sees another mouse reaching for the cheese. He snatches and is lost. Don't pin or tack the cheese in a good sized lump to the trap. You'll simply feed the mouse, not catch him. It is intended that a little soft cheese shall be crowded down into the small depression so the mouse must poke his nose under the guillotine to get it. It is said that baked potato or bacon is more attractive even than cheese.

The best remedy for mice when all's said, is to keep every edible thing, cereals and all, in glass or zinc lined receptacles like the vegetable bins. Where there is no food accessible mice will not stay.

Powder the Water Bugs.

Prompt and stringent measures will rid a house of water bugs within ten days. The powder sold to kill them must be blown with a little bellows into every crack, under and behind every drawer, on every shelf of every cupboard, and round every pipe in the rooms they have begun to infest.

Thoroughness spells success. Because a housekeeper seldom has the nerve to scatter the powder freely enough, it is better to employ a man from a firm of professional bug exterminators. Then play fair. He contracts to clear the house of water bugs and keep it clear for a year. But he stipulates that his white harmless powder be left in place for ten days. If you sweep up the powder because it doesn't look nice, of course some of the eggs will hatch in unprotected places and the man will have to come again.

Even the United States government can only tell us of one absolute preventive for moths—to put up everything eatable before the millers are flying. It is easy to make a parcel smell unattractive enough to a mother moth so that she will not try to sidle round the turnings of the wrapping to lay her eggs inside. But if once she has deposited those eggs, no cedar chest, nor cedar closet, nor tar bag, nor camphor gum will disconcert the hungry worms that hatch from them.

There is one thing which will kill the eggs themselves—benzine. Or if the benzine moistened garment is put away without too much airing, any worm which might hatch would be unable to live in the fumes. But unfortunately benzine fumes remain explosive as long as they remain confined. It is too dangerous to trust our memories not to betray us into opening those chests and bundles in the presence of live flames. Then puff! Up we go in smoke!

WHAT ARE YOU DOING TO WIN THE WAR ?

Have you ideas on food, dress, and health conservation to pass along, or ideas on money saving and money raising? This department is an exchange for the women who are helping to win the war. For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Do you need advice on questions pertaining to this important work of helping win the war. This department will advise you gladly. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address letters on this subject to Antoinette Donnelley, Chicago Tribune.

ALL NEEDS SUPPLIED.

THE "Don't Worry Parents club," after reading the following Sunny Jim letter from a son in the service to his father, might call a meeting and draft a few good resolutions, don't you think?

"Dear Dad: The money order was received O. K., but at present is riding safely on my hip still uncashed. It arrived right after pay day, so I was flush. I'll keep it hid in the old cash box for a rainy day. There is absolutely no need of your sending me money. We are as well if not better taken care of over here than back home.

"As I wrote before, the first barracks we struck on landing was a dump. We drew rations only from day to day and certainly cleaned them up. Everything in the canteen was high. But since then things have changed. We get plenty of good food, all we want, and nearly every American camp has a government commissary where we can get stuff cheaper than you do in the states. For instance, 15 cent cigarets are 8 cents. Canned pinapple or peaches (limited to one can) about 22 cents. Good candy, 50 cents a pound. So don't worry about me. I'm far from bad off.

"I've said all this and haven't even mentioned the Y. M. C. A., which is in itself positively a wonder. When you consider the difficulty they must have in securing transportation, and other hindrances in getting goods, they are remarkable. Not only eats, but entertainment and above all the spirit that goes with it. Every 'buck' sunk in a Y. M. C. A. subscription is a dollar tripled in value and spent for the material benefit of the boys. I'm for 'em strong. DON."

Busy Every Minute.

I am a girl of 12 years. I have knitted two sweaters this year and am saving every piece of flannel and cut them into squares for gun wipers. I also save all ravelings and cuttings and cut them up small to fill pillows with for the soldiers. I save all new pieces of ginghams and am making squares, then I sew them together for quilts for Belgian babies.

I have a garden and will raise all I can, can what I can, and give it to the Red Cross to be sold for the soldiers. Every minute I have to spare I put in some work. I don't care for play, as I want to see this war end, and end soon.

I also save all nice poems, jokes, and funny short stories and make scrapbooks for the soldiers. I save every penny to buy stamps and put them on all good magazines that I ask our neighbors for, to send to the soldiers. I also tell other children to help and do the same. L. P.

Little Cripple Helping.

I am a little infantile paralysis cripple. I am 10 years old, and I have been a cripple for nearly six years. I cannot go to school, but mamma teaches me.

When the war started I took what little money I had and bought a Liberty bond. With my first interest, at Christmas, I bought a Red Cross subscription. I cannot earn money as other little boys can, but with my small weekly allowance I manage to buy one Thrift stamp a week. I sell all my old papers. Papa and his friends give me all their old golf balls, and I sell them, from the front porch, to the school children for bouncing.

I am studying hard, so when the war is over I may be able to help other cripples. J. B.

Gives His Carrier Pigeons.

I am a boy 14 years old and have been reading lately of how valuable the carrier pigeons are to the government to help win the war. I have three pairs of highly bred carriers whose offspring I intend to present to the government. I have also bought $10 worth of Thrift stamps and sold $150 worth of the third Liberty loan bonds, $50 of which I bought myself. R. S.

Use for Old Stockings.

What can be done with old stockings:

Cut the worn foot from the stockings, and if the upper part be strong enough get stocking feet and sew carefully to the upper part. Care should be taken not to have the seam show above the top of the shoe.

Old stocking legs are serviceable in place of gloves in out door work. Cut the desired length of the arm, then shape the cut end as a mitten, adding the thumb, stitch with machine, and turn inside out, and you have a long, serviceable mitten.

Never waste a scrap of old stockings, but cut in strips two inches wide and six to twelve inches long, press between a 10 cent mop handle, drop oil in the rags, and you have a durable, money saving, dust mop.

Old stocking legs make useful catchalls 'n kitchens for strings, corks, rubber bands, etc. H. K.

He Studies Hard.

I am a boy 7 years old and every time I brig home my lesson with a 100 mark on it I get 25 cents for a thrift stamp. I have two and one-half books filled now, so I study hard, run errands for a few pennies, and if mother and I go to grandma's we walk and save carfare. At the same time my mother has me by the hand and I spell my words for my next day's lesson, so you see I am doing my little bit, and before I get through I want to have more stamps than any one in our room. LEARN A LITTLE AND SAVE A LITTLE EVERY DAY

By Elizabeth O. Hiller

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half pint measuring cups are the standard measuring cups used in modern cooking.

TRUE HOLLANDAISE SAUCE.

THIS is the true Hollandaise sauce and a drawn butter sauce for new beets:

Cream one-half cup of butter and all the yolks of two to four eggs, stirring and beating them in one at a time thoroughly; add one-fourth teaspoon of salt, a few grains of cayenne, and, slowly, one-half cup of boiling water, stirring constantly. Cook in a double boiler and continue stirring until mixture thickens to the consistency of boiled custard. Add one tablespoon of lemon juice and remove at once from the range.

The number of egg yolks used depends upon the consistency desired in the sauce. The water over which this sauce is cooked should remain just at the boiling point, and the vessel containing the sauce should be lifted occasionally to prevent the sauce curdling by overcooking.

Hollandaise sauce is of Dutch origin, and is one of the masterpieces of the saucier. It belongs to the class of hot sauces thickened with egg emulsion. It is properly served with boiled or baked fish, fish timbales, French artichokes, asparagus, brussels sprouts, cauliflower, etc.

Drawn butter sauce for new beets is made as follows:

Divide one-third cup of butter in equal parts, melt one part in a saucepan, add two tablespoons of flour, and stir until smooth and frothy. Cook one minute, then pour on slowly one cup of boiling water, stirring constantly until the sauce is clear. Season with one-fourth teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Keep hot over hot water, and just before serving add remaining butter in small bits, beating thoroughly between each addition. For serving with new beets add Tarragon vinegar by the tablespoonful until of the desired acidity (about two tablespoons).

Drawn butter sauce is the basis of a variety of other sauces; for instance, by the addition of one-fourth cup of capers to the plain sauce, a caper sauce, to serve with boiled mutton, is made; then by the addition of one-fourth cup of chopped cucumber pickles to two cups of drawn butter sauce a piquant cucumber sauce results, that is properly served with boiled or baked fish. The addition of two sliced, hard cooked eggs and one teaspoon of finely chopped parsley makes still another delicious egg sauce to serve with boiled fish. And so on, until several delicate pudding sauces are made, for which I shall give recipes in the future.

Orange and Pineapple Marmalade.

Pare one large, ripe pineapple; remove the "eyes" with a small utensil made for this purpose. Pick the meat in shreds from the hard core. Wash and wipe four large, heavy oranges (when heavy for their size they are rich in juice) and two lemons. Cut both oranges and lemons in quarters lengthwise, remove centers and seeds, and cut quarters in thin slices crosswise. Measure the fruit, cover with cold water, allowing three pints of water to each pint of fruit; cover and set aside over night. Turn into an enameled preserving kettle and cook until the rind of oranges and lemons is tender. Remove from range, cover and set aside for twenty-four hours. Measure and allow one pint (one pound) of sugar for each pound of cooked materials. Heat slowly to boiling point and let boil briskly until sirup thickens when tested on a chilled saucer. This does not mean that the sirup should jell, for it will not, and, too, this marmalade requires longer cooking than that made of citrus fruits alone. Store in sterilized half pint glass jars.

How to Select Pineapples.

This delicious tropical fruit is abundant in our markets during the season for it, which begins about April 1 and continues to September. There are two varieties of pineapples known to the fruiterer; they are the birdseye and the sugarloaf. The former is considered the best for serving fresh, sliced, or shredded and sugared; the latter for canning and preserving in various ways.

When buying pineapples for immediate consumption select those that have a yellowish color on the smooth surface around the "eyes," though this is not a conclusive proof of their ripeness. Neither is the ease with which the leaves may be pulled from the "crown." If, however, any of them proves green, set them aside in a cool, dry place for a few days; they are not likely to spoil and will soon mellow.

No pineapple should be eaten unless it is fully ripe, as the unripe juice contains caustic properties that are liable to irritate the coating of the stomach. The average weight of good pineapples is from two to five pounds; less than two pounds the fruit would be undeveloped and unfit for use.

Iced Coffee au Lait.

This is another recipe for iced coffee that will not only read better, but will taste much better with the Camp Logan sandwiches, and really a beverage that the boys could easily prepare; even if it were not iced it would combine better with the flavor of the filling used in the Camp Logan sandwiches.

The recipe given in the issue of June 16 will prove a pleasing beverage for a light luncheon to serve at "thimble parties," where sewing is done for war relief. Served with buttered biscuit or a cut of rhubarb shortcake (the latter is delicious and costs but little) will prove satisfactory. A charge of 15 cents for these refreshments will contribute a neat little sum for promoting this work.

Mix one cup of freshly ground coffee with one tablespoon of the white of one egg and one-half cup of cold water. Then turn the mixture into a scalded coffee pot. Add three cups of boiling water and bring to the boiling point; let boil five minutes. Remove to back of range, pour off one cup to clear the spout of grounds, return to pot, add one-half cup of cold water, stir down, and let stand ten minutes. When removing the pot of coffee to back of range scald three cups of milk in a double boiler; when it bubbles around the edge of boiler and a thin scum forms on top, strain the hot coffee into the milk and mix thoroughly. When cool turn into bottles with patent stoppers and chill on ice.

Scalloped Rhubarb with Meringue.

If the rhubarb is pink, young, and tender do not remove the peel. If older, peel and cut into one-half inch pieces. Butter a baking dish and arrange first a thin layer of stale sponge cake (fresh cake may be used or lady fingers), then a layer of rhubarb, a sprinkle of sugar, grated orange peel, and a few grains of salt. Repeat until the dish is filled. For one pound of rhubarb allow from one cup to a cup and a half of sugar, according to the age and acidity of the rhubarb. Cover the dish and bake in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes. Spread with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs, beaten until stiff, and two tablespoons of sugar added gradually while beating constantly. Return to the oven and continue cooking twelve minutes. Brown the meringue the last three minutes of cooking.

Strawberry and Pineapple Preserve.

Strawberries to weigh three pounds, one large or two small pineapples, two cups of water, and four pounds of sugar. Remove the rind from the pineapples. Cut pulp in thin shreds, weigh pulp; there should be one pound. Place in preserving kettle, add water, and boil gently twenty minutes. Wash strawberries, if sandy; if not, brush them, pick over carefully, and remove hulls. Weigh; there should be three pounds. Weigh sugar and add to pineapple, stir until sugar is dissolved, heat to boiling point, then add berries. Cook slowly thirty minutes; skim and drain fruit from sirup. Boil sirup twenty-five minutes or until sirup is reduced somewhat. Add fruit, heat to boiling point, then turn into serilized glass fruit jars, seal, label jars, and, when cold, store.

Orange and Rhubarb Marmalade.

Remove the peel from eight selected oranges, in quarters. Cook the peel in boiling water to cover until soft. Drain and remove every particle of the white portion, using a teaspoon for this purpose. Cut the thin rind in shreds crosswise, laying two or three pieces one above the other. Divide the oranges in sections, remove the seeds and white tough portion, slice thinly crosswise, saving all the juice. Put into a preserving kettle, add five pounds of rhubarb, washed, wiped, peeled, and cut in one-half inch pieces crosswise. Bring to boiling point and boil one-half hour. Then add gradually four pounds of sugar previously warmed in the oven and the shredded orange rind. Simmer slowly two hours. Turn into jelly glasses; when cool cover with paraffin covers and store.

Kaffir Corn Meal and Buckwheat Griddle Cakes.

One cup of Kaffir corn meal, one cup of buckwheat, three-quarters teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of sugar, two cups of buttermilk, three-quarters teaspoon of soda, two tablespoons of sausage fat, and one egg. Sift together cornmeal, buckwheat, salt, and sugar. Add gradually one and one-half cups of buttermilk, stirring constantly. Dissolve soda in remaining half cup of milk, add to mixture, add fat and egg beaten until thick, and lemon tinted. Beat batter two minutes. Cook as griddle cakes. This combination makes a most delicious griddle cake, delicate in texture, and yet satisfying.

Asparagus in Crusts.

Follow recipe for boiled asparagus, cutting stalks in one inch pieces. Reheat in cream sauce, allowing one cup of sauce to each bunch of asparagus. Remove centers from small, stale rolls, fry shells in deep hot fat. Drain. Fill shells with asparagus mixture and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Drawn Butter.

Melt two and one-half tablespoons of butter or substitute in a saucepan, add three tablespoons of flour, mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Cook until smooth and well blended, while stirring constantly; pour on gradually one and one-half cups of boiling water; continue stirring until mixture is smooth and almost transparent. Remove to side of range and beat in three tablespoons of butter or substitute, adding it in tiny bits. For serving with beets, add one tablespoon of sugar and two tablespoons of Tarragon vinegar. More vinegar may be added if desired. Reheat prepared beets in this sauce.

Pot Roast with Noodles.

Buy four pounds or more of beef cut from the lower part of the round or top of shin. Wipe with a wet cloth; rub over with salt, sprinkle with black pepper, and dredge with flour. Brown richly in some of the fat tried out in an iron skillet, turning often until evenly browned. Place in a Dutch oven. Add one-half cup of hot water, cover and cook slowly four hours in the oven; add water as needed. Turn meat several times while cooking. When done remove to a hot serving platter. Surround with noodles, boiled 20 minutes in salted water, then drained thoroughly. Sprinkle noodles with finely chopped parsley. Make a brown gravy of liquor in pot. Serve in a sauce boat.

Sauce Poulette.

Scald one-half cup of milk or cream in a double boiler. Melt one and one-half tablespoons of butter or substitute in a saucepan, add two and one-fourth tablespoons of flour, mix with one-fourth teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper, stir until well blended, then gradually add hot cream or milk, stirring constantly until smooth. Remove from the range and add the yolk of one egg slightly beaten. Use as the basis of croquettes and cutlets.

Varied Activities of Women

The success obtained in handling all marital difficulties in Brooklyn since Miss Helen P. McCormick was appointed assistant district attorney, has surprised legal circles in that city.

A number of expert French girl munition workers have been brought to this country to instruct both men and women in the munition plants how to load powder into bags.

The American medical forces abroad will soon be augmented by approximately fifty women physicians, who will take over the fight against tuberculosis among the troops.

Six women farm labor specialists have been appointed by the New York food commission and they will assume charge of the six districts into which the state has been divided.

The leadership of fifty women's organizations in New York with a combined membership of 30,000 in launching an attack against German language newspapers has been followed by similar action on the part of women's clubs throughout the entire country.

New, Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of Delatone for removing hair or fuzz from face, neck, or arms. A paste is made with some powdered Delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed, and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine Delatone.

I Don't Want To Be Ugly When I Grow Up

Keep Your Girl Outdoors; Let Her Romp and Run and Be as Tomboyish as She Can Be.

By Antoinette Donnelly

LAST Sunday I told how important it was in the making of a beautiful woman to begin with the babe in arms. So much of physical unfitness and consequent unattractiveness in grownups may be laid at the door of a careless, an ignorant, or a thoughtless parent and the first birthdays of the child.

I believe firmly that every normal girl baby can be raised to beautiful womanhood if the mother carries that thought sufficiently to apply practical, intelligent, and good common sensible ideas in the bringing up of the child.

A mother need not worry that she will plant seeds of vanity by insisting upon her child realizing at an early age the value of cleanliness, and sitting properly, and walking properly, and so on. If the mother has sense enough to make a child realize the importance of these beauty and health assets she will have sense enough to pilot that child safely past the danger signs of a foolish vanity.

After all, a mother is only playing the old game of administering the sugar coating to the pill when she urges a child for the sake of beauty to brush her teeth and walk with her toes turned other than in, for neglected teeth have a train of ills following that will destroy the health of a strong grown person and bad walking and ill fitting shoes will cause nearly as much trouble.

This being children's year by virtue of the national campaign to save babies and to enlighten parents as to the needs and rights of the children born to them, it is up to every mother to think a bit on how she is raising her child from a health standpoint. If the health standard is adopted by the mother, as I said before, she will be contributing quite as conscientiously to the beauty standard, or vice versa. For after all beauty is nothing if it is not good skin, good straight carriage, good teeth, good hair, good blood, good eyes, and these you know perfectly spell health in capital letters.

Now, parents are inclined after they get a child over the infant stage—say to 3 years—to just let her begin to grow willy-nilly. But there really is not any year in a child's life when the principles of health and beauty can be neglected.

Too much can never be said about teaching the small child to look upon the tooth brush as a friend to be courted and pampered with attention. Many parents do not realize that the first little teeth must be kept clean just as the later ones should be. Also, the importance of children's gums being strengthened by chewing daily some hard foodstuffs, and teeth kept clean from the germs left by food particles and candy that cling to the enamel.

As to the shape of the child's teeth—that is something for which the parent may be held responsible, for if the mother will watch the progress in her youngster's mouth when the permanent teeth begin to come in she can have troubles rectified at that psychological time by the dentist. Crooked teeth are a quite familiar sight, and most of these troubles could have been avoided if the first teeth had been removed to make way for the permanent teeth forcing their way through and being thrown out of shape in the effort. It's so worth while in a grownup to have good even white teeth that the expense of dentist advice where there is doubt ought not to be considered.

A habit, the evil effects of which mothers are ignorant, is when a child has a tootache to apply a hot cloth to stop the pain. Jaw dislocations have resulted from this habit, the bone of a young child being easily susceptible to such influence.

Adenoids and diseased tonsils have disastrous effects on the looks and health. And it is a simple matter to have these troublemakers removed in the earlier years.

Eyestrain is a habit common to the growing girl. She gets so interested in her books or her doll clothes that unless watched she keeps at it into the fading light with disastrous results. So, keep a lookout for this if you want her as a grownup girl to have lovely eyes.

The vital need of childhood is fresh air and still more fresh air. Keep your girl outdoors as much as you can. Let her romp and run and be as tomboyish as she can be. She'll make a better woman than the child who stays indoors reading and sewing or just lolling about. Keep the windows wide open when she sleeps.

Teach her to swim. Swimming is a wonderful developer and an excellent way to absorb fresh air into the lungs. Any outdoor fun that offers your little girl let her have. Let her have dancing lessons, if you can afford it! They teach her grace and an assurance that spells poise in later years. And poise is a lovely attribute in woman!

Food for the growing child is as important as fresh air. The diet should be well balanced and wholesome, with regular time for meals. Even in wartime the child must not be deprived of her regular allowance of food. There are superfluous things she can go without, but a certain amount of sugar is necessary to a child. A generous amount of milk must be included in her diet. If possible provide a quart of milk a day for each child. Plenty of bread and butter or other fats and cereals for the growing boys and girls. They burn up a vast amount of fuel.

Personal cleanliness ought to be a religion instilled into children from the first days. Teach them the daily bath and make them practice it. Teach them pride in keeping their finger nails clean and shapely. (Which, by the way, is a most effective remedy for nail biting.) Teach them cleanliness about their underclothes that they may add to their attractiveness as dainty women, than which nothing nicer may be said of one of our sex.

There never was a time when play was more needed. We have come to realize this with regard to our soldiers, so that we are no longer astounded when men who are in one hour being taught the grim intricacies of a bayonet charge are in the next relaxed mentally and physically by a lively two-step or a cheerful "movie."

Children must play, if they are to be normal, healthy children. The object of the second drive of the Children's year is to see that war conditions, which bring overstimulation to the nerves and the imagination of the sensitive child and often a decline of parental supervision, are so ameliorated and counterbalanced by wholesome, well directed recreation that there will be no decline in the health and the discipline of children.

In Paris there is a story teller who goes about spinning his wonderful yarns in the cellars to which women and children have fled during the air raids. The children crowd about him, forgetful of the terror outside. The world of imagination into which he leads them takes them completely away from the fearfulness about them.

This is a time when we, too, must build up a beautiful world about our children. Interest must at this time be stimulated in playgrounds, in vacation schools, in sports, athletics and drama, in community singing and folk dancing—in all wholesome, decent play.

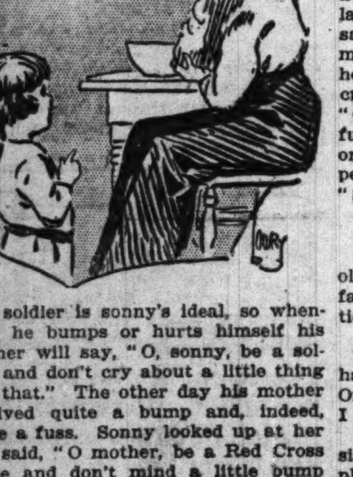
Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 in thrift stamps for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunt Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.



A soldier is sonny's ideal, so whenever he bumps or hurts himself his mother will say, "O, sonny, be a soldier and don't cry about a little thing like that." The other day his mother received quite a bump and, indeed, made a fuss. Sonny looked up at her and said, "O mother, be a Red Cross nurse and don't mind a little bump like that." E. N. C.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

RIGHT WAY THE HARD WAY.

EVERY once in a while the business girl is called upon to decide between her loyalty to her firm and her sympathy toward an individual member. And it is not always an easy matter to decide, as in the case of the writer of the following letter, whose problem, to herself at least, is real and engrossing:

"Dear Miss King: I'm in a quandary, and it may be that just a word from another will set me right. I've worked for eight years, and seven of those years were spent in drudgery and misery.

"I was one of a number of stenographers and typists who worked for a large mercantile house. I worked in the general office and under the eyes of an overseer from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 in the evening. We were not permitted to be idle for one minute during the working hours, and there were so many rules and regulations to abide by that we (all the girls in the general office) never spoke of the firm except as 'the jail.'

"I dreaded having to look for another situation, and so, hating it more all the time, I stayed on for years. There were a few good positions in the house, as private stenographer to the several members of the firm, but as the same set of girls had held these positions since before I started with the firm I had little hope of advancing from where I was. After seven years, though, my chance came, and I made the most of it.

"The secretary to the general manager left to be married, and as I had taken his work on the few occasions when she had been absent he chose me to take her place.

"The new job was a revelation. I had a little office all to myself just outside the manager's office, and instead of being looked upon and feeling like an automaton wound up to grind out so much work per day I found myself a person of consequence, treated by every one with consideration and respect.

"As for my boss, I have yet to meet a man with a kinder or more pleasant personality. He would arrange his work and mine so that occasionally I could leave an hour earlier than the others. And every once in a while he would insist on my taking an afternoon off. There were many privileges which he allowed me, but it was his serene disposition and his courteous manner toward me which made me his friend and champion.

"He had a guileless countenance, and I would have trusted him implicitly, but six months after I began to work for him a suspicion as to his honesty toward the firm took hold of me, and to my horror and disillusionment my suspicions were soon turned into absolute knowledge. He is fleecing his firm, and I have positive proofs in my possession of his dishonesty.

"It is a month now since I have been fully aware of this situation, but I cannot bring myself to expose him. I have given the best years of my life to a weary drudgery for this firm, and now at last, when I am earning a decent salary and living a comfortable life, I find myself on the verge of betraying a man who has been kind and just to me. Do you think it would be all right to let things go on as they are and say nothing? Or do you believe it would be dishonest for me not to let the president of the firm know?

Under the circumstances, your undivided loyalty is due absolutely to your firm. I can understand how easily your natural sympathy clings to this man, but when the matter is of such serious character as you describe there can be no question as to your duty. Be sure your proofs are in order, then take the matter up with the head of the firm. Under no circumstances would it be right or just for you to shield a man you know to be a thief.

CAMP STORIES CONTEST.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Ordering a Charge.

It was at the second engineer officers' camp at Fort Leavenworth that a maneuver was being played out on the hills south of the fort. The Kansas Reds and Missouri Whites were at war. The First company was attacking the trenches held by other companies, and the company commanders for the day were each doing their best to put into practice what they had been taught in the art of mimic warfare.

Three platoons were advancing under a simulated fire by rushes and were forced to halt until the opposing fire had been beaten down by the other side. A captain had sent his company into a hard place to hold and the major rode upon his horse and ordered the captain to get his men forward. The captain was simulating battle conditions by lighting a cigaret and gave the order this wise:

"Come on, fellows, let's go," whereupon the major, taking a firm hold on the saddle to keep from falling off his horse, admonished the captain in these few and pointed remarks: "Where did you ever hear a military command like that?" R. H. B.

Given Fair Warning.

A rookie who was on guard duty for the first time saw somebody approaching in the dark, and succeeded in getting out his first command, "Halt, who goes there?" Not receiving any reply to this he shouted in his excitement, "Halt, I got bullets." I. Z.

From the Same State.

A friend of mine, a lieutenant in the aviation and a decided blond, was in a quartermaster's salesroom in a town near which his school is located. Some one asked him what state he was from; he told them Georgia, when a Negro stevedore stepped up, saluted, and said: "Excuse me, lieutenant, but I'se another niggah from Gawgia." A. L.

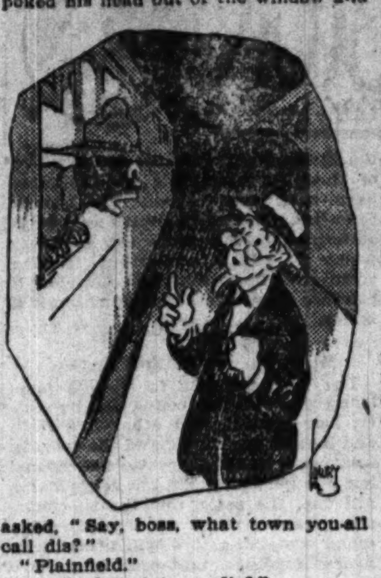
The Army Life.

An Indian who had enlisted was on a furlough. Some one asked him how he liked the army life. He replied, "Too much salute, not enough shoot." E. E.

On the Way.

As the troop train halted, a negro poked his head out of the window and asked, "Say, boss, what town you-all call dis?"



"Plainfield."

"And what state am dis?"

"New Jersey—Plainfield, N. J."

"Well, well, Ah done been travelin' on dis yere train fo' foah days an' foah nights; where de debil am dis yere France anyway?" G. A.

More than Nervous.

One of the captains in camp was coming home late one night when he was stopped by a green rooky who had not been on sentinel duty before and was more than nervous. He at last found courage to command in a weak voice, "Halt." Not knowing what to say next he asked in a weaker voice than before, "Who am I?" C. V.

Homesick.

A Great Lake sailor tells this story on a companion who was young and homesick:

The older boy was trying to cheer the young one, and said: "I can sympathize with you, lad, for I know what it is to be lonely.

"I don't want sympathy," sobbed the boy, "I—I want my mother." L. K.

Physically Fit.

A certain lad, after being drafted into service, went to the headquarters and explained that he thought he ought to be exempt because his teeth were in bad condition. He was sent to the camp dentist and they extracted all the decayed teeth and then told him to go back to his barracks, as he now was physically fit. L. S. K.

Belonged to the Lodge.

A young man from our town who is in a southern camp was tired at the close of the first day, and glad to go to bed. Early the next morning some one put his head inside the door and called: "Any K. P. here?" Our young soldier sings out, "Yes," and out he scrambles. You see he belonged to the K. P. lodge at home and if that order had anything to offer he wanted to take advantage of it, even if he did lose some sleep. You can imagine his feelings when he found out what K. P. means in camp life. He peeled potatoes most of that day. C. L.

Not to Be Slighted.

A chaplain on making his rounds in the base hospital of a large cantonment stopped at the cot of a darky and said: "Sam, how is it that you are in bed today? You were quite well when I spoke to you yesterday."

The darky replied: "Well, pahson, ah do'n was kicked by a mule."

"What in the name of goodness did he kick you for?"

"Ah guess ah don fo'got to salute." E. A. H.

The Last Word.

In one camp there is a boy who always must have the last word in argument. One day while drilling he was kicking his horse to make him keep up. His captain told him to stop spurring him. He said he had no spurs on. He was told to stop talking, but he only answered: "Well, I thought I would tell you." M. E. T.

When He'd Keep Up.

A group of soldiers on the way overseas were discussing the way they would charge. A chunky boy in the group said: "If I could keep up with the rest I would gladly charge." "Never mind," said a comrade, "you can keep up when we start on a retreat." C. M.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

J. F.: Usually a man precedes his feminine companion down the theater aisle, stepping aside when he reaches their row to let her be seated first. In leaving the theater he may go ahead to lead the way through the crowd, or allow her to walk in front. He must decide which will assure her the least difficulty.

H. L. B.: People err who congratulate a bride or newly engaged girl. The accepted greeting is to wish her joy, while congratulations are extended only to the man in the case.

* *

D. V. K.: There seems to be an almost universal prejudice against the use of knives for cutting salads, and as a matter of fact a fork is exactly as serviceable when lettuce, cucumbers, tomatoes, and the like are concerned.

* *

L. B. R.: The brides of today have practically abandoned the custom of wearing gloves with their wedding gowns, especially with those with long sleeves. If, however, you prefer to follow the old fashion, it is permissible to keep them on during the ceremony and remove them for the reception. But in the case of the bridegroom, the rules are more stringent. White gloves are really a part of a man's evening clothes and he must stick to them (or they to him!) until the last ... of formality has sounded. Of course if he is in uniform this does not hold true. White kid gloves and service uniforms are not compatible, and in wartime Uncle Sam banishes any of the latter kind.

MRS. M. S.: It is only courteous for children to rise when older people enter the room. Mothers are often criticized for laxity if their small sons and daughters are not taught this at an early age.

* *

IGNORANT: Wedding announcements are sent to both husband and wife, even if only one of them is known to the bride or bridegroom. The outer and inner envelopes should always be addressed to both. The inner one should have no street address, only the names of the recipients. Questions about the legalities connected with obtaining a marriage license do not come in my department. I should advise you to consult some municipal authority about the matter.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Considerable Capacity.

While riding on the "L" with my little brother one evening an immensely fat man sat down across from us. My brother eyed him curiously for a few moments before he said: "Gee, sis, I bet that man's stomach holds ten times as much as mine." Of course, every one turned around and stared, and the minutes seemed like hours before I could hop out at the next station.

Out for a Walk.

Having met a young man in our neighborhood, he called one evening for my brother, and, finding him out, asked me if I cared to go for a walk. As we were passing a house I noticed a huge woman seated out in the yard in a rocker. He spoke to her as we passed. When out of hearing I smartly remarked: "Who was the baby hippo?" You can imagine my chagrin when he calmly replied: "My mother."

Reduced for Clearance.

The other day I laughingly told one of my friends how I had received a piece of silver for a wedding gift, and then a few weeks later got the bill for it. My friend smiled widely and said the same thing had happened to her. I asked her who had been the donor, and with blushing honesty she said that I was the culprit. Imagine my embarrassment when I remembered I had bought her gift at a June sale, and the bill, of course, must have had the discount marked on it.
F. B.

Lost and Found.

I once lost a pair of gloves on an "L" train. The next day a woman whom I had seen on the train many times told me she had found my gloves and turned them in at the terminal. That evening I went for them. Inclosed was the finder's card and she had mended the gloves. Now I mend them before I lose them.

Singing in a Large Voice.

My nearsightedness caused me the most embarrassing moment of my life. It happened at a party. A large woman was singing in a large voice. I did not recognize her as the wife of an acquaintance, and when he whispered to me, "Don't you think my wife has a fine voice?" I replied, "Be sure and get her to sing as soon as this awful woman is done howling."

The Man from Home.

We were at the world's fair in Brussels some years ago, on the opening day. Things were still in a more or less unfinished state of confusion, and it was especially difficult to find the main entrance to the grounds, where we were to meet friends.

Several languages go in Belgium, and generally French gets one through; but this day we seemed unfortunate, as those to whom we addressed the inquiry, "A l'entrée?" merely shook their heads, whether in ignorance of our meaning or of the location, we could not tell. Then my husband tried a promising looking pedestrian with the same question couched in the best German, but with no result save the usual shake of the head.

Finally the slangy young "flapper" of the party walked up to a prosperous and amiable looking man in a silk hat, calling over her shoulder to us in a voice which she took no pains to lower, "I'm going to try this gink that looks like Lord Chesterfield or a tailor's dummy." Then to the man, in her best copy book French, she said, "Monsieur, s'il vous plait, ou est l'entrée?" What was her [and our] chagrin on receiving the reply in perfectly good American, "I dunno, search me!"

It had never dawned on us to try our own language—I think we would have given Sanskrit a trial before that!

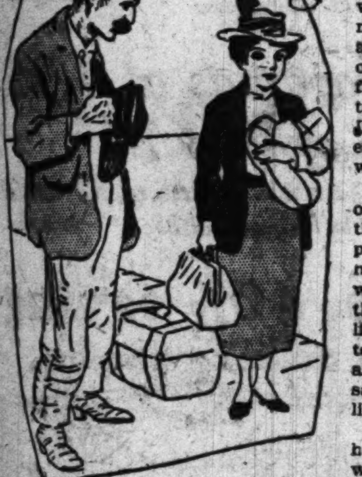
REAL LOVE STORIES

DICK'S WIFE.

Dick and Joe were bachelors and neighbors on Wyoming ranches. They had fine land and were both prospering, but often got lonesome and wished for a companion. But girls were few in this country, so Joe started to correspond (through a matrimonial paper) with a young widow.



Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

Dick was a nice, sober boy, but Joe often went to town and got drunk. The day was set for the widow to come out west, and Joe was to meet her at the nearest station. Dick went with him, and as they were several hours ahead of train time there was plenty of time for Joe to take a drink. When the train did arrive he was asleep—drunk! Dick went to the depot, and, sure enough, a pretty little woman was waiting there.

Dick says he fell in love with her at once. He asked if he could do anything for her, told her as gently as possible about Joe, and offered to take her to the nearest neighbor, as there was no accommodation for a woman at the station. She accepted because she liked him, but told him she didn't care to meet Joe. On the way Dick told her all about his place and his stock and said that all he wished for was a nice little woman like her.

Well, it was all settled, and he turned her over to a motherly old neighbor woman. One week afterward all the ranchers and cowboys from far and near were invited to Dick's wedding. They are happy, and she has often told me that her luckiest day was when she met her husband.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

Children Need Clothes.

"Through your readers I thought I might be able to get a few clothes for the children. As my husband is at the front, it is awful hard for me to make ends meet. The children's ages are 16, 11, 4, and they are girls. A. H."

Surely an appeal from a soldier's family will meet with ready response, and I hope to have many requests for the name.

Wheel Would Help.

"Seeing all the good the exchange is doing, I wonder if it could help me. I am a girl 18 years old, but small because ten years ago I had a paralitic stroke or infantile paralysis, and now I have a double curve of the spine and have been wearing plaster casts for five or six years. As walking is hard for me with my cast on (I cannot take it off at all), I wonder if any one has a discarded bicycle they do not use.

"Walking is hard on my hips and makes them sore at times. We have a mile to go to the stores and the doctor said it would do me good, as it puts my legs in motion and yet doesn't hurt.

"I can ride a boy's or a girl's wheel if I could only get one.

Wants Doll Buggy.

"Would you please ask if I may have a doll's buggy as I know of a little girls who wants one badly. Her folks cannot afford to buy her one. C. P."

I hope this toy will be found for the little girl. I shall be pleased to send the address of the friend who writes in her behalf.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

To Finish a Quilt.

"I read in your column that a woman would be glad to give a bag of silks and velvet to some one. I am making a quilt but will have to go slowly, as I have not enough pieces to make more than a little at a time. If you will be so kind as to send me her address—that is, unless some one has already taken it—you will be doing me a favor, for this quilt is for the comfort of a soldier in the hospital.
"MARGARET B."

The pieces offered have been given away. By sending silk and velvet pieces to Margaret you can feel that you have a share in providing comfort to some soldier in a hospital.

Softening Rabbit Skins.

"We have saved quite a few rabbit skins and were told to soak them in alum water. We did so, and it was successful as far as the hairs are concerned, but they are stiff. Do you, or some of your readers, know a way to soften them?
N. M."

Can any one give Mrs. M. a suggestion as to what to do? If so, I am holding her address.

Books on Salesmanship.

"I am a young man, 28 years old, married, and have two children. About ten months ago I lost my right arm and it makes it hard for me to earn a living. The only thing I can do now for a living is to sell something, but I need training in salesmanship. I would esteem it a big favor is a salesman could loan me books on salesmanship, for I cannot buy them, and I assure him they will be returned in as good a condition as I received them.
"J. I. B."

To the reader owning such books and willing to loan to J. T. B., I will be pleased to furnish the address.

Summer Small-Talk of the Theaters

A. H. WOODS' reserves will occupy "Friendly Enemies" tonight and thereafter, to enable Messrs. Mann and Bernard and their associates of the first company to return to Blighty. Al Shean and Gus Weinberg will have the rôles impersonated by Messrs. Bernard and Mann; Alen Hale will act in the place of Felix Krembs, who was admirably the elegant spy; Orris Holland will appear as Billy, the soldier boy imperiled by German explosives; Miss Pam Browning will ascend from the rôle of the maid to that of the heroine, and Mme. Burmeister, who succeeded Mme. Cotrelly several weeks ago as the quizzical housewife, will remain in that station.

"Friendly Enemies" bids fare to put in Mr. Woods' money chests more of the public's beauteous roleaus than any other show that has entered his shrewd harbor. A casual audit of the box office statements last week proved to this correspondent that the president's favorite drama is fiscally of greater import than "The Music Master" or any of the Potash and Perlmutter series, all of which were good at getting the money.

Miss Marjorie Rambeau is now practicing for her first performance in "Where Poppies Bloom"—evidently a new over-there drama, announced previously under another name. Miss Alma Tell is succeeding Miss Rambeau in "Eyes of Youth" for a while.

Hale Hamilton, farceur of the genial and husky type, renounces an opportunity to return from the nickel shows via George Broadhurst's "She Walked in Her Sleep," for which he was engaged. A film firm offers him $200,000 for three years' photographs, and he pleads with Mr. Broadhurst to release him. "It is more money," he writes to the manager, "than I can make in a lifetime on the stage."

"The Riddle Woman" is the topic of a play by which Miss Bertha Kalich hopes to rejoin the drama next season. It is a German work by Carl Jacoby, made over for allied use by Miss Dorothy Donnelly and Miss Charlotte Wells.

The songstress, Marguerite Sylva, who has been pecking at the gates of grand opera for several years, proposes to act this fall in a regular play, showing up the musical life. The author is Lillian Trimble Bradley.

William Faversham will plunge next season with the product of Amelie Rives, the Princess Pierre Troubetskoy, and her collaborator, the prince. He will play Miles Hendon in their dramatization of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," and he will produce their new comedy, "Allegiance." Miss Blanche Yurka, Harrison Hunter, Frederick Truesdell, and Herbert Belmore are in the cast of "Allegiance."

When Miss Hazel Dawn discards the nickel shows next month to appear in person in "Dolly of the Follies" she will have some of A. H. Woods' most costly performers as her accessories. On the list are John Mason, Walter Jones, Harry Tighe, Homer Mason, Marguerite Keeler, Maude Eburne, and Thamara Swirska—the orthography of whose nomenclature suggests that she dances in her bare feet.

William Rock and Frances White, the sudden star discovered by Mr. Rock in a frontier cabaret, are going to work next season for Messrs Elliott, Comstock, and Gest. They will have a musical play by Messrs. Bolton, Wodehouse and Kern, who wrote "Oh, Boy" and "Leave It To Jane."

Eight American plays are visible in London—more than there are in Chicago. "Very Good Eddie," "Nothing but the Truth," "The Lilac Domino," "The Naughty Wife," "Going Up," "Baby Mine," "The Knife," and "Fair and Warmer" are successful there.

A novel named "Enchanted Hearts" has been dramatized for Robert Hilliard and rechristened "A Prince There Was." It is said to be of the sweet sort, something like "The Littlest Girl," and its players will include "Bonnie Marie," the small wonder-child, who appeared last season with Chauncey Olcott.

Miss Laura Cowie, who was Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson's leading woman during his Blackstone theater engagements, was married last week to Lieut. J. Hastings Turner, who wrote plays before he went to war.

Vaudeville criticism of a high class is found in the instructions issued by the Over There Theater league to the players about to embark for the battleground. Among the vaudeville junk barred by these regulations are the following offenses:

1. Any "Can the Kaiser," "Berlin by Christmas" stuff unless the boastfulness is redeemed by sufficient wit. The boys over there have learned a wholesome respect for "Heinie's" fighting qualities.
2. Any "fight for home and country" stuff. They are doing it. They don't want civilian advice.
3. Jokes about trench and camp life or military procedure should be pretty accurate with the facts. The boys are likely to guy any obvious mistakes.
4. Local jokes and names and allusions unless nationally known. Ninety-five out of every 100 boys were never nearer Broadway than Hoboken. Camps in their neighborhood are no criterion.
5. "Drunk" and "barroom" stuff unless of the right sort. Temperance is one of the army's big problems.
6. Any joke of even questionable taste. Performers should remember that they will not be facing an audience of men only. The front seats will be occupied by the most honored of the regimental guests—Red Cross sisters, canteen workers, and F. M. C. A. women—women of the finest type that America can produce. The officers often come, too.
7. Jokes derogatory to women. The "I'd rather go to jail than live with my wife" sort of wheeze. Absence from home has surrounded women in the boys' eyes with a sentimental halo, and this sort of thing may subtly hurt. The camps at home are no criterion either.
8. Unnecessary oaths, and particularly the use of "God." Most of the boys come from small country towns where old fashioned prejudice still prevails.

Jack Lait and Ashton Stevens, the young Chicago playwrights, are amiably at each other's throats because of Miss Bertha Mann, a Los Angeles actress. Miss Mann, leading woman of Mr. Morosco's stock company, "created" the leading rôles in Mr. Lait's "One of Us," and in Mr. Stevens' "Mary's Way Out," and so charmed both authors that each demands her presence in his drama. Mr. Morosco, who employs Miss Mann, thinks of settling the matter by assigning her to a good play by the Hattons.

Three plays of circus life are reported to be in the minds of the New York managers for next season. One of them is "Sawdust and Sentiment," by Arthur Bennett, whose S. E. P. pseudonym is L. B. Yates; and another is "Spangles," by Miss Nellie Revell, a lady press agent. Mr. Bennett's play has the strong woman for its heroine; Miss Revell's, a shapely equestrienne who promenades to and fro upon a horse's broad back. Thomas A. Wise is already performing as P. T. Barnum in Harrison Rhodes' "Mr. Barnum."

In "The Maid of the Mountains," which is to be the next big enterprise of the Elliott-Comstock-Gest affiliation, Miss Sidonie Espero will have the rôle sung by Miss Josie Collins in London. Miss Espero, unknown west of Wilkesbarre, is a part of the flotsam of Miss Alice Neilsen's recent disaster in "Kitty Darlin'." Associated with her will be John Slavin, Miss May de Sousa, George MacFarlane, Carl Gantvoort, and William Danforth.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.] — When Arthur Hopkins presents John Barrymore as a star in the fall it will be with the intention of keeping him in New York all winter, whether his first play (which probably will be Tolstoy's "The Man Who Was Dead," by the way) or even his second succeed or fail. He may use up three or four plays, in fact, but to Broadway he will stick, because it is the Hopkins idea, backed by the Barrymore ambition, that the time has arrived when young Jack should acquire a répertoire and become established as something more important than a personable juvenile with an inherited flare for acting.

To remain a full season on Broadway, or two or three seasons, for the matter of that, is becoming the star's real test of popularity. Since Laurette Taylor succeeded in playing five years as a star without once touring the back country, save in the interest of the Red Cross, they all have demanded their individual right to do the same.

When Marjorie Rambeau finishes her current season in "Eyes of Youth," which she will do within the next few weeks, she will begin at once rehearsing the new play in which she will star next season, and "Eyes of Youth" will be sent touring without her. This will mark her third season as a resident star, and she frankly insists that she does not expect to travel for some years to come. Ethel Barrymore, having been at the Empire practically all winter, is preparing to come back for another long term a year hence. Fred Stone has definitely mapped out his starring tours for the next several seasons, insisting that he play alternate full seasons in New York, and that if the first play tried doesn't carry him through that others be secured with which to fill out the time in place of taking the first one on tour. Maude Adams has long since adopted a similar policy, though she is too good a business woman to overlook $12,000 and $15,000 a week on the road for the glory of playing to $8,000 in New York.

Thus does the status of New York as the great theatrical sifter of the country become more and more definitely fixed, to the advantage of the so-called provinces. After performing with the shock troops of first-nighters in this sector for a considerable period I am now convinced the western centers have all the best of it. For them the risks of playgoing are reduced to the minimum. Nothing that is worth while fails to reach them eventually, and they miss about 89 per cent of the productions which are an irritation to the flesh and a depressor of spirits.

Before the war David Warfield had about made up his mind to go on playing "The Music Master" until the end of the chapter, which would be until he was ready to retire. Last season, however, he discovered that, while Von Barwig was still a well loved German and nowhere considered an alien enemy, at the same time there was enough feeling against his race to justify his internment for the present.

Warfield is just now seriously considering a revival of "The Return of Peter Grimm" for next season. He is not keen for new plays. He still is a comparatively young man, being but 52, but he is well off and can easily go on making a nice profit and giving a good deal of pleasure to his friends by playing the répertoire he has established. Therefore he sees no real need of the work and worry and possible disappointment attending the preparation of a new production. Max Marcin, however, has a play for him if he should change his mind. "The Flag Goes By" is the title and it tells the story of a drummer boy who grew panicky and ran away from the battle of Antietam and then lived to see his grandson reflect what he thought might be an inheritance of fear in the present crisis. There is a break of fifty-four years between the first and second acts. Warfield, however, has always been a bit afraid of army plays since his experience with "A Grand Army Man." It was for that reason he turned down "The Copperhead" last season. Whatever he may decide to do, the actor is having a good time during his deliberations. He is one of the champion pinochle players at the Lambs' club, and what he does to the lads who test their skill with him is sufficient to keep him cheered up for days at a time.

It is a long, long way from one end of this village to the other, and a long, long way, too, between intermediate stations. The roaring subways make it possible to leave Wall street and arrive at the midsection—the theatrical midsection—of Forty-second street within fifteen or twenty minutes, and it is possible to continue on from that point and reach the residential sections farther uptown in another fifteen, twenty, or thirty minutes. But it is counted anything but a pleasant journey by the native. Neither clerk nor broker, banker, merchant, nor magnate ever thinks of making it save under compulsion.

That is one reason it is difficult to defeat the theater ticket brokers in New York. The inconvenience of getting to the box offices of the theater district in the first place and of getting home from them after the purchase is made means a loss of from one to three hours out of the prospective playgoer's day. If he is able to do it he naturally had rather pay the speculators' premium and spend the time he would lose in buying big town atmosphere for the visiting tradesman he plans to entertain.

It works similarly with the family trade. Deciding midafternoon that she would like to go to the theater that night, the lady living some fifty or sixty or a hundred blocks from the theaters is easily convinced that she had really rather stay at home or go to the movies when she considers the trouble it would be to dress, ride downtown, stand in line at a box office, and then come home disappointed with the seats she was able to buy. Even if she happens to be in the city shopping she is usually blocks from the theaters and resents having to give up the time necessary to make the side trip.

So the speculators have all the better of the argument. They are laughing now at Mr. Ziegfeld's attempts to beat them by confining to the box office the sale of seats to his current "Follies" entertainment. They know the attitude of the native playgoer and of the transient, and they know the

AMONG US MORTALS

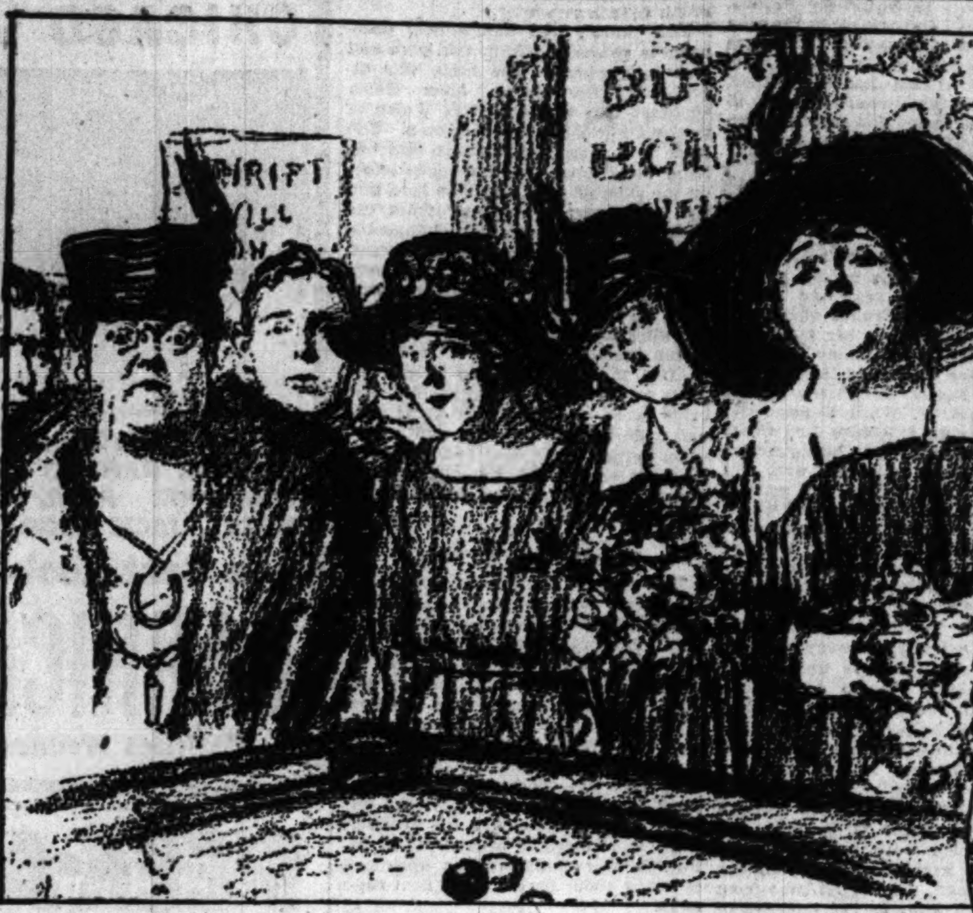
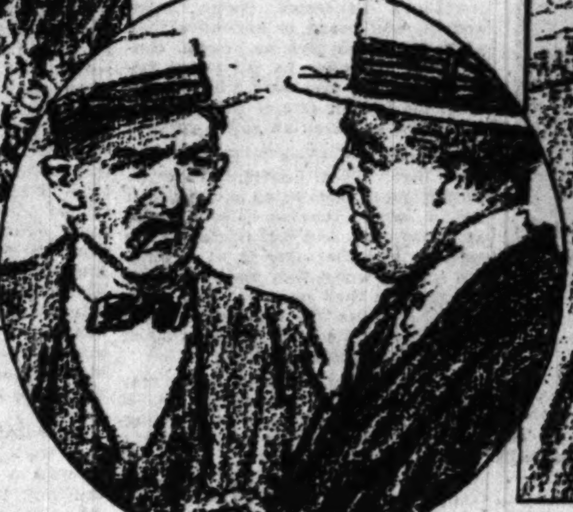
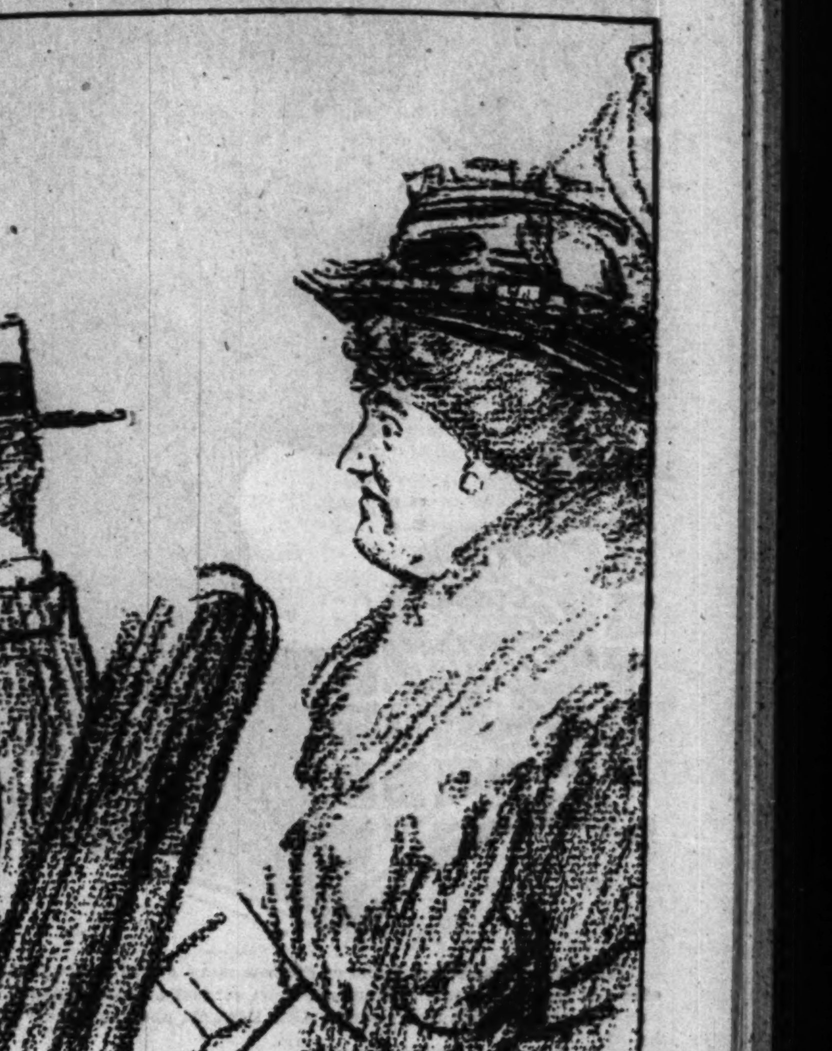
W. E. HILL



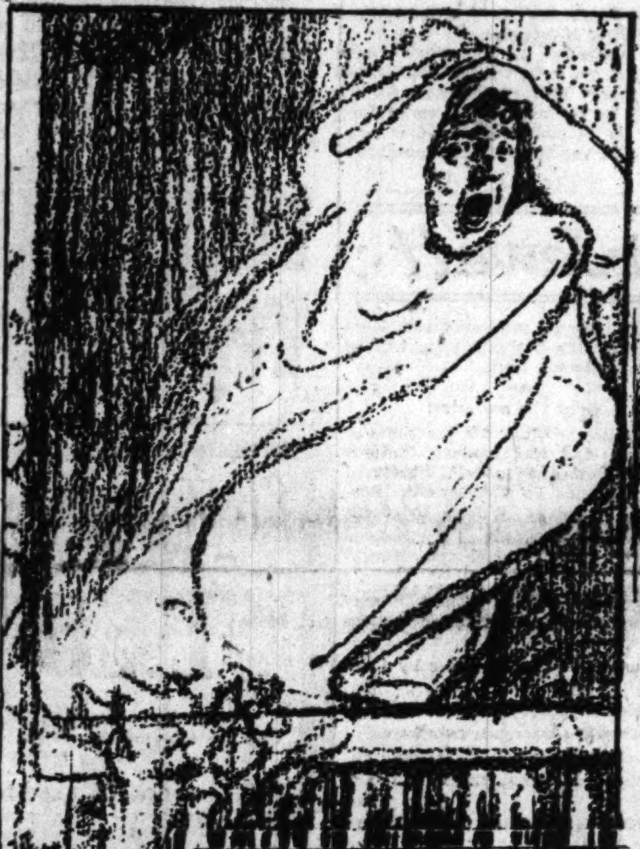
The photographer wanted to get a picture of the boys around the billiard table out at the Lakeside Service Club, but the hostesses got there first, and the boys didn t have even a look in.



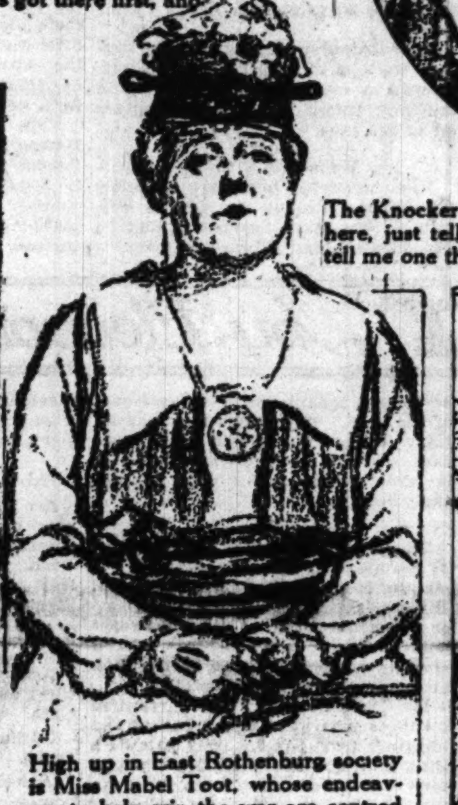
The Knocker: "Oh, they have, have they? Now lookahere, just tell me one thing the aircraft board did—just tell me one thing the shipping board did," etc., etc.



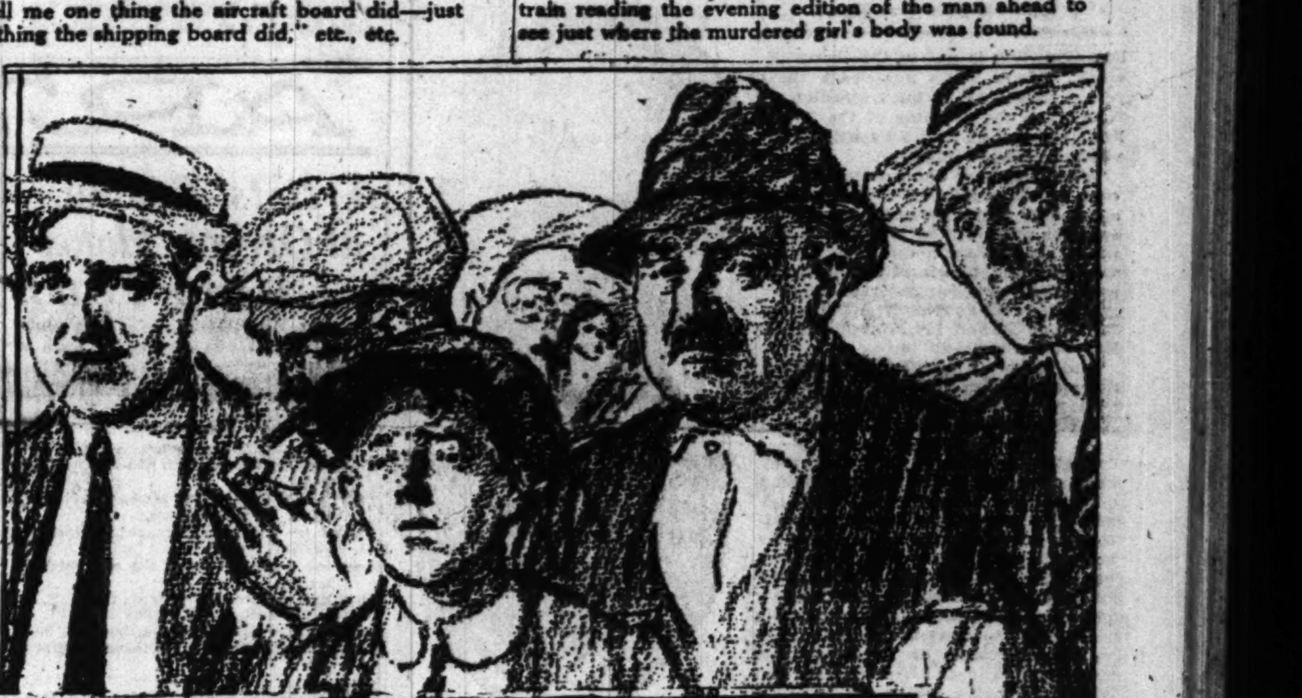
Mrs. Petty, who just can't read any more war news—it's too horrible—sitting well forward in her seat on the train reading the evening edition of the man ahead to see just where the murdered girl's body was found.



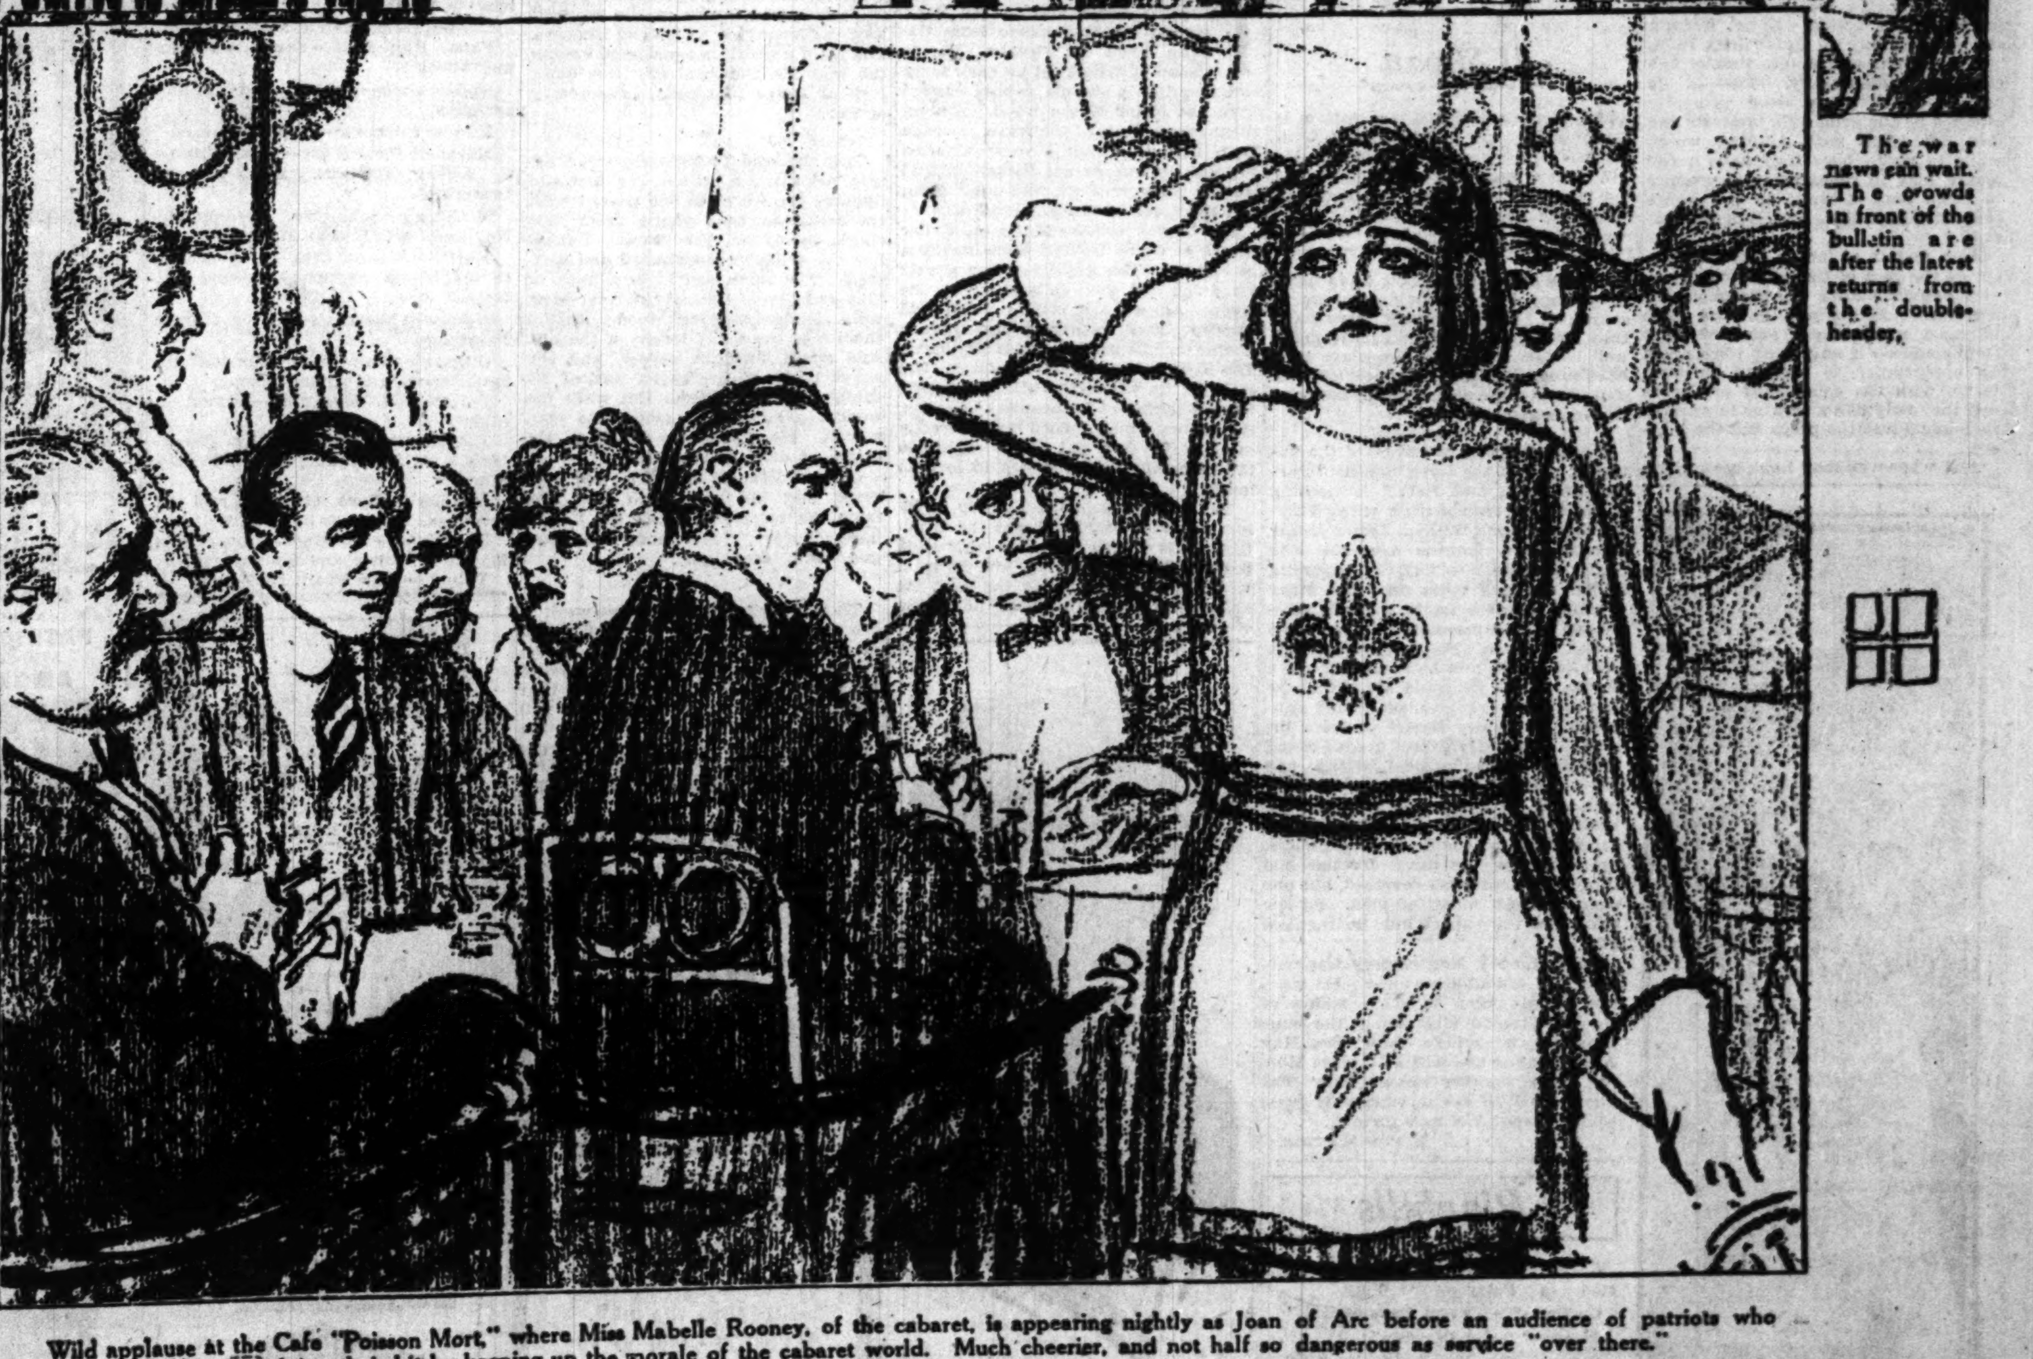
Even if it was only a bat that flew against her, you can hardly blame Aunt Hattie (fixed for the night on her sleeping porch) for being a bit nervous with all this talk about enemy air raids and such.



High up in East Rothenburg society is Miss Mabel Toot, whose endeavors to help win the war are centred in one great purpose, being a petition to change the name of East Rothenburg to East Louvain.



The war news can wait. The crowds in front of the bulletin are after the latest returns from the double-header.



Wild applause at the Cafe "Poisson Mort," where Miss Mabelle Rooney, of the cabaret, is appearing nightly as Joan of Arc before an audience of patriots who are nobly doing their bit by keeping up the morale of the cabaret world. Much cheerier, and not half so dangerous as service "over there."

box office line is not to the liking of either. From which knowledge they reason that it will be but a question of time when the business of the "Follies" will fall off and they will be invited to a peace conference.

What they have not considered, however, is the possibility that the managers may themselves establish ticket agencies outside their box offices, one in the financial section of lower Broadway, another to serve the shopping section at Thirty-fourth street, another in Harlem, and probably a fourth as far out as the One Hundred and Eightieth street district.

And this is the plan being considered at present. Hardly any of the theater managers or play producers are friendly toward the speculators. They feel that while the middle men may increase their profits slightly when they have a success, their aid is more than offset by the harm they do the business generally by discouraging the patronage of those who hate them for being the monopolists who control the best seats. If the Ziegfeld fight should indicate, by the time the new season's plays arrive in August, that the time has arrived to apply the coup de grace to the speculator, as it already has been applied in Chicago, Boston, and Philadelphia, the local managers will probably take action without waiting for an ordinance to force them to it.

The Authors and Actors theater has suspended temporarily. Two of its best one act plays were promptly grabbed by the vaudeville interests and this left them with nothing worth while to play. Now they have a full length play in rehearsal, and promise to come back a week or two hence and reëstablish their season at the Fulton.

As a matter of fact, a lack of interest on the part of the public was probably responsible for the suspension of activities. Actors and authors have indulged many day dreams of what they could do if only they were given an opportunity to compete on even terms with the established producers—if they only had a theater to work in they could find the plays and the players.

And whenever they have been given the chance they invariably have made as glaring mistakes as any group of amateurs. In the present experiment they have provided some exceptionally well chosen casts, but the plays they have presented have been decidedly ordinary and quite as bad as the commercial managers' output.

Florence Moore, erstwhile of the Varieties, now of the farce comedy "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," is nothing if not an accommodating wife. Having divorced one William James Montgomery some months ago, she was rather surprised to find him standing at her dressing room door the other evening, humble as to attitude, distressed as to expression. He had come to ask a favor. He was about to be married again, and he could not get a license unless he could show that he had been properly and legally and altogether completely separated from his former wife. His papers guaranteeing that fact he had mislaid, and he had come to the former Mrs. Montgomery to ask if he might not borrow hers. Miss Moore considered briefly and then decided that he could. True, he might not have done as much for her had their situations been reversed, but one cannot expect much of men. So she gave him the papers and he thanked her.

Last Monday Montgomery was one-fourth of a double wedding. He married Minnie Allen Wilstach, widow of the late Claxton Wilstach, at the same time that his bride's sister, Eva May Allen, became the wife of George Monroe Perry, another vaudevillian. The quartet will return to vaudeville eventually, though not as a quartet.

No Letup in War Work as Warm Weather Arrives

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]— Considerable comment was heard about Washington that Miss Margaret Wilson was not at the senate on that unforgettable Thursday ten days ago when, instead of suffrage "going over the top," it was doomed to the fiasco of another one of its "postponements." Of course, no one expected that Mrs. Wilson or Mrs. Marshall would be there, for they are both as negatively indifferent to the cause as Miss Margaret Wilson is enthusiastically for it.

Still that disappointment recovered from, Washington has had no grounds to reproach Miss Wilson for lack of interest in affairs public and national. She is energy and patriotism combined and in the celebration on the Fourth she sang beautifully in the soldiers' home grounds, lending an added touch of loyalty and devotion to a day that was really of epochmaking importance.

Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the president's handsome young kinswoman, was heard to announce that while she could give no artistic contribution and offer no particular talents, she would just work a little harder at the various bits of war work in which she is taking an active part.

For instance, there is the canteen work here. Their quarters are interesting, one of them being at the Union station, where they serve sandwiches and doughnuts and cold drinks to the soldiers, and the other is at Eckington station, where they meet the troop trains when they come in. The president has given up his special room at the station and this has been taken over by the canteen workers.

Here on a hot day Miss Bones may be seen working arduously. And if there is any hotter place in Washington on a hot day than the Union station I have yet to find it. And here, too, you can find "Bootsey" March—I should say Mrs. Joseph Swing, who lost no time after her return from her honeymoon to plunge into the canteen work here. Mrs. Giles Cook, who formerly was Miss Olive Smith, has also returned to Washington with her family—excepting her husband, who has sailed for France—and Mrs. Cook's energies have been donated to this same cause.

Await Chance in France.

There are a number of prominent Washingtonians right now who are waiting eagerly to depart for France, where they will do their bit in the way of nursing and interpreting. There are probably few girls in the country who would not go if they had the chance, but chances of this sort are not easy to secure at this time. You must be sure that you are 25 and that you have no father, nor brother, nor husband in the service, and you must be able to pay your own expenses, speak French, and be capable of performing some actual practical service.

Miss Eudora Clover has been doing work of a responsible nature at the army college for a year and she is expecting to go to France shortly in aid of war work, where her facility in French should be extremely valuable. Then there are the Misses Dorothy and Gwendolyn Denys, daughters of the Rev. and Mrs. F. Ward Denys, who have been doing extensive Red Cross work at international headquarters and are expecting to be sent over any day as Red Cross nurses and general aids. And Miss Bush Brown, whose father is a sculptor and president of the Arts club, has already left for France to do reconstruction work.

Secretary Lansing's two sisters, Miss Emma and Miss Kate Lansing, are in Paris, and we heard vivid descriptions recently of what they went through when their canteen was under bombardment. Mrs. Vincent Astor, who established a canteen over there, has some splendid helpers in Dorothy McCombs and Ethel Harriman and Katherine Rush Porter. It was Mrs. McCombs "they" say who sent back some extremely interesting letters from various places in France and England which were published in a Washington newspaper anonymously. Miss Harriman, who found time from her labors of war for the business of marrying, is nevertheless supposed to be continuing her work right ardently under the name of Mrs. Henry Potter Russell.

In Washington this summer the canteen work is to be carried on as vigorously as ever, as the incoming and outgoing troops increase in numbers all of the time.

Weds Col. Walsh.

June weddings were appropriately brought to a close in the military nuptials of Miss Mazie Porcher of Florida, daughter of Mrs. Edward Porcher, to Lieut. Col. James A. Walsh, U. S. A., at St. John's Lafayette square, last Saturday evening. The guests were entertained later at a buffet supper at Mrs. Delos A. Blodgett's, the bride's aunt, at whose home the bride spent much time last winter.

The church was handsomely decorated in palms and ferns and pink and blue hydrangeas. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Helen Blodgett, and Maj. Raycroft Walsh of the aviation corps was best man. The bride is a stunning brunette and her ivory satin gown was a cascade effect on the skirt of point applique lace, and the long court train hung from the shoulders was in rose pink changeable satin embroidered in roses and forget-me-nots. The bridesmaids' frocks were of flesh tinted satin much in the same style as the maid of honor, and they all wore hats of tulle and satin to match their gowns.

After the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip by automobile. The bride wore a smart blue serge suit and a darke blue top coat and a blue satin toque. After they had gone Mrs. Blodgett entertained the out of town guests at a dinner and dance at the Chevy Chase club.

Spend Holiday in Town.

This year the Fourth of July celebrations were confined largely to Washington. Do you remember when President Roosevelt and his family and his whole office staff would go to Oyster Bay for Independence day and President Taft always joined his family at Beverly for that occasion? But now the president is here and congress keeps up its quorum at least, and men who are working here at war work of any kind will spend the day here. Indeed, the slogan the "soldiers don't stop fighting because it is the Fourth, why should we stop working?" is heard about here a great deal these days.

The vice president and Mrs. Marshall are the exception rather than the rule now. They are leaving for their Michigan resort, where with their little ward, Ignatius Morrison, who, by the way, is growing stronger and healthier every day, they will remain for a number of weeks.

Talk continues to the effect that Newport is not to be the crowded fashionable resort of former years, for it is going to be minus a considerable number of Washingtonians who are planning on the Blue Ridge mountains instead.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Artists' Colony at Oregon Makes Gift to Town

Overhanging the river the great bluff looms,
Garbed from foot to crest in the green of trees.
Poplars stand sentinal along the bank,
And gracious willows trail their slim fingers in the ripples.
The wind flutes softly as the pipe of Pan through the branches.
Fish dart startled through the silver of the water.
Over all the brooding presence of Black Hawk, chief of Indians,
Carved in granite and rugged against the sky line, guards
Lest the perfect circle of sky and earth be broken.
It is Eagle's Nest that rises on the bluff,
Facing the west of the setting sun,
Encompassed with trees and flowering bush,
Cherishing the flame Prometheus brought to earth.

TWENTY years ago on the Rock river a short distance from the little town of Oregon, Ill., a group of artists set up their lares and penates in simple cabins carved from the heart of the wood. Among them were Ralph Clarkson, Lorado Taft, Oliver Dennet Grover, Charles Francis Browne, James Dickerson, and Horace Spencer Fisk, and near them was the home of Wallace Heckman.

The bluff overlooks Margaret Fuller island, of which we find much mention in history. The ground slopes gently for a bit and then falls sheer to the river. Across are rolling fields and wooded places, with here and there a quaint farmhouse to mark their charm. The little camp, started so simply, has retained its simplicity with the years. Now, bringing of its beauty to Oregon, the gallery which opened last Thursday in the town is a gift of the artists to the place they have grown to love so much.

The gallery is in the Library building, of which Mr. Pond was the architect. It is a long, low room with walls paneled in green burlap, and lit by a white glassed window in the roof. At either end an unfurbished half-moon of cement breaks the dead sameness of the lines. The pictures are charmingly hung, and, chosen with great care, there is no monotony of subject or color which might detract from their beauty.

The portrait sketch of Mr. Clarkson by Sorolla, bearing the inscription, "A mi querido amigo, Clarkson," is unique. It is an extremely interesting and clever characterization of this celebrated painter by an artist who is considered by some to be one of the four greatest painters in the world.

Mr. Clarkson himself is represented by three portraits. "Miss Sally," one imagines from her hat, was painted a little time ago, but it is a fresh, young face that smiles at you from under the pile of hair on which the betraying chapeau sits, and the generous years have not detracted one whit from her charm, nor burst the bubble of youth for her with their sharp claws. The portrait of Wallace Heckman was painted in the studio in the trees at Eagle's Nest. It is a splendid likeness. The third portrait is considered among the best Mr. Clarkson ever has done. It is of Judge Dickinson, ex-secretary of war.

Over the land Twilight slipped, dragging her skirts a little in the dust and lighting the world as she passed with the radiance that shone from the single jewel on her brow. Behind her the shadows lengthened and softened. The earth waited in a hush of blue and gray. Against the river bank tall, slender poplars stood. Behind them rose the rocky ledges of the hill. And again Twilight passed, and the silver lamp of the moon bathed all things in silvery magic. But while the wonder grew and vanished, one man saw it. He dipped his brush in the colors of dusk and painted.

Charles Francis Browne was the artist and his landscapes that rose from the palette of shade are "Lombardy Poplars," "A Summer Day—Oregon," and "Moonlight."

The event of importance this week in the world of art is the visit to Chicago of the French aviator-painter, Henri Farré, with his paintings and moving pictures. This is an opportunity that must not be lost. The paintings will be hung at the Art institute, and the lectures by him and Lieut. Georges Flachaire, one of the greatest aces among the French flying men, will be given in Fullerton hall.

A SUMMER SONGSTRESS

Claudia Muzio as Tosca

Miss Muzio is pictured in the part of her American debut, in November, of 1916, in the Metropolitan opera-house, where she has since been the singer of Puccini's music many times—vis-à-vis, usually, with Caruso. She will sing Tosca tonight in Ravinia Park, for the first time in this neighborhood. She has, within the week since Ravinia opened for the summer, been heard in "Aida," "Il Trovatore," and "Pagliacci," and, so far as may be judged, has made a definite personal success with the clientele of the resort. Léon Rothier, one of her associates from the Metropolitan, will be Scarpia, and Morgan Kingston, another, will sing the tenor's part.

MATTERS OF MUSIC

REASONS for going to Ravinia Park in its brief, melodious season have with reasonable frequency been the subject of print in THE TRIBUNE. Twice within recent weeks the editorial columns have conveyed admirable arguments in behalf of the resort. Ravinia is not in Chicago: license is necessary if it is to be classified as an outskirt; but the park is, in its summertime manifestations, one of Chicago's distinctive assets.

This year's inventory of inducements is longer and happier than ever before. Some of the new ones are of the casts: Miss Muzio, and Miss Braslau, and Mr. Rothier, with Miss Garrison, who is not entirely new, and is just as good as if she were. To say and repeat that they are from the Metropolitan opera-house is, of course, good commerce; but they are clever, able, attractive somebodies of their business regardless of their employment elsewhere. Lucy Gates comes later in the month—not from the Metropolitan, where, as one of the Ravinia singers explained the other night, there are more coloraturas on the pay-roll than coloratura in the entire répertoire.

Mr. Campanini has steadfastly refused to make use of Ravinia as a between-seasons annex: singers with contracts for the Auditorium must not, if they would make him glad, sing in the summer for Mr. Eckstein. That is, of course, Mr. Campanini's business; and I am not lonely in the belief that his attitude is a mercantile mistake. Thus, he is called upon, year after year, to explain that he employs this or that singer because he or she knows the répertoire, and for no other reason that be called good. He is, he says, without the time or resources to multiply rehearsals for the instruction of the young or the inexperienced. To him, crowding seventy or more performances into ten Chicago weeks, the seasoned performer, although tattered and frayed, is of greater value than fresh, young talent. Dalmores was taken back last season because he knew the routine, although his presence in the cast bore no relation to dollars in the box-office. A better tenor than Dalmores could easily acquire a respectable routine in a season like Ravinia's.

The Metropolitan management, seemingly, is of the belief that Ravinia is a good place for its singers to spend the summer. It is. Miss Muzio will, by September, have amplified her list of ready rôles. Miss Garrison, too, and Miss Braslau. Until the opening-night there, Miss Braslau had never sung the contralto's good part in "Aida"; and she sang it and acted it so well then as to be better in it than anybody who has had Amneris in the seven seasons of the Chicago Opera.

Miss Garrison came to Ravinia with a contract under which she is to sing in "The Barber of Seville" and "Lakmé," operas not in her present répertoire. When they are used in the Metropolitan, the big parts go to Frieda Hempel or Maria Barrientos. On form, Miss Garrison will be a better Lakmé and a better Rosina than either of the two other bravuras. Ravinia provides the opportunity.

Miss Muzio wishes to sing Carmen. So does Miss Braslau, also. The former will soon get the opportunity; and Miss Braslau may get it before the Ravinia season ends. Geraldine Farrar is quoted as saying that Miss Braslau is in logical succession for the rôle—succession to Miss Farrar, that is. Which is nice of her, whether or not she knows that she isn't especially good in the part.

Mr. Rothier will be none the less useful in the Metropolitan for knowing such parts as he will pick up in Ravinia. Scarpia, tonight, for example: it has always been Scotti's especial part down there; and I am without memory that anybody else ever sings it save when he is ill.

George W. Chadwick, who can safely be referred to as the dean of native composers, was represented in the programs of this year's festival at Norfolk, Conn., by a cantata for chorus and orchestra called "Land of Our Hearts," to a poem of that title by John Hall Ingham. Horatio Parker and David Stanley Smith were other native composers with new works in the festival; and two of Ravinia's singers, the Misses Garrison and Braslau, were among the soloists. A son of Mr. Chadwick is in the army; another is in the navy.

Sidonia Espera is a new name in the catalogue of sopranos: she is to have the most important rôle in the American performances of "The Maid of the Mountain," an operetta which has been running in London for a long, long time.

Harry Weisbach, Adolph Brune, and Maurice Rosenfeld are named as of the faculty of the Chicago Musical Association, a new school, "organized not for profit," with quarters in the Temple Judea Community Center, 1227 South Independence boulevard.

Ravinia's Second Week

THE second week's list of five operas in Ravinia park involves repetition of two sung last week, "Lucia" and "Il Trovatore," and first hearing there this season of "Tosca," "Faust," and "Cavalleria Rusticana." The assignments give three parts to Miss Muzio and one to Miss Garrison. The arrangements of operas and singers follows:

Tonight—"Tosca," with Miss Muzio, Mr. Rothier, Mr. Kingston, Mr. Daddi, Mr. Derman. Mr. Papi, conductor.

Tuesday night—"Faust," with Miss Muzio, Miss Braslau (as Siebel), Miss Latham, Mr. Harrold, Mr. Rothier, Mr. Marr. Mr. Hageman, conductor.

Wednesday night — "Lucia," with Miss Garrison, Salvatore Sciaretti, and the cast otherwise as on last Sunday night. Mr. Sciaretti, a tenor, makes his first Ravinia appearance in this performance. Mr. Papi, conductor.

Thursday night—"Cavalleria Rusticana," with Miss Muzio, Miss Braslau, Mr. Kingston, Mr. Marr, Miss Latham. Mr. Hageman, conductor.

Saturday night — "Il Trovatore," with Miss Muzio, Miss Braslau, Mr. Kingston, and others of last Tuesday night's performance. Mr. Papi, conductor.

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra will give concerts today, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at 3 o'clock, and tomorrow and Friday at 8:15 o'clock. Little Mr. Daddi will contribute tomorrow night, giving a group of Neapolitan songs; and Mr. Steindel, also, will have a solo opportunity. Miss Braslau will again be soloist of Friday night's program: her selections are not yet listed.

The program for Thursday afternoon contains an appeal to the children, with Joan Peers to dance and Isabel Cline to give bird-songs by Liza Lehmann. Mr. D'Angelo will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," and Elgar's suite called "The Wand of Youth" will be played.

Friday afternoon's concert will include contributions from Miss Mildred Smith, mezzo-soprano, and Miss Marion Bergman, pianist. Mr. Papi will conduct this concert, the others will be under Mr. Hageman.

Right off the Reel

FRED STONE IN SCREEN PLAY.

By Mae Tinée.

IT'S a common saying of the moneyed picture producer, sitting complacently in his lair, that in time they all come to him. By "they" he means the lights o' Broadway—in other words, the "legits." And he's pretty nearly right. Few stars there are who have not twinkled, at least for a brief period, on the screen. And among the advancing procession is Fred Stone—a lonely star nowadays, deprived by death of his former partner, Dave Montgomery.

Mr. Stone has signed up with Famous Players-Lasky and his first picture, entitled "Under the Top," is guaranteed to be full of laughs, thrills, etc. It is a circus story, so you can readily see the opportunities it will afford him for demonstrating his genius for acrobatics.

Mr. Stone gave a list of reasons as long as your arm for transferring his talents to the cinema. Money, of course, was one of them—but I'll wager, won't you, that he sort of lost his taste for the stage when for the first time in years he had to take his curtain calls alone?

Have you heard the latest about Mrs. Bertha A. Backus of Providence, R. I.? Never heard anything at all? Well——

Mrs. Backus is the mother of two children and an able housewife. (Two things about her.) The third thing is that for seven years she has been teaching in rather unusual fashion in a so-called "model" school, specializing on the education of children, her idea being to give the child a more vivid imagination and a broader view on life. No. 4—Mrs. Backus has incorporated her idea in a scenario called "The Quest of the Latchstring," which is to be produced by World and in which little Madge Evans will star. The cast will be made up most entirely of children and something most unusual is promised. We shall see what we shall see!

J. Warren Kerrigan announces that he is not going to Paramount. So does Paramount.

They tell me that Virginia Pearson is supporting two American soldiers invalided from the firing line in France. One served in the Royal Flying corps and the other in the infantry.

Touring the Canadian Rockies has been one of the latest excursions of George Beban.

No matter what the job, the women are proving themselves capable of handling it. Witness Miss Margaret Joudry of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, whose father, owner of a motion picture theater, died recently. Miss Joudry, immediately after the death of her father, closed the theater. She went to Winnipeg, where she became an apprentice in the projection room of a theater. In six weeks, plus her operator's license and with the indorsement of the Manitoba government bureau of labor, she returned home and opened the theater. She is the support of her widowed mother and has a soldier brother serving in France. How about it, gentlemen?

To be fair, we shouldn't blame it all on the poor exhibitor who endeavors to attract attention by sensational signs. I'm tempted to think that in many cases he really means no wrong. He has merely followed the lead of the producer who, when the pictures are distributed, mails him "helps" like the following which I have before me and which are incorporated in a little paper labeled, "A Guide for Exhibitors":

Compelling quotations that will make your ads talk:

A pure and pretty girl pitted against the selfishness and sophistication of the world.

She scaled a convent wall—and the wolf world, with its tongue out, waited to slake its thirst with the delicious blood of her innocence.

She braved the opinion of the world to save the man of her heart.

She threw the lions of the law her good name, so that they might not devour the man she loved.

Her alibi to save the man she loved was her good name. But he, truly loving her, fought off her sacrifice so that he might go to his mortal death rather than she to her social one.

"Hearts of the World" will be seen at the Colonial from now until further notice.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

CURIOUS: Have I met Thomas Meighan? Well, rawthah! Didn't he sit at this vurr' desk and be interviewed? I'm just as well satisfied you weren't here. He'd have had no time for me. Yes, he was in "Missing," though in a part unlike any I have ever seen him play in before. Sylvia Breamer was the heroine.

OLD FRIEND: Awfully glad to hear from you again. Hazel Dawn was born in Ogden, Utah. She is a blonde and is 5 feet 4½ inches tall. Her hobbies are photography and riding.

I. C.: Ella Hall's with Bluebird. She's Mrs. Emory Johnson in real life.

LENA: Following is the cast of "Love's Conquest": Gismonda, Lina Cavalieri; Almerio, Courtenay Foote; Prince Zaccaria, Fred Radcliffe; Gregoras, Frank Lee; Francesco, Fredi Verdi; bishop, J. H. Gilmore; nurse, Isabelle Berwind. Not a bit of trouble. Glad to be of service.

TENNESSEE: Most men are. Mr. Hart was born in Newburgh, N. Y. He is of English parents. Thomas H. Ince is responsible for his being in pictures. He engaged him for his first part.

ADA J.: I'd like to have yours, but mine? I have none. Would that I could oblige you, Ada!

A FRIEND: You were wrong. In "The Claws of the Hun" Charles Ray plays the lead. Jane Novak is the girl in the case. Better find out for sure next time you make a wager with your wife. A woman rarely bets unless she knows she's right.

Garden Festivals Raise Funds for War Relief Work

By Mme. X.

GARDENS are no longer verdant sanctuaries to whose delicious and fragrant seclusion their possessors withdraw when the world is too overpowering. They are nowadays part of their owners' patriotic equipment, and as such dedicated to the service of the country. Their vegetables are planted, grown, and tended with a solicitude hitherto unknown, a sentiment fostered by the food productions committee of the State Council of Defense. This same committee provides for the exhortation and instruction of housekeepers in the fine art of preserving these products for next winter's requirements.

In every rural community you'll find the richest women working side by side with their less well to do sisters under trained experts in community kitchens, canning, dehydrating, and otherwise conserving peas, beans, beets, spinach, and all kinds of fruits and berries.

In the heat of war times those invisible walls that wealth was unconsciously building between people of the same national aspirations, but different material conditions are melting away. Gardens and garden products, war shop workrooms, and many other relief enterprises are all assisting in the redemocratization of the women of this nation.

Even the purely esthetic parts of gardens, their bosky dells, their scented flowery retreats, their shady lawns are now turned to national or local service.

Ridge Farm Aided.

Last Wednesday evening there was an extremely smart and delightful garden fete in Mrs. Charles Schweppe's beautiful grounds on the bluffs at Lake Forest, overlooking Lake Michigan. The proceeds from the sale of the tickets went to the Ridge Farm preventorium, where delicate children, menaced by the diseases incident to living in congested city districts, are given a chance to get back health and vigor.

The Schweppes' beautiful Tudor mansion was opened to the guests of the evening as a refuge for the weather's uncertainties. If there is anything our local climate thoroughly hates it is a garden party. In the middle of a long, parched spell a well advertised garden party will always produce either a downpour or a cold, damp, northeast wind, clothed in a clinging white mist. I've seldom known it to fail.

But Wednesday evening nature was kind and combined with the program of songs and dances and supper to make a perfect end to a day that did not begin so perfectly. All Lake Forest beau monde was there, as well as groups of ditto from nearby communities.

French Orphans to Benefit.

Next Saturday another Lake Forest garden fête is on the cards. This one is for that most appealing, most romantic, most far reaching of all the war charities, the "Fatherless Children of France," and will be held in the lovely grounds of the Chicago committee's president, Mrs. Walter Brewster. It will be an afternoon and evening affair, with a supper on the terrace linking the afternoon's activities with the evening's festivities.

The idea is to make it a typical French fête de la Bastille, which is the Gallic equivalent of our Fourth of July, and should be celebrated on July 14, but as that falls on a Sunday this year, Mrs. Brewster and her committee are commemorating it on next Saturday, the 13th. There wil be Punch and Judy shows—Punch and Judy were born in France. There will be a Jacky band and dancing on the green. The youngsters of Lake Forest will impersonate some of the little French war orphans and will sell matches, shoestrings, pencils, etc., under Mrs. Charles Hubbard's guidance.

Free to Men in Uniform.

Mrs. Hugh McBirney is chairman of the flower committee and will provide basketfuls of quaint little formal red, white, and blue bouquets to be sold by the Misses Elizabeth Adsit, Lolita Armour, Catherine Casselberry, Lila Hotz, Katherine Pierce, Helen Walker, Marian Moseley, Janet Pauling, and Rebecca Hickman. The last named is working with especial zest to help Mrs. Brewster organize the affair. Mrs. Edward Cudahy is in charge of the arrangements for supper.

Men in uniform will be admitted free. Other people must pay 50 cents to go in.

Mrs. Brewster's is one of the show gardens of the north shore. She has given it the stamp of her own individuality to a most delightful degree. One of its features is a sort of calendar garden, wherein each of the summer months is illustrated in a flowery glade of its own, in which architecture and horticulture are combined. One month—I think it is July—is inclosed by a high brick wall. In this are circular openings, each one of which frames a lovely view of the Skokie's lush meadows and thick clumps of trees. There are winding paths and secluded resting places, and the place is ideal for such an affair.

Worthy of Wide Support.

The Fatherless Children of France is an enterprise worthy of a much wider support than what it now receives in this country. Those subscribing to it are insuring the future of France, and this war has conclusively proved that this means the future of civilization. For 10 cents a day, $36.50 a year, you supplement and double the allowance made by the French government to a child whose father has died for France, thus enabling that child to have better food, clothing, and education than he or she otherwise could, and so to grow up a better citizen, one more able to carry on the great traditions of our sister republic.

So far about 50,000 have been adopted in this country; of these about 5,100 have been subscribed to through the Chicago office, of which Mrs. Brewster is the head. Under her administration the number has been increased from 1,100 registered in June, 1917. Subscribers are coming in at the rate of from fifteen to twenty a day, though one day last week forty-two came in.

Many Friendships Formed.

The subscriber becomes the American foster parent of the French child and is put in direct communication with the child to whose support his or her subscription goes. Thousands of friendships have thus sprung up between French boys and girls and unknown American men, women, and children, for many children are among the supporters of the enterprise. After the war is over and Americans are once more able to wander as of yore, think of the countless pilgrimages which will be made to out of the way French villages, to the crowded districts of French cities, and to lonely farms to see the youngsters thus succored. They write such touching, artless, grateful letters, these fatherless children, that their American foster parents feel as if bound to France by ties of blood.

If every one realized the pleasure there is in this particular form of giving it would be 500,000, not 50,000, war orphans who would be aided by Americans, and Chicago's quota would be not 5,000 but 50,000.

State Council Plans Fête.

A third garden festival also planned for Lake Forest is that being organized by Mrs. Arthur C. Dow, chairman of the national defense committee of the D. A. R., with the aid of Mrs. E. A. Leight and Mrs. Charles Frankenthal, and which will be given on Saturday, July 27, in Mrs. Franklin Smith's spacious and lovely gardens. Half the proceeds will go to the fund the women of the state council are getting to support their many fine enterprises, and half will go to the D. A. R.

Mrs. Smith's house and grounds are especially attractive for such a fête. The house is half surrounded by the most delightful semi-detached vine covered pergolas you ever saw—a most original scheme which avoids the darkening of the rooms within doors and yet gives the open air lounging places so needed in our summer life.

The grounds—which are part of what was once the famous old Durant place—will make an enchanting background for the booths, tea stalls, open air dance pavilion, and other features planned for the occasion. They already have a tennis court, an old fashioned, full sized bowling green, and a miniature golf links, all of which can be put to use the day of the fair. There is also a quaint little bridge, arching over an even more infinitesimal pool, à la Japonaise. Near the house is a green, and ferny basin with darting goldfish, and a murmuring, leaping jet of water shooting up from the center and almost touching the vine covered trellis overhead. It's a gay, unstudied, charming house and garden and will make a happy setting for a festa.

That same evening Mrs. Ogden Armour is planning a repetition of the successful and brilliant spectacle produced two weeks ago yesterday at Mellody farm, the Armour estate at Lake Forest. This time to enable the general public to see it, the pageant will be given in the Auditorium and the proceeds will go to the Salvation army war work—and we all know what that war work is, what it means of comfort and succor to our boys on the firing line.

Wheat Rust Starts Argument.

Peace hath her battles as well as war. There's that one twixt the growers of wheat and the cultivators of the local barberry bush. The wheat farmers of Lake county, whose product in some fields is already showing signs of the fatal rust, are accusing the landed proprietors of Lake Forest, whose places in some cases reek with this stiff and stocky shrub, with being responsible for this blight. The barberry bushers claim that it has not been satisfactorily proven that their pet shrub is responsible for this vegetable pest, or, if so, that it is the sole agent for the spread of this rust. They cite the destruction by rust of Michigan wheat some years ago, at which time that state was entirely guiltless of barberry bushes. They are as insistent as the opponents of universal and obligatory vaccination are to that generally accepted means of prevention.

Everything considered, the stress of the times, the need for encouraging production, the duty of support and coöperation each one owes his neighbor, it would be but a decently Christian act for barberry bushers at least to cut down this shrubbery (it's the older type, not the newer or Japanese, bush that's concerned) for this season.

Being the best of good citizens, Arthur Aldis of Lake Forest thus eliminated 400 feet of handsome hedge, although he is far from persuaded that by so doing he affects the welfare of Lake county wheat. But a few miles west of Lake Forest Mrs. Tiffany Blake, on her land army farm, has found rust on her young green wheat and lays it to the careless thoughtlessness or indifference of her rich neighbors on the near by north shore, whose crop of barberries promises a rosy hued abundance in September. Barberry jelly is delicious, but not to be compared in nutritive value with white flour.

Farmerettes Making Good.

This land army farm is even more of a success than its promoters had dared to hope. Forty-two young, eager, and capable girls are there now learning the fundamentals of farming. A handsome, healthy looking outfit they are in their overalls and big straw hats as they direct the cultivators over the fields, milk the eighteen cows, tend the nearly 200 chickens, hoe and weed the kitchen garden, and do all the hundred and one odd jobs incident to the day's work on a farm.

Mrs. Tiffany Blake, in charge of the enterprise, spends more than half her time on the farm. Mrs. V. K. Spicer of Kenilworth is another enthusiastic supporter, who gives a great deal of time and attention to it, the housekeeping department being her especial department.

The place itself is most attractive with its billowing fields, its rim of groves, and its remoteness from motor traffic—an ideal spot for a healthy outdoor summer. The girls there are all pledged to give at least two years of service to spreading the "women on the farms" propaganda, by heading units of young women to work for farmers and so replace the man power required for war service. If the movement leads to a permanent identifying of women with this kind of work it promises to revolutionize farming and put it on a different basis.

There are no people so conservative, so little susceptible to change of method and ideas as farmers. They must be definitely shown the value of this new kind of labor. If the movement has any kind of permanent success it will not only help solve some of the problems of agricultural life but will be of great service in disentangling many city perplexities.

Entertain French Flyers.

Next Friday the members of the American fund for French wounded are to entertain those members of the French flying corps who escort the remarkable exhibit of Lieut. Henri Farré's paintings of war in the air at the Art institute. Mrs. Russell Tyson and the women of her board will form the reception committee. The hours are from 2 till 6 o'clock.

The following afternoon Mrs. James Keeley and her group of "hostesses" will dedicate the open air pavilion nearby in Grant park to the service of our men in uniform, for whom this civic clubhouse will be the great rendezvous and rallying point on their town furloughs. It is promised that the completed building will be ready in record breaking time.

She's the New President of the Junior League.

Miss Katharine Pierce

Miss Katharine Pierce, who recently was elected the president of the Junior league, will be, to say the least, one of the counter attractions when the French aviators, among them the adored Lieut. Georges Flachaire, ace of aces of the French flying corps, are here and having their daily receptions at the Art institute. Miss Pierce is to be in charge of the reception committee on one of the days of the exhibition of aerial paintings and official French moving pictures to be shown at the Art institute from next Friday until the end of the month. During that time Lieut. Flachaire and Lieut. Henri Farre, the painter of many canvases to be shown in the galleries of the institute, will fly over Grant park and over various favored spots of the city and neighboring country clubs.

Miss Doris Russell, another Junior league girl, is in charge of the sale of tickets, which go at 50 cents for grownups and 25 cents for children. She has them at 60 East Washington street, in the war shop on the main floor. Those tickets admit one to both the lectures and moving pictures to be given and to the exhibition of paintings.

Mrs. Russell Tyson is Chicago chairman of the arrangement committee for the visit of the flyers. The proceeds will be divided between the children of French aviators killed in the war and the American fund for French wounded.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Only Real Patriots Can Belong to the Do Without Club

By Mrs. Roy Dickey.

[Vice chairman of publicity committee of woman's committee of State Council of Defense and founder of Do Without club.]

EVERYBODY has time enough and money enough to join the new Do Without club. The only thing needed to become a member is the capacity for self-denial—the ability to prove you're not so weak minded that you can't give up pet luxuries or so selfish and so unpatriotic that you won't.

The Do Without club is exactly what its name signifies. It means that for the sake of helping to win the war you have definitely given up some one thing that you like—that has been a pet luxury of yours—and donate the funds you save to some war relief cause; or if you feel you can't entirely divorce yourself from the money, to Liberty bonds or thrift stamps, or any of the other things that serve yourself and your country too.

Of course we are hoping that many people will look upon the money so saved as a sort of perpetual sacrifice, and that the dollars saved will go absolutely to the cause of war work, with no interest to be paid or principal to be thought of a few years later.

But if that is too much to ask, then save the money and invest it with Uncle Sam, if you feel you can't afford to give it to him. Invest it—give it—whichever you please—but save it! Earn your right to wear a "Do Without" button.

One may become a member by sending his or her name to the Do Without club, 120 West Adams street, with 10 cents for membership fee, and receive a red, white, and blue button and printed suggestions.

WOMEN IN WARTIME.

A visitor to headquarters of the American fund for French wounded is impressed with the appearance of the hallway, which is usually full of long rows of huge wooden packing boxes, all of them addressed to Mrs. Benjamin Lathrop, head of the fund in Paris, and marked with the memorandum of their merciful contents. For in these boxes, all ready for shipment, are hundreds of surgical dressings, garments for the sick and poor, and medical supplies being furnished by Mrs. Russell Tyson and her helpers. Day by day the boxes are hauled away and new ones take their place, the result of the work of scores of helpers who come daily to headquarters. About 400 boxes are shipped every month from 60 East Washington street, the headquarters.

The ready service corps of the Girls' Patriotic Service league is a group of business girls recently organized for patriotic service under the committee for recreation for girls of the woman's committee of the State Council of Defense. The weekly meeting of the league is held in the Hayes hotel, University avenue and East Sixty-fourth street, and military drills are part of the work.

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, permanent chairman of the woman's committee of the salvage bureau of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, announces a house to house canvass by ward chairmen throughout the city which will be launched tomorrow. The plan is to interest the housewives of the city in a salvage or junk campaign that will clean up every household's attic and basement and at the same time help the Red Cross. For her junk the housewife will receive only a coupon representing the amount of her purchase. The peddler from whom she buys will have paid for his book of coupons the sum of $5, all of which goes to the cause of caring for the dependent families of our soldiers and sailors. This home service requires many thousands of dollars, and Mrs. Chase with her committee expects to realize fully $500,000 a year for the cause from the sale of junk through this medium. On the committee are Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, Mrs. Frank Jerome, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick Jr., Mrs. John Smulski, Mrs. James Easley, Mrs. Nettie C. Kenner, Mrs. C. R. Frankenthal, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, Mrs. Martin Kent Northam, Mrs. C. D. Jeffers, Mrs. Lucius Conant, Mrs. W. J. Benson, Mrs. Ransom E. Kennicott, Mrs. C. E. Greenfield, Mrs. A. W. Augur, Mrs. Edward Bailey, Mrs. Henry W. Hardy, Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. George Higginson Jr., and Mrs. Robert Bates.

The Food for France Fund shop, formerly at 76 East Madison street, is now located at 29 South Wabash avenue. The new quarters are much larger and afford opportunity for serving picnic luncheons at small tables. Wooden plates and paper napkins and tablecloths are used. Afternoon tea also is served, in charge of Mrs. William Denison Morris. Barrels painted red, white, and blue are being distributed throughout the city in office buildings, hotels, and cafés, as receptacles for donations from the public. The summer earning campaign, in charge of Mrs. Edward R. Litzinger, will be launched during the coming week. Proceeds of the fund go to the bureau of health in Paris, where the money is distributed by the French government among the sick and needy civilians and refugees.

The surgical dressings department of the Arché club will meet and work at the home of Miss Mary Adelaide Pitkin, 4569 Lake Park avenue, every Tuesday from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. during July and August. Luncheon will be served.

The Lake Forest community service committee, under the war recreation board of Illinois, of which Clifford W. Barnes of Lake Forest is chairman, has established a bureau of information at 11 Market square. Mrs. Alfred H. Granger is general chairman and Miss Frances D. Gould is secretary. This community has been established for the purpose of extending hospitality to the men at Fort Sheridan and the Great Lakes Naval Training stations. Mrs. Leverett Thompson, Miss Madeleine Newell, Mrs. C. H. Schweppe, and Mrs. H. B. Clow are on a committee which makes a specialty of entertaining convalescent boys. Mrs. A. T. Aldis, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mrs. C. E. Brown, and Mrs. Schweppe have enlisted to help entertain the boys. The committee plans to have Saturday afternoon dances at the Onwentsia club, under the leadership of Mrs. F. R. Carter.

An extensive budget has been given for the farm in charge of the Woman's Land army at Libertyville by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, director of the farm. The budget includes new equipment and improvements on the buildings. It has been estimated that the income of the farm from butter and eggs is about $300 a month.

The tickets for the exhibition to be held at the Art institute July 12 to 31 in connection with the visit of the French aviators are now on sale at the office of Miss Doris Russell in the war shop of the American fund for French wounded, 60 East Washington street. The proceeds of the exhibition, which will include official French aviation motion pictures and 140 canvases of Henri Farré, artist aviator, who is to be one of the visitors, will be divided between the American fund for French wounded and the children of French aviators killed in the war.

The French national holiday, July 14, commemorating the fall of the Bastille, will be celebrated by a garden fête at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster in Lake Forest. The Fatherless Children of France, of which organization Mrs. Brewster is the Chicago chairman, will be the beneficiary. The festival will be held on Saturday from 4 to 11 p. m. and will be called a "fête de la Bastille." The admission fee will be 50 cents and the supper $1.25. The proceeds of the festival will be sent to Paris to be used for the support and education of French war orphans. The Chicago committee of the Fatherless Children of France will have the assistance of a special committee in managing the occasion. It includes Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mrs. Charles M. Hubbard, and the Misses Elizabeth Adsit, Catherine Casselberry, Lila Hotz, Janet Pauling, Lolita Armour, Rebecca Hickman, Marian Moseley, Katherine Pierce, and Helen Walker.

New quarters have been opened at 228 Monadnock building for the employment department of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense. The hours of consultation will be from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Mrs. Frederick Elijah, who has been director of emergency drivers, Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, has been called to Washington as director of motor service in the central division, American Red Cross. This position gives her jurisdiction over the Red Cross motor service for Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, and Wisconsin.

Three Red Cross flags that waved beside the Stars and Stripes over the national capitol during the recent Red Cross drive, said to be the only flags, aside from the national emblem, ever to float from the capitol's dome, are now offered for sale by the Red Cross. Two, bearing the autographs of Vice President Marshall and Speaker Clark, are offered at a minimum price of $10,000 each, no maximum. The third flag, to which has been added the autograph of President Wilson, is in the custody of H. B. McFarland, vice chairman of the District of Columbia Red Cross, to whom all communications regarding its purchase must be addressed.

The child welfare department of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense has been moved to 6 North Michigan avenue.

Mrs. H. E. Sauer, director of inspection and packing, hospital garments department of the Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, reports fifty-six auxiliaries as being listed on the honor roll, which means that fifty-six Red Cross auxiliaries are doing such perfect work that inspection at headquarters has become unnecessary, so the garments are tied and sent in all ready for packing.

Miss Laura Scott, niece of Mrs. James W. Scott of 1210 Astor street, and Miss Josephine Russell, niece of Mrs. Samuel Gale Taylor, have gone abroad for canteen service.

The first community canning center for housewives will be opened on Tuesday afternoon at Sinai Social center from 12 o'clock noon until 2 o'clock. Housewives will take their own vegetables and their own cans and will receive instruction in the cold pack method from government demonstrators. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Woman's Aid.

Miss Caroline Harris, who, for the last year has devoted her time and energies to the refugee department, Chicago chapter, American Red Cross, has resigned and accepted an appointment at the Great Lakes. Miss Katherine Barker, who has been connected with the Chicago chapter for some time, has been chosen as Miss Harris' successor.

The Red Cross naval auxiliary, of which Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss is chairman, has launched a big drive to obtain 10,000 comfort kits by Aug. 31. Many workers are needed who will work either at the rooms at 1902 Stevens building or at home. All auxiliaries who are at present short of work are urged to help to obtain the necessary quota of kits.

Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, chairman of the woman's committee, State Council of Defense, has left the city for her summer home at Bar Harbor, Me. Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, vice chairman, is taking her place at 120 West Adams street.

Miss Effyan Wambaugh and Miss Jane White of the Evanston Township High school have sent to the American fund for French wounded a check for $75, received as the proceeds of three short plays given by the high school students in Evanston.

In a letter to Mrs. Russell Tyson, recommending the kid glove vest which has been sent out from the American fund for French wounded to members of the American expeditionary forces, a soldier writes: "It is the most valuable article of clothing I possess, for it is so warm and snug that by wearing it I can dispense with three or four sweaters, keep just as warm, and be far more comfortable." Mrs. Tyson urges that all kid skins in good condition, gloves or leather, be sent to her office, 60 East Washington street.

This week is to see the intensive drive of the conservation department of the woman's committee of the State Council of Defense made of especial value to the Chicago housewife by Mrs. Charles A. Munroe, who is at the head of the food conservation bureau and demonstration station at 28 South Wabash avenue. Every effort to bring home to the visitor to the station the simple and practical lessons of the United States food administration, under the auspices of which the station is maintained, is to be made, and demonstrations and lectures are to be open to all. Recipes are to be distributed free at the station, and every question on the use and conservation of food which is brought to those in charge will find its reasonable answer. Following is the week's program:

Mrs. Roy Dickey

Mrs. Roy Dickey, one of the most vivid and effective workers among the scores of those who give splendid service as volunteers on the woman's committee of the State Council of Defense, is the originator of the plan for the formation of the Do Without club, an organization which exists under the auspices of the committee and which has a pledge so broad and inclusive in its scope that the patriotic zeal of any one can find expression in some way by joining the club. Her explanation of its purpose shows how there is no escape for the person who really wants to do something to win the war and save money or food for the allies.

Plan to Entertain Soldier and Sailor During Summer

SEVERAL large groups of women, acting under the general direction of the war recreation board, are actively engaged in providing for the social needs of visiting soldiers and sailors. The new pavilion in Grant park, ground for which has already been broken, is destined to take care of them in a larger way than has up to the present moment been possible.

There will be in this new club everything that men like—dancing, tennis, baseball, a vaudeville entertainment to which the best talent in town will contribute, movies; best of all, a canteen in daily operation, where men can, for a small sum, get the best sort of home cooking. There will also be showers and a lounge.

It is an ideal location, and the fact that it is in the heart of the loop renders it still more desirable and attractive. For the sailor or soldier, if he is new to Chicago, does not get far away from the loop. He likes the bright lights, and he hasn't any too much pocket money to spend riding up and down on street cars and buses.

Their two favorite daytime haunts at present are the Soldiers and Sailors' club in West Washington street, where they get information and all the comforts of a man's club, and the Woman's club canteen in the public library. These two centers compare favorably with anything other cities can show.

Other cities have, however, developed what is much needed in Chicago, lodgings where for 25 cents the boys may have a comfortable bed, a morning tub, and in some instances breakfast. The great popularity of the Y. M. C. A. hotel, which often has to turn boys away because all its rooms are filled, is evidence of the great need that exists in this direction.

The hostess committee sees to it that there shall be plenty of wholesome fun. All winter there have been dances carried on by many organizations. Many of these parties have ended for the season.

One of the most important branches of service in the hostess committee is that known as the dancing teachers' war service, of which Miss Lillian Adler is chairman. There are in Miss Adler's organization sixty dancing teachers who give their time to teaching the "awkward squad" how to conduct itself on the ballroom floor. There are two classes, one at the Board of Trade building on Saturday afternoon and one at the Soldiers and Sailors' club, where hundreds of boys are taught every week end the one step and the waltz. In addition to this members of the association conduct dances which are given at various centers.

The churches are beginning to take up the matter of recreation. At St. Paul's church on the south side, under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Little, there is a supper party every Saturday night, followed by a dance. The group of boys attending this party is taken in motors from the Soldiers and Sailors' club, and after the party to the Illinois Central station in time to take a train to the Great Lakes station.

A number of churches are adopting the plan of a special vesper service. The boys who attend this service are taken home by members of the church for supper and for home entertainment for the evening. This is to everybody the most grateful form of hospitality. The boy who is far from home appreciates the intimacy and friendliness of family life as no other boy can, and no other form of entertainment is half so satisfactory or so heart warming as that which is directed toward these men in uniform.

CLUB NOTES

What Croatian women can do for America will be demonstrated at the Americanization meeting of the Woman's City club citizenship class on Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock, when Croatian handiwork of various kinds and Croatian foods will be shown. Mrs. George E. Schubert will preside and will tell of the recent convention held in St. Louis by the Croatians, when $5,000 was raised for war purposes, $1,000 of this being donated to the Red Cross. Stephen D. Ratkovich, secretary of the Croatian branch of the third Liberty loan, will speak on "The Problems of Croatia." The committee on public institutions of the Woman's City club will meet tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock.

The Illinois Woman's Press association will give a dramatic tea on Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Cordon, Fine Arts building, at which Miss Edith Ellis, playwright, will give a talk on "American Plays." Miss Idah McGlone Gibson, the newly elected president, who has just returned from the front after some months spent in inspection of Red Cross centers and their work of rehabilitation of the crippled, will give her impressions of Gen. Pershing and President Poincaré of France. Miss May Robson of "A Little Bit Old Fashioned" and Miss Peggy O'Neil of "Patsy on the Wing" also will be guests.

On Thursday the woman's auxiliary of St. Elizabeth's hospital will give a lawn card party at 2 p. m. at 1432 North Claremont avenue.

The Lloyd George chapter, Daughters of the British Empire, is starting a membership campaign. This is an evening chapter and is composed largely of women employed during the day.

A meeting of the woman's board of the Jackson Park sanitarium will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock at St. Luke's hospital.

A donation party will be held at the Scottish Old People's home in Riverside at 11 a. m. on Wednesday given by the British American Woman's club.

FUTURE EVENTS

Today will bring the arrival of the famous French aviators, Lieut. Georges Flachaire and Lieut. Henri Farré. All kinds of social affairs are to be given for them, including dinners at Onwentsia, South Shore, and other clubs. Mrs. Russell Tyson, Kellogg Fairbank, and Lieut. Joseph Dobelle head the reception committee. Lieut. Dobelle has made every one enthusiastic over the French flyers by giving lectures in all parts of the city. Wherever he has been, whether at a patriotic meeting of the west side Italian girls, or in a fashionable Lake Shore drive home, he has won all by his charm and by his singing of the French songs, full of the spirit which has made us love his land. Beginning on Friday the paintings of Lieut. Farré will be shown at the Art institute. In Fullerton hall there will be official French aerial moving pictures with lectures given by the aviators themselves. The admission to these entertainments, which will continue until July 31, will be 50 cents, except on the opening afternoon, when admission will be $2. Children will be admitted for 25 cents. The reception committee on Friday will consist of women from the American fund for French wounded, including Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Keith Spaulding, Mrs. G. F. Burrows Jr., Mrs. William E. Clarke, Miss Marie J. Rozet, and Mrs. Morris M. Townley. On Saturday the reception committee will consist of mothers of the aviators and Mrs. William E. Clarke, whose son is now flying in France. Tickets may be had from Miss Doris Russell at the war shop, 60 East Washington street

The youngsters of St. Vincent's Infant asylum will benefit from a field day entertainment to be held on Saturday at 2 o'clock at Comiskey park, Thirty-fifth street and Shields avenue. A band of seventy jackies from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will furnish the music for the occasion and a group of jackies will drill. There will also be a baseball and a soccer football game. Those in charge of arrangements for the program include Mrs. William D. McJunkin, Mrs. William T. Johnson, Mrs. Thomas F. Scully, Mrs. John Powell, Mrs. William Powell, Miss Gertrode and Miss Bernadine Healy, Miss Agnes Healy, Miss Agnes and Miss Margaret Holland, Miss Mary Kiley, Miss Adeline Railton, Miss Geraldine Fitzgerald, and Miss Eva O'Donnell.

Mrs. Walter J. Warder of 6815 Sheridan road is chairman of the war relief committee of the Illinois division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which will give a card party on Tuesday at 2 o'clock in the Auditorium hotel. The proceeds will go to a fund for endowing a bed in the American military hospital at Neuilly, France. On the committee in charge are Mrs. A. B. B. Harris, Mrs. W. E. Angier, Mrs. F. C. Rolfe, Mrs. A. O. Simpson, and Mrs. Ida F. Powell, who is the president.

Miss Elizabeth Wallace of the University of Chicago, who has recently returned from France, will speak of her experiences overseas at the Chicago Beach hotel on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, for the benefit of the junior auxiliary of the Hyde Park Infant welfare.

Vacation Bible Schools Open with Large Attendance

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

DAILY vacation Bible schools to the number of eighty-five, with an attendance of approximately 15,000, will begin tomorrow morning to continue in session five days in the week until Aug. 9. The statement might be modified by mentioning that a few of the schools began last week, but the large majority will begin today. Those who began earlier than the regular schedule will close a week earlier, but all the children will take part in the general demonstrations which mark the close of the period and in the union demonstration in which all will join.

The Rev. Charles S. Laidman, pastor of the Lake View Congregational church, is the general chairman of the federated schools. Those who represent the various denominations are: Baptist, the Rev. A. H. Gage; Congregationalist, the Rev. Reuben L. Breed; Disciples, the Rev. Perry J. Rice; Methodist Episcopal, the Rev. W. S. Fleming; Presbyterian, the Rev. W. Clyde Smith; Protestant Episcopal, the Rev. J. B. Haslam.

An indication of the broadening work of the daily vacation Bible schools is the organization of schools in churches in the better residence districts. The Hyde Park Presbyterian, the Covenant Presbyterian, and the New First Congregational are among the number.

A training class for teachers and workers attended by 200 was held three days last week in the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church.

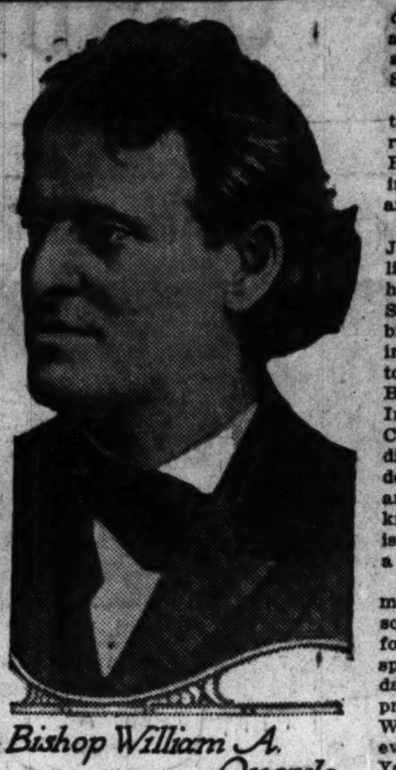
Solemn high mass of requiem for the repose of the soul of the late Archbishop James Edward Quigley will be sung today at 10 o'clock at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, State and Superior streets. The date is the third anniversary of the death of the prelate, who was archbishop of the Chicago diocese at the time of his decease.

A patriotic lecture for the benefit of De Paul nursery and social center will be given next Thursday evening at the College theater by Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the Woman's Trade Union league of Chicago.

The raising of a service flag of 260 stars, two of them of gold, will take place at 11 o'clock today at Our Lady of Angels Roman Catholic church, North Hamlin avenue and Iowa street. The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Kelly will bless the flags and the Rev. James A. Hynes, LL. D., pastor, will be celebrant of the mass. William P. Gorman of St. Mary's seminary, Baltimore, will be master of ceremonies.

Beginning this evening at 7:45 the Third Presbyterian church, Ashland and Ogden avenues, will hold open air services in Jefferson Park. It is the intention of the pastor, the Rev. W. B. Lampe, to hold these services throughout July and August.

The Rev. R. H. Beattie, pastor of the Austin Presbyterian church, has been elected president of the Presbyterian Training school, but will continue his work as pastor.



Bishop William A. Quayle

Bishop W. A. Quayle of the St. Louis area of the Methodist Episcopal church will be the special speaker next Saturday and Sunday at the Desplaines camp meeting, which begins next Wednesday evening. The camp grounds are located near the village of Desplaines, Ill.

Bishop Quayle will make the principal address to young people on Saturday at 3 o'clock, the day being known as Epworth league day. He will preach at 10:45 a. m. and at 3 p. m. on next Sunday.

While in Chicago he will meet with the six district superintendents in arranging for the coming session of the Rock River conference, which meets in the Sheridan road church, Hazel and Sunnyside avenues, Oct. 2.

Bishop Quayle was pastor of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Ellis avenue and Forty-sixth street, when he was elected bishop ten years ago. Since then he has been stationed as bishop in Oklahoma, St. Paul, and now in St. Louis. Previous to his election to the episcopacy he was president of Baker university, Kansas; pastor of Independence avenue church, Kansas City, and Meridian street church, Indianapolis. He is the author of a dozen books and lectures on literary and popular subjects. He is widely known among all denominations and is regarded in his own denomination as a most popular speaker.

Other special speakers at the camp meeting will be: Bishop Thomas Nicholson, who speaks twice next Friday; former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, who speaks on Illinois Centennial day, Friday; the Rev. I. E. Honeywell, who preaches the opening sermon next Wednesday evening and on every other evening; the Rev. Fred B. Fisher, New York, who speaks twelve times; the Rev. J. S. Ladd Thomas, Epworth league; the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, the Rev. Alfred Peache, and the Rev. John Thompson. Many other pastors will speak or otherwise take part. No admission is charged to the grounds or the meetings.

The Lorimer Avenue Baptist church has added to its patriotic service flag and its United States flag, a flag for Christian service to indicate by white stars in a blue field members of the church who go into foreign missionary service and by a white star in a red field those who go into home missionary work.

The Rev. M. G. Beardsley will be assistant pastor of Messiah Baptist church during July and half of August. Dr. J. A. White is pastor of the church.

In making an appeal for money with which to buy next winter's coal for the church, the Rev. E. L. Reiner, pastor of the Waveland Avenue Congregational church, gave literalness to the oft repeated phrase, "Keep the home fires burning."

The Rev. W. C. Covert, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has gone to Mare island for work among the sailors.

The Disciples of Christ churches report having raised $6,800,000 in subscriptions toward a total of $7,300,000, which is the goal of the Men and Millions movement, $1,000,000 having been added for a war emergency fund. About $2,000,000 of the amount was due on July 4. The work of solicitation will continue until the full amount is obtained.

The Hyde Park Disciples church will unite with the Hyde Park Baptist church in its morning services during the month of August, and the Rev. Edward S. Ames, pastor of the Disciples church, will be the preacher.

The convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Protestant Episcopal church will be held at Northfield, Mass., Aug. 14-21.

The last of a series of patriotic programs on Sunday evenings will be given at 7:45 this evening at the South Congregational church, Fortieth street and Drexel boulevard. The pastor, the Rev. T. Yeoman Williams, will speak on "America, Her Part in the War." A patriotic musical program has been arranged.

The First Baptist church of Waukegan, Ill., is planning for a new church building to take care of the enlarged work made necessary by the proximity of the Great Lakes Naval Training station. The Rev. W. C. Rutherford is pastor.

Billy Sunday will close his revival campaign in Duluth, Minn., this evening. Some of the members of the party, including Homer Rodeheaver, George Ashley Brewster, Robert Matthews, and Mrs. William Asher, who furnish the music for the campaign, will return to Chicago and give a concert Tuesday evening in the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue. The concert will be for the benefit of the Chicago Business Women's council, which was organized as the result of the Sunday campaign which closed in Chicago May 19.

A service flag will be raised at St. John Berchman's Roman Catholic church, Logan boulevard and Maplewood avenue, at 10:30 today. The Rev. John Webster Melody, pastor of St. Jarlath's church, will speak. The pastor is the Rev. Julius E. Bevos, who ministers to a congregation of former Belgians, many of whom have enlisted in the war.

J. Beaumont Hingeley Jr., son of the Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley, secretary of the board of conference claimants of the Methodist Episcopal church, has gone into the army and is at Deming, N. M. Dr. Hingeley's only other son is Maj. M. W. Hingeley of the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth infantry.

SLAMS OF LIFE.

By J. P. McEvoy.

REMARKS ON BABY SHOES.

Every morning, or at least 'most every morning—
 As I beat it to the cold and clanging mart
To annex the beer and skittles that comprise my daily vittles
 Comes a warning from the wifie of my heart,
Comes a warning and a tocsin and a message
 With a frequency that nullifies the news
"There was something for today. . . . Let me see. O, by the way,
 The baby needs another pair of shoes."
  "Shoes," says I.
  "Shoes," says she,
"The baby needs another pair of shoes."

Now, the petals of the poppy bloom are fleeting,
 And the beaded bubbles vanish on the brim,
And my weekly compensation knows a rapid desiccation
 Quite inimical to vigor, nerve, and vim,
There's a transitory value to the plaudit
 And ephemeral the honor that ensues,
But the absolute quintessence of the perfect evanescence
 Are those frail and fragile things called baby shoes.
  Ain't it the truth!
 Those pale and puerile, weak, ethereal shoes.

O, the shoes I blindly buy for sturdy leather
 They are fashioned from the wings of butterflies,
And are merely held together by some forecasts on the weather,
 And some female no's and other kinds of lies,
And they vanish like the eggs of Easter Sunday,
 And they disappear in bevies, squads, and slews.
Yes, sir, tempus sure can fugit I will grant you,
 But it hasn't got a thing on baby shoes.
  Alas, no,
 It hasn't got a thing on baby shoes.

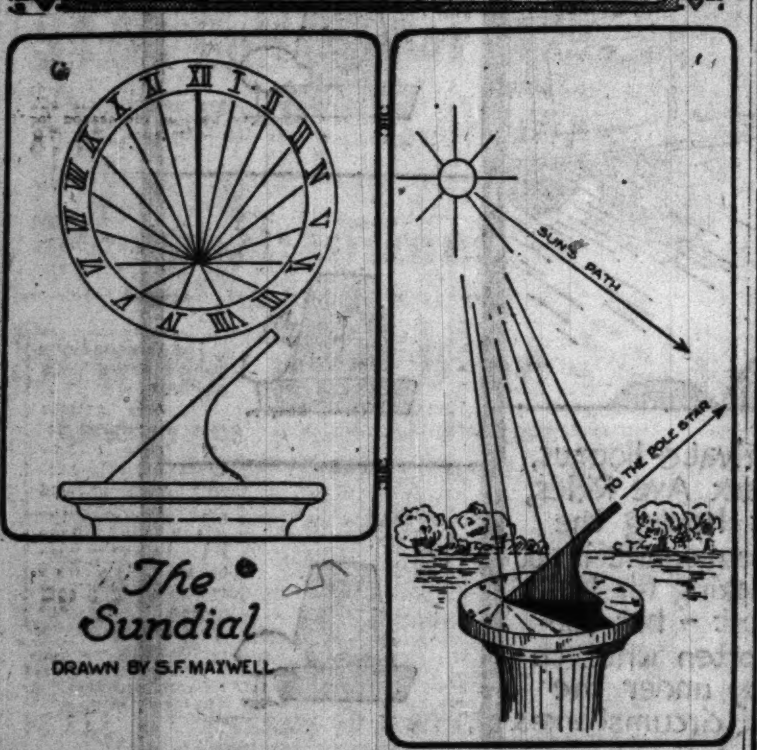
ASTRONOMY



The Sundial

DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL

THE SUN DIAL.

THE sun dial is one of the oldest instruments for measuring time. The earth turns with an absolutely uniform speed, and its rotations form the most logical measurements of time which we have. As it spins on its axis objects on its surface are being carried constantly toward the east, and consequently the sky seems to be turning toward the west. As the sun crosses the heavens the shadows move backward, and if adequate means are at hand the hour of day can be told by their positions.

Sun dials were invented before the dawn of history. The first ones were mere sticks set up in open places. Later, in ancient Egypt, obelisks of stone marked the hours in the same manner.

The shadow of a stick set upright will show the motion of the sun, and were it not for the motion of the earth in its orbit it would make a perfect sun dial. The earth, as it pursues its course around the sun, causes our luminary to follow a different path across the sky every day. To make the shadow always fall on the same spot at the same hour the stick, or gnomon, as it is called, is pointed at the north star.

A complete sun dial consists of a level plate, usually more or less ornamentally finished, with the gnomon mounted upright in the center. The gnomon must stand exactly perpendicular, and its edges should cast a sharp shadow. When the sun rises in summer the shadow points south of west, and as the day advances it creeps along until at noon it lies along the gnomon, pointing north. During the afternoon it moves down the eastern side, pointing east and west at 6 o'clock and south of east at sunset. The shadow never falls on that part of the sun dial south of the gnomon.

Legislation has decreed that during the summer all clocks shall be set one hour ahead of time by the sun dial. Consequently, when the sun dial indicates noon the clocks are marking 1 in the afternoon, and when the shadow has moved to point east and west our clocks record 7 in the evening.

WITH THE CIRCUS.

Barnum and Bailey's circus opens on Friday on the White City circus lot for an engagement of Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The pageant this year is "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp." There are additions to the zoo, and the clowns are fifty in number.

BOUQUETS WHERE THEY BELONG

By Guy F. Lee.

When a katzenjammer blatt lets a yowl of this and that
In idiotic praise of "Me und Gott,"
I'll admit I cuss a bit at the silliness of it
And with choler 'neath the collar I get hot.
When a patriot whose work seems to be to knock and shirk
Starts his hammer rat-tat-tating near my desk
There is language loud and clear that can only be, I fear,
Most faithfully described as picturesque.
When the rumor ravens croak of disaster I could choke
And plant 'em all on mortuary shelves.
But the bird that gets my nanny is the supermodest granny
Who fears we say too much about ourselves.

From the time our Minute shooting sent the Red Coats thither scooting
We've been champions of right in every clash.
Old Glory whipped the breeze for the freedom of the seas
And it loosed four million blacks of chain and lash;
Gave the Cubans a square meal and the Spaniards a square deal
And the Filipinos knowledge, baths, and health.
It opened wide our gates to the serfs of Europe's hates
And made them men of dignity and wealth.
Now we fight to free the world and our priceless all is hurled
At the foe of Man without a thought of gain—
Yet some chicken minds advise that we fail to advertise
The simple truth about our might and main.

With the will and brains to dare we've been victors everywhere
And it mattered not the handicap we spanned;
Over mountain, plain, and forest booming songs of action chorused
As our pioneers developed this broad land.
'Neath the ocean, in the air, yep, the Yankee first was there;
We are Progress' front and last and middle name;
Humor, drama, statecraft, books, oratory, sports, and looks,
We are leaders in them all, I proudly claim!
And since we have gone to war you can bet we'll spill some gore,
But we'll do it for humanity, not pelf—
To my dying day I'll thank my Creator I'm a Yank,
For a Yank can't say too much about himself!

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Housch and Lavelle:

"What kind of a soldier would you prefer to be?"

"How—how do you mean what kind of a soldier would I prefer to be?"

"Would you rather carry a musket, a bayonet, or a rifle?"

"I'd rather carry a drum."

"Why would you rather carry a drum?"

"If the enemy came too fast I could beat it."

"Before we go any further please understand one thing."

"And what's that?"

"I am nobody's fool."

"Very well, I'll adopt you."

"Don't get personal. By the way, have you a cigarette?"

"Whenever I notice a poor, misguided gink asking for a cigarette I always think of my poor old father."

"Did your father die from smoking?"

"No; father is still alive and 78 years old, but he says if he hadn't smoked he'd be 90."

FOUR AMERICAN POLICIES.

For the development of nationalism, for national security, and for social discipline and physical betterment the United States needs the adoption of the policy of universal military service.

For the readjustment from war to peace, to place returned soldiers and workers now engaged in war industries, to maintain equilibrium, prevent injustice and suffering, and further to provide the continuing amelioration of conditions demanded of an intelligent state, the United States needs a constructive plan affecting labor and industry, one which will be comprehensive enough to cover the period of readjustment and to continue after readjustment.

For intelligent voting, upon which the government of an efficient state can be founded, the United States needs the short ballot.

For efficiency, accuracy, and necessary preciseness in the conduct of affairs, official and private, the United States needs to abandon antiquated methods maintained in popular usage by inertia, prejudice, lack of thought, etc. It needs the adoption of such reforms as the metric system, the twenty-four hour clock, etc.

Opinion is fluid now and popular acceptance easy. A great deal of inertia has been broken down. We talk ten years of the feasibility of lengthening the summer day, all the time conceding that benefit would result, and suddenly have it ordered for us in about ten days.

Rearrangements of life are made without difficulty and without protest and without confusion. It is a hopeful time for the consideration of new methods, and the new methods of national life which we have indicated can be united in a scheme operating for the success of American habits and practices.

Universal service, joining military and vocational training, as favored by the government at present, would continue to mobilize for a period of training the human resources of the nation, and it would give the American youth a training in the fundamentals of life, in citizenship and national responsibility which can be obtained in no other way. It would detect and correct the physical ills of the nation, it would nationalize the country, and it would make it safe.

A plan affecting labor and industry must be prepared in advance of the return to peace, or the nation will do the greatest of injustices to the people to whom it is under the greatest obligation, to soldiers in service, to workers in war work.

Preparation for the return to peace is as mandatory upon the wisdom of the nation, upon its sense of equity and justice, as was the demand for preparation for war. The plan must be a comprehensive one because it must cover the needs of millions of men and women.

Already we have shifted so far from normal that a return to peace would upset the equilibrium of the country. The shift may only have begun. If we not only have to defeat Germany but to resuscitate Russia to make the defeat of Germany worth anything, then we may only have begun to change from a peace to a war footing, and, consequently, shall have a much larger task to shift back to peace.

We know that if the nation does not provide against it the shock of peace will be fully as great as the shock of war. We shall have no valid excuses for not being able to meet it.

When the readjustment has been made the unwisdom of permitting social discontent and dissent to grow into revolutionary form, by permitting intolerable conditions of life to prevail, ought to be manifest. It ought to be apparent that a wise state, demanding service of its citizens, is not indifferent to its obligations of service to them.

A government which can do for the people of a country what they ought to have done for them must be wisely chosen. The present theory of elections indulges in pure fiction regarding the voter's information and intelligence. The average voter votes blindly because he does not know what the theory of government assumes that he knows. He is not possessed of sufficient information regarding candidates to vote intelligently, and he cannot be so possessed of intelligence because there are too many elective offices which demand his attention.

The short ballot reduces the problems of the electorate by decreasing the number of offices to be filled by popular decision, and by decreasing them does not limit the right of the citizens to select their own government. Citizens of Illinois have the opportunity to get the short ballot by voting in November for the calling of a constitutional convention.

Many habits of American life, awkward, careless habits, resulting in errors which in turn have injurious consequence, come from the insistence of English tradition and its dominance over continental intelligence. For instance, we measure distance and time as awkwardly as possible, allowing the largest opportunities for error. Such measurements are intimate to and consequential in daily normal life. In these cases and in others the American people would be wise to come out of their inertia and accept methods which permit of the needed accuracy and precision.

THE TRIBUNE believes in the efficacy of national policies giving the nation universal military service, a comprehensive program of labor and industry, the short ballot, the metric system, and the twenty-four hour clock.

MARCHING TO DRUM BEAT.

The United States has less compulsory rationing than the other nations at war, friends or enemies. For the most part it tries to get ahead with results by suggestion and indication, exhortation and recommendation. The plan does not work as well as it ought, because of a human disposition to let George do the volunteering. That general characteristic of the volunteer system is found in rationing as well as in fighting.

Nevertheless, directly and indirectly, by compulsion or by suggestion, we are approaching in theory or in fact a mode of life in which we do what we are told to do by communities and masses. Japanese national discipline may owe some of its steadfastness to the old Japanese sumptuary scheme which was about as meticulous a classification of human beings and as precise a definition of their mode of life, privileges in life, and obligations to life as the world ever saw.

That was a caste and class system, but it helped establish the national discipline which makes Japan strong today. Necessity is trying to teach us mass discipline, indicating or ordering how much cloth the tailor may use, how much beef the individual may use, how much sugar and how much wheat, indicating what materials may go in shoes and how much, how much gas and electricity may be used, what kinds of coal, etc.

It is not highly effective regulation and control, but it is tightening all the time and if voluntary subscription by the individual does not bring results we may look for more compulsion.

We might hope for a lasting benefit out of all this, a benefit in national discipline, which could be given practical turn in a big fashion later. The American nation never learned much about marching to drum beat, in unison, with the individual keeping step in the mass for the good of the public.

Possibly we may get a new sense of order and coöperation even out of our half measures of control, a sense which will find expression in great national enterprises.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Revised conceptions of the league of nations now contemplate two leagues—the continuance upon different terms and in different conditions of the plan of stabilizing by two combinations and a balance of power.

The French do not consider a league of nations including Germany as within possibility. The British concede that nothing promises to produce soon a Germany which could fit into the general league of nations.

There is a central European alliance to be considered and dealt with, the probability being that it will conduct itself and arrange its affairs to suit itself.

The league of nations, if it be brought into form, would be a combination of the nations outraged by Germany's aggressiveness and brutality. It might be the most altruistic combination of nations the world ever knew. Its precautions against disturbance might be the most stanch. Its procedures might be valid for its purposes. But it is apparent that no such scheme offers an assurance of universal world peace because it carries with it an acceptance of distrust and dislike of another combination and of terms of rivalry with it.

Consequently the objections which optimists and illusionists raise against the development of national strength in the United States lose considerable force. The powerful nations arrayed against Germany are not contemplating brotherhood with Germany. The French reject the thought as odious.

We are not sitting in expectation of a general and enduring peace. We are looking forward to rivalry in different forms of combination, to its modification and not to its elimination.

The United States will not be a worse member of a league of nations for being a strong member of it, and of any league which is in prospect it will be a valuable member only as it is a strong member.

PROTECTING SOLDIERS' FAMILIES.

The war has undoubtedly imposed a special hardship on many landlords, but if the assertions of Col. MacChesney are correct there are likewise many who are seeking in turn to impose hardships on the families of men engaged in military service. Certainly both the lawyers and the courts should exercise every effort to protect these families from eviction. If it appears that the landlords are thereby compelled to suffer an unusual burden it ought to be the business of the federal or state authorities to give them relief.

Editorial of the Day

OSBORN VS. FORD.

[From the Milwaukee Sentinel.]

More impressive, as we think, than any of the other and more personal allegations against the Ford fusion proposition made by Mr. Osborn is the general implication of his statement that "the democratic proposal has for its purpose the disintegration of the Republican party in Michigan."

Now that certainly is not a right motive for fusion. Our understanding is that on the "politics is adjourned" and nationalism above partyism principles the only considerable warrant for party fusion on the Ford candidacy would be that such action was necessary to prevent the election of an unloyal or un-American candidate.

No such situation appears to obtain in Michigan. Then why the fusion?

Moreover, Michigan is a strongly Republican state. So it would seem that if there had to be fusion the selection of the fusion candidate and the general initiative would come more logically from the majority party than the minority.

It is said that Mr. Ford is a Republican. We do not know positively as to that.

To the mild extent of having in the past usually voted the Republican ticket (the last presidential election is not one of them) on the rare occasions when he voted at all he may be so. But he certainly is not enough of a Republican to give the Democrats any uneasy sense of "adjourning politics" by supporting him.

As the most advertised man in the country, with money to burn, and with a large and, we presume, deserved reputation for support the war patriotism to wash the taste of inexpressibly flighty peace ship fiasco out of the public mouth, Mr. Ford should on the face of it poll a large vote.

But we doubt extremely if his naive statement to the effect that he is President Wilson's hand picked candidate will do his candidacy any good. The Republican party will want to do its own picking; and the state generally will hardly relish the idea of turning popular elections into presidential selections.

Against Mr. Osborn Mr. Ford will surely have a fight on his hands, and his unfortunate pre-war gambols and pacifism and some other things will be made the most of by his opponent, who will ask and give no quarter and whose war attitude is unassailable.

Mr. Ford is very useful to the county where he is, and is unexcelled in his specialty; but no man can be everything, and there is nothing to show that Mr. Ford possesses qualifications of the sort to make him particularly useful in the senate. Whereas Mr. Osborn has the sort of training and experience in public life which Mr. Ford lacks.

PARTIALITY.

Customer—Here, waiter, what is this shoestring in my soup?

Waiter—Please lower your voice, sir. Don't let that gentleman at the next table hear you. He's dined here regularly for a year and we've never thrown in anything for him."—Brooklyn Citizen.

THE MAN ON LEAVE

BY PRIVATE PEAT.

"Gosh! It's old Pete back! How's things, son? How's the old town looking? Been down the Strand? Seen the girl, Pete? Ever a glimpse of my missus? Any new songs, Pete? What's doing along the front, anyway? Any papers, Pete?"

O, THAT is only a few of the questions. They are shot at a fellow like bullets from a Lewis gun the minute his leave is up and he touches the mother mud of a Flanders trench again.

I don't know which is the better—going on leave or coming back—that is, coming back once the parting with the folks is over and the welcome from the boys is near ahead. Gee—it's good, that welcome. Aye, and they give a good send-off to a fellow, too. Not a trace of envy in a word of one, though many a heart is aching for a sight of wife or sweetheart or it may be "dad."

O, it's a great old war, is this. "A mental war," said some one to me the other day. A war when thoughts have power and united minds are weight.

"Gee, fellows, I had a time!"

"Tell us."

It's good, man, to crouch down on the firestep again. Good, by George, to see the grimy faces under the steel helmets of pals again. A fellow looks round the circle. There's a strange face yonder and another further back.

"Where's Shorty?"

"Got his Blighty—go on, tell us what you did—where you've been? Did you see the shows—what's on at the good old Hipp?"

"Where's Ginger?"

"Gone west!" Momentarily the voices soften into silence, then: "Say, do tell something of something, man. We go out tonight. Brice is next on the leave list and he's kicking to hear if the old village is still there. Go on, do!"

Go on—what to tell first.

"Been through an air raid, fellows. You should have seen them potting those planes. Neatest bit of work."

"O, aye—but that's fighting. Tell us about things—something worth while."

"Well, I made the boat. Wasn't a bit sick crossing, not on your life. Folkestone, same old spot, chaps. My, you should see the canteen now, fellows. Girls! All the best lookers in the kingdom. Boat train—Charing Cross. Boys, but the dirty station looked good.

"Came in, on the 3:15—some train. None of you fellows struck it yet? The 'leave' train, they call it. All the wives and sweethearts and kids and mothers in creation down at the barrier. Interpreters at the barrier, Women's Emergency corps at the barrier, tidy uniform theirs, V. A. D.'s at the barrier, Volunteer Reserve, Boy Scouts and Girl Guides at the barrier. Say, fellows, if there's not a friend to meet you, you can make a uniformed friend two seconds before you can bat an eye.

"More canteen—guide to the Record office. Say, fellows, a body soon learns his way to the pay room. Back to the good old Union Jack club for a bath and shave, then to a real live, decent hotel.

"Stayed at the Regent palace, boys. Some spot!

"Then went to call on 'her'—look, snaps."

The boys are favored and they know it. It is in the full happiness of a radiant heart that they are allowed a peep at the latest snap of "her."

Then the sergeant comes along and questions commence once more. Behind the door of a dugout one can catch a glimpse of the lieutenant pretending not to listen. Poor chap, his leave is not on the list this three months yet to come.

I took my own first leave from Convalescent home without a pass. I was lucky, though, no red caps stopped me. Red caps are the M. P.'s—military police—"nosy devils" is yet another and less complimentary title, outcome of their trade.

There was "that girl" to see, and the convalescent camp was in considerable confusion anyhow. Not fully organized, no detailed sergeants. I had no money, either—that is, English money—but I reckoned that a small matter. With a pass I could have traveled free; without I must show a ticket. A day in town I had to have. It was only a four hour run to the city at all events. I was determined and fate was kind.

It was a damp, muggy day, and my half lung bothered a bit, while my right shoulder, bandaged and slung in white wrappings, was not too comfortable. There was a matter of nearly five miles to walk to the railroad station, the safest railroad station for the purpose. To this day I don't know how I made it. I reached the depot, and then the booking clerk nearly finished me. He refused to take the French money I had—all I had.

I offered him my watch as security—it's a heavy gold one. No good. I don't know what madness I contemplated, five mile tramp—hard with unhealed wounds, and through sticky mud! An imperial officer came to my rescue.

"I'll change your money, Canuck," he said, and I bless his cheery face to this day.

I triumphed over the clerk and gained London and the girl. Aye, and back to camp again without another encounter with authority. But that was a risky chance to take, and not one to be taken often.

To the American mothers and fathers who are anxious about their boys who go on leave, I would assure them that unless they deliberately seek mischief, they cannot well get into it. There are clubs everywhere in the cities of France and in the cities of England—they all cater for the wants and wishes of the soldier on furlough. There are Y. M. C. A. huts, Knights of Columbus huts, Tipperary clubs, branches of the Union Jack club, Overseas clubs, and scores of private individuals who are registered for the entertainment of the boy from France. A dozen times a day folk will stop him in the street and ask him cordially whether he is having a good time, whether he can be entertained better, whether he has any friends to whose home he can go—just to have an hour at a cheerful fireside.

There is no need for a boy to write as did one young fellow from Philadelphia the other day to his mother: "If some one would only let me sit for half an hour in her living room—I don't want entertainment, just to sit in a home!"

The folks in the old country have realized the longing for a "living room." They have realized the menaces which surround the boy on leave from an earthly hell. He gets all the freedom he wants, but he is watched.

He cannot get drink unless he goes to any amount of trouble and long waiting. No whisky has been made in England for over two and a half years. The American lad won't care for the English beer, even if he has the patience when he is thirsty to wait hours for the few minutes' opening of the saloon bars—it never happens that one is thirsty at opening hours.

There are scores of volunteer reserve men watching and ever again watching. There are regular policemen, and there are 650 policewomen in good old London alone, watching—watching.

There is no need to fear the moral welfare of the American boys. Sanely balanced as the vast majority of them are, they are not inclined to riotous living at worst, and the best which can be offered in war times is offered with open handed hospitality by the folk of the old land. We Canucks met with a generosity unparalleled—the Anzacs met with, the South Africans, the men of the smaller dependencies—there is no question of the reception of the great blood brothers who are come to complete the conquest by democracy.

HAY FEVER.

JUST 100 years ago the first earnest, careful studies of hay fever were being made. An Englishman, Bostock, had often heard the people talk about a form of severe cold which came on in early autumn. Even at that time it was known as hay fever. For hundreds and maybe more than a thousand years before that date the disease had been known and occasionally written about, but Bostock investigated it so thoroughly for that time and wrote about it so clearly that he focussed attention on it.

Having gotten a hearing, he continued to pile up treatises on the subject until he had laid the foundation for what is now known about the disease. The discussion in that day and for fifty years thereafter was as to whether pollen or ordinary dust was the larger factor in causing the disease.

In the centennial year Beard wrote about nervousness as a factor in hay fever. He noted that it ran in families and that the families subject to it also were subject to asthma, convulsions, urticaria, and other conditions in which an on-edge nervous system was a factor.

In 1883 Sajous wrote that the persons who had hay fever had an idiosyncrasy. They have acquired a sensitiveness toward and are poisoned by pollens to which the ordinary person in no way reacts. The more recent and more exact information on which we are now working develops out of the theory proposed by Sajous. In 1887 Sir Andrew Clark advocated the theory that there were three necessities for hay fever. First, an exciting agent—pollen; second, a neurotic constitution, and third, some local disease in the nose.

In 1903 Dunbar produced an antitoxin for hay fever making use of pollens with horses, as diphtheria toxin is used to produce diphtheria antitoxin. The more recent efforts to produce a hay fever remedy have been in the direction of improving upon the Dunbar treatment by avoiding some of his mistakes.

The name, hay fever, shows that the earlier opinions were that the disease was caused by hay. The people had this idea and had given the disease this name before Bostock's time. The name, rose cold, indicates that the pollen of roses may be the cause of spring hay fever. Others of the more than a score of names by which the disease is known indicate beliefs that it may be caused by still other pollens. Until a few years ago the comon opinion was that golden rod pollen was the chief cause of hay fever.

The most active investigator of recent years is Scheppegrell. His great contribution to the total of information consisted in proving which pollens cause hay fever and which do not. Golden rod has been acquitted of responsibility. Roses do not have much to do with the disease. Speaking generally, spring hay fever is due to grass pollen and autumn hay fever is due to ragweed. Sage pollen is a prolific cause.

The pollen granules cause hay fever by reason of the irritation of the spicales which cover them and also by reason of the albumins absorbed from them. Plants with large, heavy pollen granules are not likely to cause the disease. The small, light granules of other plants are easily swept up by the wind and carried considerable distances. In consequence, the air is more charged with them and they reach those capable of being harmed by them.

The pollen of grass and hay always are large granules. In consequence, not many people have spring hay fever even though these grasses are very widespread. That of ragweed is small and light and, in consequence, is picked up by the wind, charges the air, reaches many people, and causes much suffering.

Scheppegrell organized the American Hay Fever association, an organization which secures the passage and enforcement of weed cutting laws.

The latest work on the cause of hay fever has been an effort to find out why certain people are susceptible to pollens while others are not. The conclusion is that the condition is one of anaphylaxis—a very long and difficult word meaning not much more than sensitiveness. If a person has become overly sensitive to salmon as the result of having been poisoned by it and gets nettle rash whenever he eats it, we say that he is anaphylactic for salmon. His tissues are hair triggered at least so far as salmon is concerned. Even a very small taste of it will poison him.

The nose of a person who has once had hay fever is very sensitive to the pollen which causes it in him. Other illustrations of hyper-sensitiveness are poison ivy, dermatitis, asthma, urticaria, and some kinds of eczema.

It is not necessary to write much about the symptoms of hay fever. The persons who have it know it well enough. They have no difficulty in recognizing what is coming when the first sneeze appears. During the first few days there is a little fever, the temperature going to about 100½. The nostrils and eyes run water. The nose as distinguished from the nostrils is red and somewhat swollen. Sneezing may be persistent. There may be a cough, though usually there is none.

Genuine attacks of asthma may come out of an attack of hay fever. The attacks are very apt to come on with fair regularity on a given date, but the reputation in this particular held by hay fever is not altogether deserved. When careful record is made of the date of onset of even the most regular cases, it is found that there is a good deal of irregularity in the time.

Several years ago it was observed that persons with all kinds of spasmodic disorders were improved by the addition of lime to the diet. Teething children subject to convulsions became less so if they were given lime water. The large amount of lime in milk was thought to be one reason why such children did well on a milk diet. Lime was advised in the treatment of asthma and other diseases in which convulsive phenomena were present.

Lime is usually given in the form of calcium chloride. A common method of giving it is to dissolve four ounces of calcium chloride crystals in a pint of distilled water. Of this one teaspoonful is taken in water after each meal. Note that the salt employed when this quantity is used is the crystal. Some persons put the lime water into dough and bake the dough into bread. Some persons who cannot stand the taste of calcium chloride take calcium lactate.

Calcium does not give immediate relief. It is supposed to cure when it does cure by changing the chemistry of the body in some way, and that takes time. Some hold that in order to prevent hay fever from coming in the fall it is necessary to commence taking lime the winter before. It is certain that it does more good when taken a month before the hay fever season begins. The dose of calcium chloride taken is about forty-five grains a day.

Wilson says that a man who drinks a pint of milk a day gets more lime than one who takes a teaspoonful of the lime mixture three times a day. That amount of calcium chloride will do no harm, Wilson says.

"Some hay fever patients taking not less than forty-five grains of calcium chloride daily even for a short time are practically relieved from all hay fever symptoms," he adds. "It may be taken for an indefinite time without any apparent injury. It is not indispensible in all cases for a hay fever patient to take calcium chloride over a long period of time in order to secure relief. The clinical results from the administration of calcium chloride in cases of hay fever are such as to warrant its further trial."

Another method of treatment consists in removing enlarged turbinate bones, straightening deviated septums, draining accessory cavities, and still other kinds of local treatment of the nose. Following the paper by Clark there was a long period in which this was a favorite treatment of hay fever. There is no question but that the treatment cured some people. Local treatment of the nose is still followed by many physicians as a treatment for this disease, but no one will say that it is as popular as it was ten years ago. In some cases spots in the nose are burned with caustic. In others pieces of bone are removed.

The Hollopeter treatment grew out of the local treatment method. Hollopeter washes out both nostrils with a solution of one and one-half ounces each of bicarbonate of soda and borax, one ounce of carbolic acid, and two ounces of glycerin in a pint of water. After the washing he thoroughly scrubs the entire inside of the nose and naso-pharynx with cotton on an applicator. He then dries the membrane with fresh cotton, and applies menthol and camphor dissolved in albolene.

Menthol, campho, soda, and borax and remedies of that type is, as far as any wise person will go in the way of a nose application. No one is ever justified in snuffing cocaine or morphine or any hay fever remedy of unknown composition into his nose for hay fever.

The climate cure for hay fever is about the best that we know of now. A person with a hay fever history should try to find a district in which the pollen that causes his attacks does not abound. For instance, if a certain man is poisoned by sage pollen he had better keep away from the Rocky mountain country, even though many people escape the disease in that section.

The best reports come from the region around Lake Superior, the mountain region of northern New England, the Rocky mountain country, and the far south, though there are people who have hay fever in each of these sections. A man can sometimes steal a march on his nemesis by crossing parallels of latitude and thus escaping the plants that trouble him or escaping their pollinating seasons.

It was cleamied for the Dunbar serum or antitoxin that it cured more than 50 per cent of those that used it. That it cured a large number is true, but I do not think that any one now claims that it cures as many as 50 per cent.

Probably the newest treatment is known as the desensitization treatment. It is now definitely established that hay fever results from sensitizing to pollen. The desensitization treatment consists in such use of pollens as will remove this exquisite sensitiveness. This treatment is now under trial. Reports from its use are good.

From the community standpoint the proper method of hay fever prevention is the cutting of weeds according to the plan of the American Hay Fever association. The Journal of the American Medical association says it is reported that this method has reduced hay fever in New Orleans 50 per cent in one season.

NO CURE.

Anxious Reader writes: "[1] What is progressive muscular dystrophy of the generalized type? [2] Is there a cure? If so, what is it? [3] Where can we obtain any information on the care and treatment of a patient with this trouble? Ordinary physicians seem to know very little about it."

REPLY.

There is very little that I can write, since very little is known about this group of diseases. They run in families. They are hereditary. They develop in childhood, progress slowly in most cases and are incurable. No treatment appears to have curative value. The symptoms of a given case depend on the muscles involved in that case.

The onset is gradual. A certain group of muscles becomes very weak without at the same time wasting. On the contrary, the affected muscles not infrequently stand out as though they were unusually well developed. Eventually the weak muscles also waste.

In a more usual form the affected child stands with his shoulders thrown back, his abdomen protruding, and the small of his back greatly bowed. The calves of his legs are prominent. This posture results from the weakness of the muscles of the back.

Trembling is not a feature of the disease, as is the case with so many progressive wasting diseases of the muscles.

There is no cure.

As to where you can read about the disease, I can only suggest that you get a standard work on nervous diseases and a medical dictionary and study it out for yourself. What you learn will scarcely repay you for your trouble.

MILKER'S PALSY.

F. G. writes: "From milking sixteen cows my hands and wrists get very weak and numb. The cords in my wrists ache most of the time. Any position my arms are in for more than a minute they become numb and tingle so that it is some time before I can use them."

REPLY.

You are suffering from milker's palsy. It is the result of over fatigue. I suggest that you take up some other work for a year. The muscles and nerves affected need a rest.

SCHOOL CERTIFICATES.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Does a boy 16 years of age require a school certificate to obtain employment? J. K. W.

The child labor law of Illinois does not require any minor over the age of 16 years to have an employment certificate in order to work. However, many employers, in order to protect themselves, require some proof of age of boys and girls over 16 years. It is always well for these boys and girls to get a school record from the principal of the school before they leave school; also some evidence of their age, such as a birth certificate, a baptismal record, an insurance policy, etc., to present to the employer.

IS ALIEN ENEMY.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I came to this country from Germany with my parents. My father died a year later. My older brother has been naturalized, and one brother was born in the United States. I have never married. Am I a German alien?
A. B.

Yes; your brother's naturalization does not confer citizenship upon you nor does the fact that another brother was born in the United States affect your citizenship.

FORTY-NINTH STREET OPENING.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Friend of the People.]—When will Forty-ninth street between Roscoe and Addison streets be opened? G. W.

A petition of the property owners presented to the board would serve to start necessary condemnation proceedings.
EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

DISPOSITION OF BROTHER'S ESTATE.

Galena, Ill., July 3.—[To the Legal Freind of the People.]—A widower dies intestate; his only relatives are two brothers and the children of a dead brother. Who inherits? J. F.

Assuming property in Illinois, the estate would be divided into three shares, two shares going to the brothers, the remaining share to the children of the deceased brother.

REGARDING PEDDLERS' LICENSE.

Chicago, July 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I make ladies' aprons. Can I sell them from house to house without a license? G. M.

No. You would need a peddler's license if you delivered at the time of taking the order. You would need no license if you took the order and delivered the goods on a subsequent trip.

SALOON "CAVEMEN."

Chicago, June 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is unfortunate that the possession of an exceedingly dry gullet obliges me to occasionally indulge in the reprehensible practice of visiting saloons in various parts of our, so to speak, fair city. In addition to fulfilling the primary purpose of such visits, I have been amazed at the interesting war data I have been enabled to gather. To the innocent and unsuspecting mind it might seem that patriotism only attained the full effulgence of its glory in the trenches, in the hospital, or the munitions plant. Go to any saloon, or rather send an expert (male) stenographer and when you read his report, you will be amazed to find, in addition to an intimate knowledge of the innermost recesses of the minds of Foch, Lloyd George, Hindenburg, and the kaiser, the fact there are so many strong and sturdy patriots sailing lonesome on the waters of indifference awaiting a "chance" to do their bit. Why not round up these strong jawed heroes? Give them the chance for which their fighting blood so lustily craves. Open up recruiting offices so that they have a chance to nobly sacrifice themselves on the altar of their patriotic desire. You cannot expect the strong cavemen of the saloon to feel they are doing their bit by buying thrift stamps, giving nickels to the Red Cross, and the lending of an odd fifty (at interest) to Uncle Sam. For women and children, very good, but, bah! blood and more blood for the saloon warriors. Think what little meat for mighty men standing at a parade is when they might be impaling Huns on each finger. Do something for them. Do not leave them to languish in loud, inglorious impotence.
EARL CASPER.

CABARET CAMOUFLAGE.

Chicago, July 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is the understanding of the writer that the allied armies can always use men that are efficient in the art of camouflage, and if that is correct why not draft the services of some of the owners of the "dry cabarets"?

The owners of some of these places are using camouflage, and while it is crude and in some places rough they are getting by with it successfully as far as the police are concerned.

In one south side place the whites and blacks mingle like flies over a piece of sugar, drink and dance together, and run as late as 5 o'clock in the morning. Persons going there need not have any fear of being misused, because there are always police there in plain clothes.

The strange part of it is the fact that they have a right to sell "soft drinks" only, but one can obtain plenty of "hard liquor" without any trouble. I suppose that if the captain of police of that district were to try and stop the "black and tan" from mixing that he would suffer the same as Capt. Max Nootbaar.

Is Mayor "Willie" trying to put over a little "camouflage" to get the colored vote by allowing these places to run wild?
JOHNNY JONES.

IRISH UNANIMITY.

Chicago, June 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your issue of June 22 Lord Dunmore is quoted as saying: "The Irish can't agree as to what they want."

Nothing could better illustrate the lack of humor in the noble lord than his putting such an excuse to a people who are accustomed to accept without a word of objection the decision of the majority in the bitterest political contest. We "agree" in this country when a single vote turns the scale.

But by the noble lord's standard of agreement the Irish come very much nearer to agreeing as to what they want than we did to agreeing to what we wanted in the last national election, for instance. All of the Irish, except some few in the five or six northeast counties of one of the four great provinces, are for home rule, whereas out of more than eighteen and one-half million votes cast at our last general election there was a difference between Hughes and Wilson of only a little over half a million. The Irish are unanimity itself in comparison with that.

The remark of the noble lord is itself a part explanation of what is the trouble over there. It was the inability of the noble lords to learn anything that forced the American colonists to take up arms and establish home rule here.
T. J. NORTON.

ASSISTING THE SOLDIER.

Chicago, July 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Inasmuch as this is the time when every one should do something for those who are going overseas to fight our battles, may I suggest that THE TRIBUNE with its powerful influence, induce some of the trust companies to manage the estates of those who are going "over there" without charge?

The legal profession is giving service without cost and so is that of medicine, and as the banks and trust companies have had a very prosperous year I think they might donate their services to the extent of drawing up wills, etc., without exacting compensation.

Comparatively few soldiers will leave vast estates to manage, so the work would not make much extra labor for their well organized systems for doing this class of service.

I fully realize the difficulty of getting a banker to do anything unless there is "something in it," but do you not think it would be worth the effort to try?

THE CANDLE

By James Branch Cabell.

THE considerate reader will always be in love with Congreve's women; with those lost ladies of a yesteryear which was never almanacked; and with the perennial charm of these delectable girls that never wore rose tinted flesh. For they are in everything preëminently adorable, those mendacious, subtle, pleasure loving, babbling, amorous, volatile, grave, witty, and sumptuous young jillflirts who rule in the Utopia of Gallantry. So all true cognoscenti must stay forever enamored of them; of their pert eyes, their little satin slippered feet, their saucy tiptilted noses, their scornful little carmine mouths, and their fluttering restless little hands—for they were all mignonnes. It is, upon the whole, consoling to reflect that no girls like these were ever confined in impermanent flesh; for then, after setting at most a trio of decades by the ears, they would have grown old, and that tragedy would have been quite unbearable. But since these gallant minxes existed only in romance, their youth remains immortal, and has made glad some seven generations of adorers.

And so the gravest charge which equity can lay against them is that they spoiled Congreve's interest in all other women. . . . But it will not do too closely to consider what unfilial havoc must have been wrought, off and on, by book-women, in the heart life of their begetters. Every romantic artist is a Goriot; and wastes life in adoration of his dream daughters as they move in loftier spheres. . . . Meanwhile, one may well pity this fond lover's wife. For what chance had poor Ann Shakespeare against Beatrice and Cleopatra and Rosalind? Nor will the judicious deny that Isabella Thackeray lost her mind with considerable provocation when her husband was perpetually obsessed now with that red stockinged jade from Castlewood and now with the notorious Mrs. Rawdon Crawley. Even Scott's marriage, they say, was not eminently successful; and you may depend upon it that at the bottom of the trouble was one Mistress Diana Vernon of Osbaldistone Hall, in the Cheviots. Indeed, the more perspicacious will have no manner of doubt that Catherine Dickens was driven into a separation through Charles' impending affair with that Wilfer girl, coming as it did upon the heels of his undisguised relations with the first Mrs. Copperfield. . . . But all that, too, is a part of the human sacrifice through which art is yet honored by her zealous servitors. For to be quite contentedly married may be taken as proof positive that a writer has no very striking literary genius, and being unable to outdo nature in creating women, is satisfied to put up with her makeshifts.

To art, then, this William Congreve gave whole-hearted allegiance until he was (like Marlowe) a young fellow of 29. At that age Congreve also died, as an artist. Physically—and it is toward this fact my preamble has from the first been making headway—physically Congreve survived for some thirty years thereafter; and during this period wrote not another line. You will search in vain to find another case which really resembles this. At 29 Congreve was the most famous and most widely admired writer of an age distinguished in letters; and at 29 he put aside literature forever, like a coat of last year's cut.

ONE perceives that this spruce gambler for immortality found the game not worth the candle. . . . Or the real economy which is practiced by the creative writer I have just spoken; yet this unhumanly rational course of life is adopted but as a shield against entire extinction, and proverbially every shield has two sides. I find it on record that the obverse—the not so rational, and therefore more human side—of this buckler against oblivion was fairly presented by another fine literary artist, whose warped soul inhabited the crooked body of Alexander Pope. "Men will remember me. Truly a mighty foundation for pride when the utmost I can hope for is but to be read in one island, and to be thrown aside at the end of one day. Indeed, I am not even sure of that much. I print, and print, and print. And when I collect my verses into books I am altogether uncertain whether to look upon myself as a man building a monument or burying the dead. It sometimes seems to me that each publication is but a solemn funeral of many wasted years. For I have given all to the verse making. Granted that the sacrifice avails to rescue my name from oblivion, what will it profit me when I am dead and care no more for men's opinions?"

And Wycherley is asserted to have agreed with the inimitable hornet of Twickenham. "There was a time," says Wycherley, "when I, too, was foolishly intent to divert the leisure hours of posterity. But reflection assured me that posterity had, thus far, done very little to place me under that or any other obligation. Ah, no! Youth, health, and a modicum of intelligence are loaned to most of us for a while, and for a terribly brief while. They are but loans, and time is waiting greedily to snatch them from us. For the perturbed usurer knows that he is lending us, perforce, these priceless possessions, and that till our lease runs out we are free to dispose of them as we elect. Now, had I more jealously devoted my allotment of these treasures toward securing for my impressions of the universe a place in yet unprinted libraries, I would have made an investment from which I could not possibly have derived any pleasure and which would have been to other people of rather dubious benefit."

In very much this fashion it would seem that Congreve reasoned. Like Wycherley, Congreve in his first youth wrote in a manner that will always delight the elect, because the desire to write perfectly of beautiful happenings was, with him also, innate; and throughout all this thrice polished writing he presented so irresistibly a plea for what I have called the Gallant attitude toward life, that in the end he converted himself. One must make the best of this world as a residence; keep it as far as possible a cheery and comfortable place; practice urbanity toward the other transient occupants; and not think too despondently nor too often of the grim Sheriff, who arrives anon to dispossess you, no less than all others, nor of any subsequent and unpredictable legal adjustments—that is what the creed of Gallantry came to (long before Congreve played with verbal jewelry under the later Stuarts) when Horace first exhorted well bred persons to accept life's inconveniences with a shrug—amara lento temperent risu—and to make the most of their little hour of youth and sunlight in Augustan Rome; and the tent maker sang to very much the same burden from the Naishápúr of Malik Shah, when the Plantaganets were not yet come into England.

But Congreve was more humanly logical than these elder skeptics, who kept on laboriously refining phrases about the vanity, among so many other vanities, of writing at all. For he devoted thirty very pleasant years to gourmandizing and good wine, and to innumerable lovely women—who, though not Millamants, to be sure, were chosen solely on account of obvious merits, from the greenroom and the peerage impartially—and to reading new books, and to making much brilliant and quite profitless talk with other equally amiable and well to do and indolent fine gentlemen. And he undertook for the remainder of his life no heavier responsibility than to sign on every quarter-day a receipt for a salary of secretary of Jamaica, and perhaps every once in a while to wonder where Jamaica might be.

INDEED, to all of us who have essayed the word-game, at which one plays for a dole of remembrance in our former lodgings after the Sheriff has haled us hence, there comes at times a dispiriting doubt as to whether the game is worth the candle. Potent and honey-sweet, very certainly, is the allure of this desire to write perfectly of beautiful happenings; for all that, it may well be the contrivance of some particularly sardonic minded devil; and beyond doubt, if follow the desire you must, you will be the wiser for scrutinizing its logic none too closely. You had best yield blindly to the inborn instinct, and write as well as you possibly can, much as the coral zoophyte builds his atoll, without any theorizing. Assuredly you have not time to count how many candles are being squandered, or what precisely is their value. . . . For here, too, we cross the trail of another dynamic illusion.

Of the Dive Bouteille I have spoken at sufficient length. Apart from this sort of sacrifice, however, the literary artist who is really in earnest must be content to do without any number of desirable human traits which he cannot afford. . . . Thus, although modesty may seem to him a most engaging virtue, his mainstay in life must always be an exaggerated and thrice exaggerated opinion of his own value. Should he once admit that what he sets about is by any possibility not the most important thing in the universe, and quite incommensurate by every day criterions, then his æsthetic grave is already mounded: for the sole alternative is that he writes reading matter, which is as much as codfish or clocks or honorary college degrees a recognized staple commodity. He has thus his choice between the inconveniences of appearing to responsible people what is popularly termed a gloomy ass, or of figuring even in his own mind as a verbal huckster. Since write he must, he is restricted either laboriously to pleasure his ideals or his paymasters, and can but pick between being a paranoiac or a prostitute.

Then, too, he must avoid all persons whose tastes are similar to his, and so is condemned to continuous loneliness. Were there nothing else, the romantic artist is a parasite on human life, in the manner of a mistletoe seed, which roots in the oak, draws nutriment therefrom, and so evolves a more delicate type of life, that does but very slightly resemble an oak tree. And parasites cannot thus nourish one another, nor can the artist come by serviceable notions of ordinary life in the society of his abnormal peers. I grant you that distinguished men of letters have often formed coteries, but it was after their best work was done: and I take it that each fact in part explains the other.

Besides, the literary artist who aims to be even more than a valued contributor to magazines, and hopes through ensuing ages to rank above kings, cannot but despise the fellow typist who thinks only of royalties: whereas he is inclined to view his rivals in æsthetic endeavor with very much the complacency of a teased cobra. . . . Thus doomed to live with wholesome folk, the artist cannot afford to make a sane and candid estimate of his work's importance. The tide of circumstance sets so strong against belief in its amounting to anything whatever, that he can but despairingly essay to counterbalance affairs by virtue of a megalomaniac's confidence alike in the worth of what he is resolved to do and in his fitness to perform it immeasurably better than any one else.

His daily associates, for whose intelligence (and there is the rub) he cannot but entertain considerable respect, may see clearly enough that art affords in the last outcome a diversion for vacant evenings, or furnishes a museum to which some people resort only when they accompany their visitors from out of town: but of this verdict the artist must not dare to grant the weighty if not the absolute justice. In fine, he must be reconciled to having most people think him a fool, and to suspecting that they are not altogether mistaken.

LETTER FROM FRANCE

By Capt. John Edward Kelley

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, June 4, 1918.—I don't know that this letter will ever reach you—for over a week I've not had an opportunity to wirte. I am a wanderer lately and have no notion where I may be a day or week hence. If it should reach you, you will know that I am still safe and maybe marvel that I am [illegible]

So much has happened and it has been so terrible that I cannot recall much of it. A week ago last night we were —— captured by the Hun —— and I got away. Everything I had, including all my personal effects, clothes, everything except what I stand in is gone. I am still wearing a pair of long trousers "slacks," for we were at dinner when hades broke loose. We had been in huts outside a village on the Aisne river on Sunday night a week ago. Our dinner was just over when word came to "stand to." The attack started about midnight and continued with a terrible force until sun up and through the day.

We held on through until a big shell hit our hut and demolished it. We had dressed wounded all day. —— of our doctors are missing and ——, stretcher bearers.

About 8 o'clock that night we were ordered to retire to the next village. When we got there the Hun was shelling it badly, and we took up our quarters in what had been a schoolhouse. In front of this building was a large dugout capable of holding —— men. Hughes went into the dugout, and all the rest of the officers went into the schoolhouse, and the servants and cooks set about to prepare a meal. I was very tired by this time and together with the chaplain and the quartermaster went into a side room, where we had seen some blankets, to lie down.

I had slept for about half an hour when Anderson, one of our young officers who had been slightly wounded early in the day, came in, called us to come and get something to eat. As I passed from the room I heard some cheering in the rear yard. First I thought it was some French soldiers. I cautiously opened the door and listened. They were about fifty in number, I judged, and were talking German —not more than twenty or thirty feet from me.

You can imagine my sensation. I stepped into the room where the other officers were—warned them, and then went into the dugout in front to warn Hughes. They all doubted me. Hughes came up and we all got near the open back door. The colonel thought it must be some sort of French patois. He found an old French woman in the yard, who came to listen also, and she agreed with me that they were "Allemand"—(German). It was decided that we were probably surrounded, and Hughes suggested that we go into the dugout and at least have a chance of being taken alive.

We all went out the front door and started toward the front of the dugout. I had put on my water bottle, haversack, and tin hat and picked up my cane. The rest did the same. When we got to the entrance of the dugout we stopped for a few seconds and suddenly in front of us appeared a mob of Germans, with bayonets fixed, and demanding our surrender. We, of course, held up our hands. It was pretty dark and they could not quite make us out.

As the procession started down the steps I suggested to the colonel that we make a break for it—which we did. We darted toward the barnyard with the Boche yelling and shooting at us. Here we were separated somehow, and I made for the main road. After continuing along here a few yards I decided to cut off toward some hills southwest, as that direction seemed safe. I entered a small field, when suddenly as though they had sprung from the ground I saw between me and freedom what appeared to be a whole battalion of soldiers. I dropped as noiselessly as possible to the ground and listened. German talk again. My last hope had vanished.

They were marching from the rear toward our village and were encircling the spot where I was lying. They were called to a halt and then they sat down. My heart certainly was doing a trip-hammer stunt. I decided I was too close to them, and that I would crawl away on my back. During this operation my cane struck against my tin hat and made quite a noise. About a dozen of them jumped up and called out, "Who is that?" I thought I might as well chuck in my hand, as daylight would surely find me out—but I did not.

They sent up two small lights, which made my spot look as though the calcium had been turned on; but even then they did not see me. They sat down again, then two of them started in my direction. This time I was certain it was all off.

When about fifteen feet away they sat down and started to smoke their pipes. As they were lighted up I could see their faces clearly, and I would know them again any place on earth. For about three-quarters of an hour I lay there in the wet. At the end of that time they got up and resumed their march.

When they were well away I arose and made for the hills, only to walk into a deep and muddy marsh. As I progressed I saw my plight was getting worse, so I dragged back to the path—and on to it. I had not gone fifty yards before I saw another company of Boches coming toward me. I lay down in the marsh; they all passed by and very close to me. After about fifteen minutes I tried again and managed to crawl to a woods. I straightened up and hurried on, always southwest, with the north star as a guide, and after about a half hour more I walked into our own newly formed front lines. Here I was challenged and let through safely.

I walked all night—very wet and cold. The next morning about 7 I met the colonel—he had been in the same marsh and had almost the same experience.

I have been going back and attaching myself where I may for sleep and rations. I have no clothes and am still borrowing to wash and shave. I do not know where I shall eventually end up or how I shall get clothes—I got this paper from an American canteen. I also had some tea biscuits and chocolate.

It will be necessary for me to completely refit if I can get some place where things can be purchased. I got a handkerchief and a pair of socks from a French canteen—otherwise I have nothing. We have no longer any regular mail service, so I have only a faint hope this will reach you.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JULY

Into the Past.

YESTERDAY the hepatica were white upon slopes where but a while before the snow was white and the hepatica were promise of violets and blue bird. Yesterday violets were thick among the yellow leaves and yesterday trilliums were flecks of white throughout the woods and the promise was the shad bush blossom and the perfume of the blossoming thorn. Yesterday the thorn was in bloom and the wood thrush sang and the promise was the wild rose.

Yesterday the wild rose opened its red bud and dropped its petals in the perfumes of a June day. Every promise of the future hurries into the past, the traveler with quickening pace and growing pack, traveling the speedier as it increases its burden, reaching to seize the present before it can come out of the prospect in form and color.

Yesterday is heavy with the promises of tomorrow. The pack of life grows larger with every fair assurance with which the future lured the expectation and experience, greedier with age, fleeter of foot as it takes more steps, so crowds upon sensation that beauty is a memory before it has been sensed. The helianthus is a yellow crown in the thickets. The song of the wood thrush is gone.

LEAVES FROM A NOTEBOOK

By Henry J. Allen.

AS I have traveled through miles of hospitals this week, I have found myself unconsciously grouping men into certain national classifications. There were assembled wounded of all the nations at war, for these hospitals were serving that part of the line where all our allies have troops. Some of the classifications are traceable to those fundamental things which belong to the local backgrounds of their lives. For example, I find from talking to our own men in hospitals that the thing they dread the most in battle is gas. Last summer in Italy I discovered that the thing the Italians most dreaded was the battle mace of the Austrians, and the thought of gas attack did not engage their imaginations. It's a peculiarity with which the Germans seem familiar, for they use the battle mace on Italians and gas on Americans.

The American, like the Britisher, isn't afraid of anything which he can fight in the open. It is the belief over here that he's going to make the wickedest man in the open field this war has seen. In all his life he has been taught no cunning. He never killed a man with a knife or with slow poison. He isn't afraid of any war club that was ever invented, but he's highly imaginative, sensitive, and when the gas turns loose he hates to put on his gas mask and thus reduce his free working power.

It is a somewhat astonishing departure from preconceived notion to discover that the Frenchman, given to volubility, excited in manner, is really much more stolid than the American. He is less highly strung, and while he effervesces more and has a keener sense of dramatic proportions and a more facile gift for expressing himself, he's really much more of a stoic than the untrained lad from Maine or North Dakota, who never knew until he got here that he had an imagination. Therefore, when gas turns loose the American lad wants to dash through it and go over and end the war at once. After a while he'll learn patience; he'll become more rapid in his adjustment of his mask; more content to stay in his trench with his gas mask on and watch for the chance to get the other fellow without sacrificing himself.

TODAY in one of the French hospitals I ran into one ward which made me realize how all the world is meeting on this mighty western front. It is a hospital just back of a section where an American division is brigaded with the French. It takes men from the field dressing stations. To this particular ward the whole fighting world has sent representatives. There was a lad from Alabama who had lost an arm; a boy from Sweden who had drifted into the foreign legion and who spoke good enough Minnesota English. He had lost his left foot. There was a lean, good looking by without his right arm. I thought from his looks he might be from out near Utah. When I talked to him he said he was from Australia.

There was an Italian who came from I know not where or how, but he was charging the Germans up with the loss of a good right ear. There was a Moroccan who lay deathly sick from a shell wound in the back; near by an American Indian from Nevada slightly wounded. His face was as stolid and emotionless as that of his forest ancestors, but he talked quietly and intelligently. He was a graduate of Carlisle and the only Indian in his regiment. Over in one corner of the big ward were three little yellow men from Indo-China, their blackened teeth shining through friendly grins when one spoke to them words which they did not comprehend. They do not fight, these queer little Anamites from Franco China; they work the roads, but they are often under severe fire.

In a room just twenty-five feet away from this place lay seventy-five wounded German prisoners receiving the same care as that bestowed upon other wounded. I gained a sharper sense of the unreality of real things when in this prisoner hospital I talked for a few moments to a wounded German prisoner who spoke perfect English. He had spent six years in a prosperous business in Chicago, but had rejoined the fatherland a year before the American nation entered the war. He had no foolish illusions. "If America is coming into this with her full power," said he, "God help my unhappy fatherland; the world now fights us." In the hospital I had just left I had heard a man with a shattered leg mutter between his clinched teeth, "Mein Gott."

I knew he wasn't a German prisoner, though in spite of the American uniform at the head of his bed everything about him spoke German. I found that he, too, was from Chicago. He uttered all his words with a strong German accent. But he fought with an American accent. He had volunteered the week our country declared war against Germany; he had in his earlier manhood once been subject to German military authority, and he, too, had no illusions. He knew, just as his racial brother in the prison hospital across the street knew, that the coming of America into this war had been the determinate thing. He loved America; he did not hate Germany, but he did hate the military autocracy which had driven the fatherland into the bloody horror of these unbelievable days. He was unspeakably glad that his wound, painful though it was, would not take him out of the fight.

UNREAL things are always happening in these hospitals. I stood by the bed of a Pennsylvania boy, who spoke with a cheerful voice. One side of his head was bandaged so that I could see but one eye. That eye was cool and normal, so I stopped to visit. "If my girl was here," he said, "I'd get her to write a letter to my mother." Then I discovered that his right arm was bandaged also, and a glance at the dressing revealed the fact that the right hand had been taken off. He wasn't just the type of a boy who wanted to tell his troubles to a man, so I looked over the crowded ward. Bending above the bed of a French soldier not far away was a tall, dark nurse with a high bred face, whom I had heard speaking English. She was the daughter of Clemenceau, the greatest Frenchman of the hour. There was no American or English woman in the hospital, and when I asked this daughter of the first citizen of France if she'd write a letter for a private soldier from Pennsylvania she accepted with a charm that made me happy for that Pennsylvania mother.

The boy had promised to tell his mother the truth about his wound if anything hit him, and he didn't want to tell her that he had lost his hand. So he began by telling her of the shrapnel wound on his face, which he said didn't hurt him much, but would "spoil his fatal beauty." Then he spoke of an injury to his hand which would prevent his writing for—then he looked over at me and said: "How long would it take a fellow to learn to write with his left hand? There is no good telling her I lost my right hand. She'd worry herself sick; she won't mind it so much when I get back and explain it in person."

So the letter, written by this gentle French scribe, containing this "white fib," went on its way to comfort the anxious mother in Pennsylvania, while the nervy lad who had lost his fighting power in his first battle began to adjust himself to the thought of an early trip home.

In the next ward I found a big, good looking sergeant from Buffalo, N. Y. His left leg was gone about four inches below the knee. So I stopped and explained to him the wonders of the artificial limb factory which the American Red Cross is running in France.

ARTIFICIAL limb making is something which cannot be done wholesale by pattern, for no two properly built wooden legs are any more alike than two of flesh and blood. Every leg is an individual, specialized device made for the man who is to wear it and conforming as nearly as mechanical skill can contrive to his remaining one. It must be designed with reference to his height and weight and his normal peculiarity of gait and balance. To this end the utmost care must be exercised in the task of adjustment, for an artificial leg is supposed to have a "life" of at least five years and in that time prove itself a comfortable companion, not an irritating reminder.

In this factory the legs are fashioned after the best and latest American fashion, which has been found to be superior in lightness and flexibility. The wood, willow or basswood, is shipped from the United States in roughed out shapes which have been "cured" for about five years. It comes in what are technically called "set-ups" of five pieces for each leg: thigh, knee block, calf piece, ankle, and foot, the ankle being of hard birch.

In assembling the leg steel joints are set in at knee and ankle and stout leather and rubber hinges provided for the bearing parts of the ball of the foot and the toes. Above the thigh piece comes the laced leather corset to inclose the thigh and take up a large part of the body weight. In cases of amputation at the thigh joint the upper part of the artificial leg is constructed somewhat in the manner of a saddle in which the mutilated man sits atop his new leg. All of the appliances are fitted with broad suspenders of belt webbing which facilitate the lift and forward throw of the leg and make it more nearly a part of the wearer.

In equipping a man with a new leg, after special examination and inquiry have established his right to one, he is required to present himself at the factory with a shoe which he intends to wear with the new limb. Then after he has been weighed and measured a set-up of blocks is selected to suit him and the work begins with the fitting of the foot into the shoe and the hollowing out of the upper block to receive the stump of the leg.

When the leg parts, now no longer rough, but far from finished, are assembled the soldier comes for socket fitting, to make sure that the stump of his leg has no end bearings; in other words, that it fits in the block as a cork fits in a bottle. Next the steel hinges and knee spring are put in, the ankle joint made, and the patient returns for his first "walking fitting."

Now the jointing of knee and ankle must be verified by comparison with the good leg, as must the poise and balance of the body at rest and at the beginning of a stride.

THIS fitting includes walking for only a step or two so that whatever changes in the angle of the leg are necessary may be made and the foot turned to give it and its shoe firm bearing at ball and heel. These changes made, he comes again, and this time to learn to walk.

Said the foreman of this factory to me a few weeks ago: "Some of the men are very quick to learn; with others it is a long and tedious task. Much of the patient's skill in mastering the new device depends upon the time which has elapsed between the amputation and the acquisition of the leg. One soldier whose leg had been taken off less than eight months before was surprisingly apt at learning. He had not had time in which to lose the natural reflexes which as a child had taught him to walk.

When I gave the wounded Buffalo man something of the above explanation you should have seen him light up. "Do you mean," he said, "that I can walk without a crutch?"

"You can," I replied, "with a scarcely perceptible limp. You can jump, run, even tango—you can perform every activity in life except perhaps the job of a telephone lineman."

"I wonder," he said, with genuine wistfulness, "if they wouldn't let me back into the trenches?"

I can't get away from the manner in which these lads from farms, factories, and stores take their medicine.

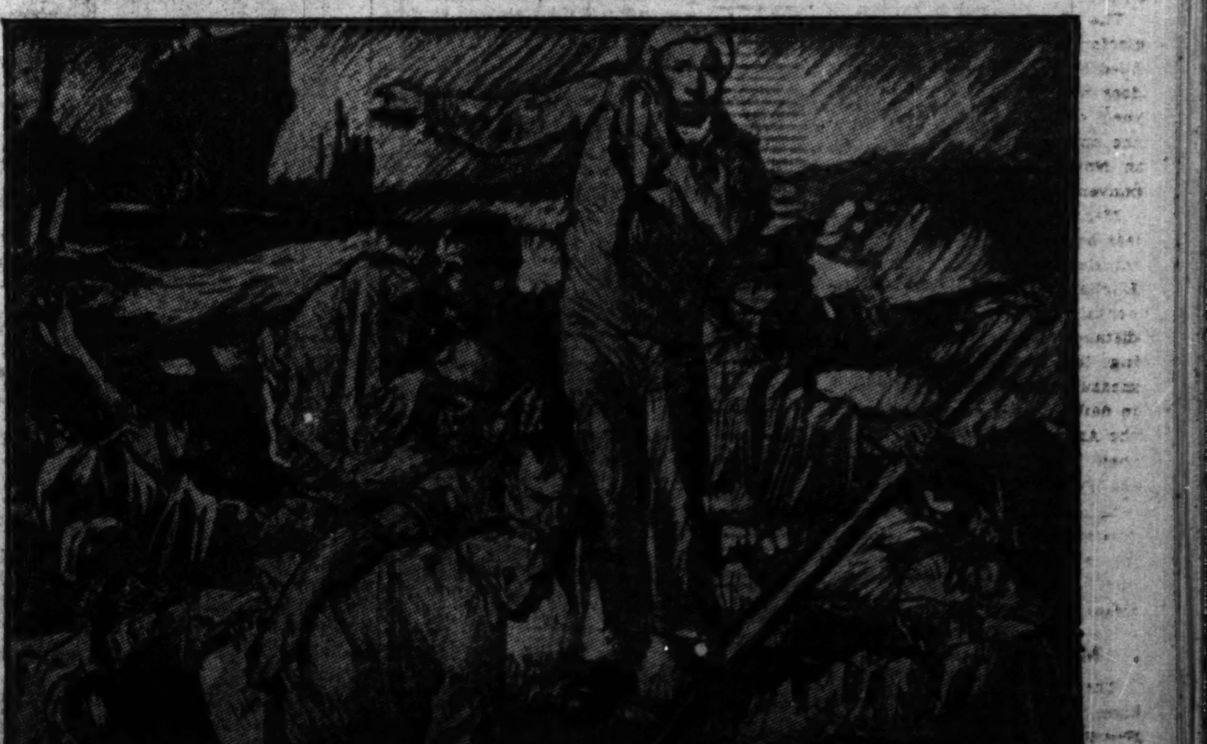
NAVY RECRUITING POSTER—By Frank Brangwyn.



The illustration above is from the booklet issued by the United States navy, containing forty-one reproductions of the recruiting posters used during the first year of the war. It is the department's recognition of its debt to the artists "who came forward with a large heart and for no pay." The entire book is the product of the navy recruiting bureau's printing division, which is composed of men of the navy exclusively. Information concerning the brochure may be had by addressing Paymaster Wells Hawks, U. S. N. R. F., Bureau of Navigation, Navy department, Washington.

News and Comment of MOTORDOM Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

Overheating Isn't Just a Nuisance; It Means Danger

BY HIGH SPEED.

OVERHEATING of the engine is a condition that occurs irrespective of the season of the year, but as might be expected, it is more usual in summer than in winter.

I have never heard of a car owner who enjoyed having his engine overheat and begin steaming, but few drivers realize that this condition, if it becomes more or less chronic, contributes to the rapid deterioration of the power plant. In other words, the average driver looks upon overheating as a nuisance, when in reality it is a positive danger to the engine and should be remedied as quickly as possible.

A number of different causes may lie behind a case of overheating. Some of these causes are mechanical or functional, while others are found in improper operation of the car.

One of the commonest is found in operating the car for too long a period with a retarded spark. The reason for this condition is that when the spark is retarded combustion occurs when the piston is descending, at which time, of course, more of the wall surface of the cylinder is exposed than when the spark occurs as the piston is at the top of its stroke. The large area exposed to the flame of combustion carries an increased amount of heat into the cooling system, the water rapidly becomes heated and boils, with the familiar effect of steam issuing from the radiator cap.

It frequently happens that the driver must run up a steep grade with spark retarded, to prevent the engine from knocking. By the time the car gets to the top of the hill the engine is hot and the water is boiling. If this is a definite characteristic of the particular engine, so that the spark cannot be retarded even for a short hill without overheating, the best plan is to try to determine the fundamental cause of the engine's knocking and cure that, so as to be able to keep the spark somewhat more advanced on grades.

Perhaps the most prevalent cause of overheating is found in carbon deposits in the cylinders and on the piston heads. Carbon deposits cause preignition, because the specks of carbon become incandescent and fire the incoming charge before its proper time. In this way the flame of combustion is propagated when an excessive area of cylinder wall is still exposed, and, as we have noted, extra heat is carried into the cooling water, which quickly boils.

When the engine knocks, overheats, backfires, and there is a noticeable loss of power it may be assumed that the cylinders are heavily carbonized. In this case, of course, carbon removal will obviate the trouble.

Another frequent cause of overheating is an impeded flow of water in the cooling system. If an inspection of the filler cap while the engine is running discloses no sign of water circulation it is evident that something is clogging the system.

Possible causes of impeded circulation will vary with the two different types of cooling systems.

In the thermo-siphon type of cooling system the only thing that will stop the circulation of the water is a direct obstruction in the radiator and engine end of the water system. The first thing to do is to open the drain and permit the water to flow out. The rate of flow will be a certain indication of whether there is an obstruction in this part of the system.

If the radiator proves to be stopped up it is probably due to an accumulation of mud in the lower tank or in the fine cores of the part. The only cure is a thorough cleaning, and except in rare instances this ought to be carried out by a regular radiator repair concern.

It is not unusual for the radiator expert to get anywhere from two to four pounds of muck out of a radiator. It is for this reason that so much emphasis is placed on the need of having the cooling system cleaned out at the beginning of the touring season.

In this connection it may be pointed out that the car owner should be more careful than he usually is about the sort of water he pours into his cooling system. A little foreign matter entering the radiator at each filling quickly grows to an important obstructive mass, clogging up the entire system and causing overheating and attendant ills.

With the pump system of water circulation there is not so much danger of obstruction in this way, because the water is forced around the pipes and jackets, but if anything goes wrong with the pump, overheating will immediately follow. By opening the drain of the pump system, one can get a line in the circulation from the rate at which the water pours out when the engine is running.

Many modern engines include a thermostatic device, designed to bring the power plant up to a favorable operating heat. If anything goes wrong with the thermostat, so that it fails to open after the water gets hot, overheating will ensue. The thermostat is not designed to cool the water after it is hot, but to heat it quickly when it is cold.

Beyond these there are a number of other possible causes of overheating. Valve and ignition timing must be considered in this connection and the faulty carburetion will overheat the engine.

A poor mixture, which burns slowly, instead of exploding instantly, will produce the same symptoms as running with retarded spark. The slow burning mixture is still flaming after the movement of the piston has exposed a large area of cylinder wall and this increases the passage of heat to the water jackets. Owners who are using too much gas should remember this fact, for a too rich mixture is slow burning and tends to overheating.

Valve and ignition timing do not come under the head of causes, which produce overheating of the emergency type. They are a matter of long standing and may account for habitual or chronic cases of overheating. Most owners must call in the service station to remedy them.

Improper, or rather insufficient lubrication in the engine will produce overheating simply because the moving parts are deprived of their protective film of oil and rub against each other, producing friction and its inevitable concomitant, heat.

The wise owner will not permit overheating to continue. It is destructive in its effects and the only thing to do is to run down the cause immediately and cure it before something serious happens.

Tribune Tours

XIII.—Chicago to Milwaukee.

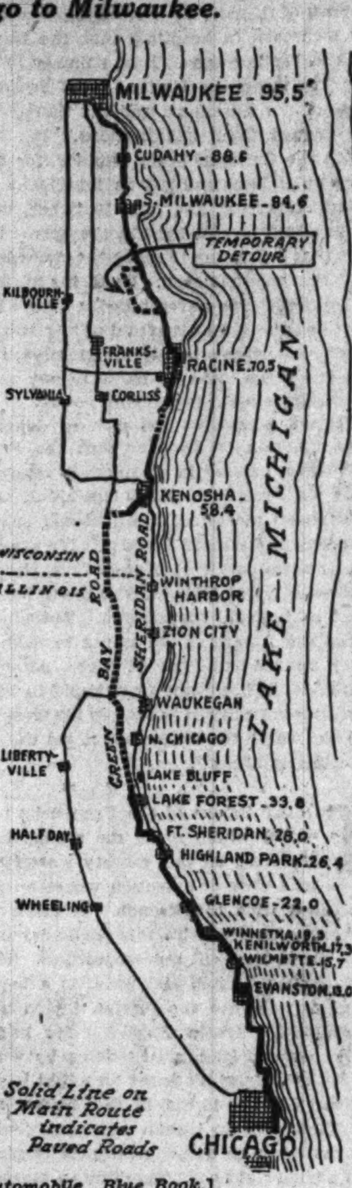
THAT a trip to Milwaukee no longer holds any real terrors for the motorist was demonstrated last week when a TRIBUNE pathfinding car went on a hunt for the best route northward. Many of the bad stretches which until recently made the Milwaukee run a discouraging experience have been eliminated. Others, which still force the driver to use his intermediate gears at times, either are being improved or are marked for improvement in the near future.

The best route at present is over alternate stretches of Sheridan road and the Green Bay road, and logs about ninety-six miles. Sixty-four miles—just two-thirds—of the way now consists of brick, concrete, asphalt, or macadam pavement in the best of condition. There are about fifteen miles of fair macadam and gravel and only about seventeen miles of poor sand and sandy dirt, none of which should give the tourist much trouble except in wet weather.

The approximate location of the unpaved sections is indicated by broken lines on the accompanying map.

For the most part the route is copiously signposted. The Yellowstone trail has just installed its yellow and black markers along a route which is almost, though not entirely, identical with the one recommended, and the Chicago Motor club's signs are frequently encountered. Beyond the state line will be found the new triangular signs of the Wisconsin state highway commission, bearing the number "17" and a large "W" in black on a white background.

The light lines on the map show the traditional options—the one out Milwaukee avenue and through Half Day and Libertyville, and those to the northward through Kilbournville and Franksville. None of these is to be compared, under present conditions, with that over Sheridan and Green Bay roads.



Solid Line on Main Route indicates Paved Roads

[From data in the 1918 Automobile Blue Book.]

0.0 Michigan and Jackson boulevards. Go north in Michigan avenue, through Lincoln park and out Sheridan road. Follow Sheridan road through all turns to 11.0 End of road at cemetery; jog right and left around same. Turn left away from lake onto South boulevard [11.4].

11.8 Hinman-av., railroad one block ahead; turn right through EVANSTON [13.0].

13.5 End of street at Northwestern university; turn left, turning right at entrance to university just beyond.

15.7 WILMETTE, Central avenue and Sheridan road. Turn right onto Sheridan road.

16.3 Irregular four corners; turn right.

16.4 End of road; turn left.

17.3 KENILWORTH, Sheridan road and Kenilworth avenue [at stone pillars]. Keep ahead one block and then turn left onto Melrose avenue.

17.7 Abbotsford road, iron fence on right; turn right.

18.3 End of road; turn left.

18.4 Right hand diagonal road at INDIAN HILL STATION; turn right along trolley and railroad. Bear right onto Maple avenue, 19.0, leaving trolley and railroad.

19.3 WINNETKA, Maple avenue and Elm street. Keep ahead on Maple avenue.

19.6 End of street; bear left onto Sheridan road.

22.0 GLENCOE, Green Bay road and Park avenue. Keep ahead with trolley on Green Bay road.

22.5 Three corners; bear left across railroad and trolley. Curve right, 23.1, passing entrance to Ravinia park on right [23.8].

26.2 Central avenue, water tower on right; turn right.

27.5 St. Johns avenue; turn right.

27.8 Irregular four corners; turn sharp right one short block and immediately left onto Bloom street. Enter Fort Sheridan reservation [28.0].

28.9 Fork; bear right.

29.0 Fork, stone chapel on right; bear left around parade grounds, avoiding all right hand roads.

29.6 Fork; bear right.

29.7 Four corners; turn right through woods, passing target range on right.

31.0 Four corners; turn left across bridge, passing Sacred Heart academy on right. Cross railroad, avoiding right hand road just beyond.

31.5 Irregular four corners; turn right onto Green Bay road.

33.8 LAKE FOREST [business center two blocks to right]; keep straight ahead on Green Bay road. Through four corners [34.9]. Keep slightly left at five corners [37.0].

40.6 End of road; turn left.

40.7 Turn right.

41.5 End of road; jog left and immediately right, joining poles.

46.5 Fork; bear left with poles.

50.7 Irregular four corners at Dexter farm; bear right.

53.1 End of road; turn left.

53.2 Fork; bear right, leaving poles.

54.1 Irregular four corners; turn right.

54.6 Turn right.

55.1 Four corners; turn left onto concrete [Sheridan road].

58.2 Market street; courthouse on right; turn right.

58.4 KENOSHA, Market and Main streets; turn left and cross railroads and drawbridge.

58.8 Milwaukee avenue; bear right with trolley.

61.2 Fork; bear left, leaving trolley.

[Straight ahead with trolley is direct road, but leads into a stretch of bad dirt. Milage 61.2 to 65.8 is a detour over better roads.]

62.0 Fork; bear right.

64.4 End of road; turn right across small bridge. Cross trolley at Piper's Road station, [65.1].

65.8 Cross railroad and turn left with trolley at end of road just beyond.

70.2 Center street; turn left and immediately right with trolley.

70.5 RACINE, Sixth and Main streets; turn left onto Main street.

70.8 Turn left with trolley onto State street.

71.0 Turn right with one line of trolley onto Douglas street.

[Route is now straight ahead for 13.4 miles. Temporary detour around construction work, indicated by road signs, will be encountered during the summer.]

84.4 Milwaukee avenue; turn right with pavement.

84.6 SOUTH MILWAUKEE, Milwaukee and Tenth avenues; turn left with trolley onto Tenth avenue.

85.1 Three corners; bear left with trolley.

86.0 CAUTION. College avenue; disregard road signs pointing ahead and turn right onto concrete, leaving trolley.

86.5 Turn left onto Lake road. Through eastern edge of CUDAHY [88.6].

92.8 End of street; turn right with trolley onto Kinnikinick avenue.

95.5 MILWAUKEE.

Marking Trail in West.

The logging of the Lincoln highway from Salt Lake City east as far as Big Springs, Neb., in contemplation of the erection of permanent steel markers, has been completed by the road crew of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The markers, which are to be erected under a coöperative working agreement between the Lincoln Highway association and the Automobile Club of Southern California, are now being manufactured. It is expected they will be in place by the 20th of July.

New U. S. Council Co-ordinates All Highway Building

ALL functions of government agencies relating to streets and highways hereafter are to be coördinated in a body called the United States highway council, composed of one representative from each of the organizations which thus far have passed upon road building problems separately and in turn.

Logan Waller Page, director of the office of public roads and rural engineering, is chairman, and the other members are Lieut. Col. W. D. Uhler of the war department; C. G. Sheffield of the fuel administration, Richard L. Humphrey of the war industries board, and G. W. Kirtley of the railroad administration.

The new authority was created at the suggestion of Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture, to do away with the delays, uncertainty, and financial loss which have been tying up road building operations while this or that governmental department had its say on the projects submitted to it.

In a letter sent to the State Councils of Defense Secretary Houston has outlined a definite policy with regard to highway improvement and maintenance. This policy by which government agencies controlling the shipment of road materials and issuance of bonds for highway improvement will be governed is that road work during the war should be directed to roads that are of prime importance for economic and military purposes.

The Council of National Defense defines roads of importance to the government as those utilized or to be utilized by the military establishments, those carrying a considerable volume of materials and supplies essential to war industries, and those having a bearing on production and distribution of food supplies, connecting population and shipping centers with surrounding areas.

The newly formed highway council will utilize the organizations of the forty-eight state highway departments with their knowledge of local conditions and provide a single agency where all highway projects calling for governmental action of any character may be dealt with. State authorities will be requested to submit plans for road improvement to the council, which will approve or disapprove them according to their importance to the war program as military, industrial, or food roads.

When the United States entered the war the work of planning state highway systems so that in general they would connect with the systems of other states was well under way. This resulted from efforts to administer the federal aid road act, so that the roads of vital importance for economic, military, and other purposes should have first consideration.

The federal aid road act, involving an aggregate five year expenditure, directly and from state and local funds, of $160,000,000 in addition to at least $200,000,000 spent independently each year by the states, provides that the states must maintain the roads and that before any money can be expended the roads must be selected and approved, and plans, specifications, and contracts submitted. It also provides that the federal government must inspect the construction of the roads.

Speed Law Shelved.

The proposed ordinance requiring all Chicago motor trucks to be equipped with speed governors, which has been pending in the city council since March 1, 1917, has been placed on file by that body. The ordinance provided that all trucks be equipped with governors on the motor intake pipe, so arranged that they could not be controlled by the driver; that these governors be susceptible of being set for certain speeds, locked, and sealed, and that all governors be inspected and sealed by city inspectors and reinspected periodically.

Up—Up and Up

Jump the Sales of Globe Tires

The complete success of the longest-mileage, hand-made tire is finally assured. The short-mileage, short-guaranteed tire has had its day.

Globe Tire dealers report such enormous increases in sales that more than 1,500 new dealers have recently rushed to the Globe Tire colors.

New York City, always hard-headed in its tire judgment, has increased its purchases of Globe Tires well over 200 per cent in the past year.

Veteran automobile men everywhere are startled by Globe Tire gains.

A year ago our Pacific Coast dealers placed initial Globe Tire orders for $1,000 and $2,000. Today individual orders for $25,000 worth are rolling in.

Memphis has bought $28,000 worth of Globe Tires in six months.

A dealer in Artesia, New Mexico, bought $3,030 worth in four months.

Globe Tire purchasers are repeaters—for it costs the motorist much less to run on this deep-lunged, longest-mileage, hand-made tire.

Fine exclusive territories now available for properly qualified dealers and distributors.

WHAT'S NEW?

When It Rains.

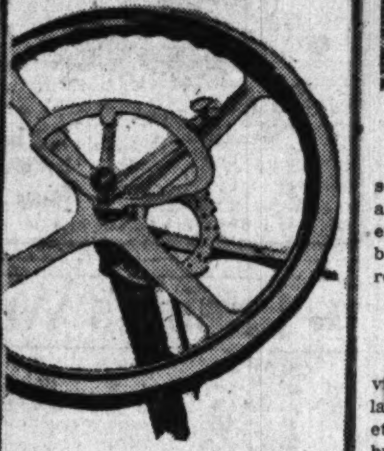
Folks who don't care for the somewhat unsightly appearance of a cleaner clamped on the wind shield, to be used when it rains, may like a compact little felt pad, treated with a special solution for rubbing over the glass. It leaves an invisible film which sheds the water and leaves a space for clear vision. The device is not greasy nor does the solution evaporate. When not in use it can be slipped in a side pocket of the car.

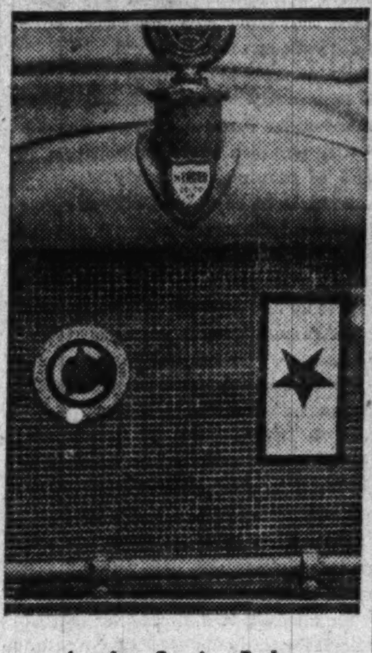
For Washing the Car.

Men who wash their own cars will find a spray brush handy. One type made in Chicago is of circular shape, filled with bristles of the proper stiffness, and with an aluminum connection for the hose at the back. The water flows out through the bristles, keeping them wet and free from grit. A lever operated by the hand that manipulates the brush regulates the flow of water, which may be of any strength desired.

Gear Shifting Made Easy.

The makers of the more or less familiar magnetic gear shift to be found on certain makes of cars have substituted an improved type of control for the push buttons formerly incased in a nickel plated box. The device now used is a quadrant just below the steering wheel, on the outside of which there are a series of notches for the selector lever, indicating the different forward speeds, neutral and reverse. When the lever is moved into an additional top notch, the gears as well as as the ignition can be locked with a key inserted in the end of the lever. The device, it is said, moves so easily that it can be worked with the little finger of the right hand.





Another Service Badge.

To the various ways of displaying service insignia, a Chicago firm has added that of carying a distinguishing emblem on one's radiator. The little badge is made of steel, enameled in red and blue, and costs 50 cents.

Light Where You Want It.

A novel convenience in lighting devices is a combination dash and trouble lamp, designed to illumine the speedometer and other instruments ordinarily, but at the same time instantly available as a portable light for reading road signs or guide maps, changing tires, etc. It is fitted with a small bull's-eye lens and a long cord which rewinds automatically and may be locked at any length. Two sizes are made, at $3.75 and $4.25.

War Prices Halt Plans for Paved Roads in Illinois

ILLINOIS probably will build no new roads this year. Such hope as there was for wartime activity in highway improvement went glimmering last week when the state department of public works at Springfield rejected all bids covering the construction of sections of the Lincoln and Dixie highways, which were to have been paved with concrete.

Figures quoted by the contractors, it was explained, were excessively high and could not be considered. Inasmuch as transportation difficulties, the cost of materials, etc., have sent road building prices soaring everywhere, it does not seem likely that lower bids will be offered, or that contracts will be made in other cases where the bids are as high.

Indeed, the highway department has indicated informally that the disposition now is to abandon its hard road program entirely because of war conditions.

The Lincoln highway was to have been paved in Du Page, Kane, De Kalb, Ogle, Lee, and Whiteside counties, and the Dixie highway in Kankakee and Iroquois counties. Other trails slated for improvement were the Chicago to St. Louis road, the National Old Trails road across the southern part of the state, and a new road north from Chicago to the Wisconsin line.

Electrics in War Work.

Electric vehicles are used extensively in five navy yards, three arsenals, and several depots in hauling mail and parcel post matter, and at the various departments of the government in Washington; also at Panama and by the bureau of insular affairs in Manila.

The electric truck is said to be given preference at the navy yards for the reason of economy and freedom from fire risk, and because of their being handled by employés, many of whom are incompetent to operate, much less to case for, gasoline trucks. The latter are practically barred from many sections of the various yards where inflammable stores, ammunition, etc., are handled.

At the arsenals, the same general advantages are found for "electrics" where they are called upon to haul smokeless powder and similar munitions, oils, acids, naphtha, etc.

The Experts Say - - -

FOR the man who does the w about his own car and yet d not care to have hands look li a garage mechanic's, the follo ing is valuable: Four ounces of gr alcohol, three ounces of glycerin three ounces of water, shaken up a bottle. AVERY
Avery Duplex Gasifier Turns Kerosene Into Gas

Harvest Bigger Crops from Tractor Plowed Ground

Early and Deep Plowing Makes Better Seed Bed for Next Year's Crop

GROUND plowed immediately after harvest is worth more than the same ground plowed later on. Why? It conserves moisture in the soil. This is one of the biggest advantages of owning an Avery Kerosene Tractor. It gives you power to plow deep and quick; power that is not stopped by hard ground, flies or hot weather; power that will run day and night, if necessary.

Farm With Kerosene

It's cheaper than feeding horses or mules. It means more acres handled by one man and every acre raising bigger crops. It's patriotic. Saves labor—increases crops—saves food.

Avery Tractors are real kerosene burners. The only make with a Duplex Gasifier fuel system which burns all the kerosene. Turns kerosene into gas.

Averyize Your Whole Farm

The day has arrived when you can do all your farm work with Avery power.

Plow, prepare your seed bed, plant and harvest grain crops with an Avery Tractor and Plow. Plant and cultivate corn and other row crops with an Avery Motor Planter-Cultivator. Thresh with an Avery Separator.

There's a size Avery Kerosene Tractor for every size farm and every kind of work—six sizes, from 5-10 to 40-80 h. p. There's a size Avery plow and thresher to fit every size tractor.

What Is a Fair Basis for Taxing the Car Owner?

BY EUGENE M. TRAVIS.

[State Controller of New York, in the current issue of Motor Life.]

VARIOUS methods have been suggested for the readjustment of taxation, but probably the most comprehensive and statesmanlike scheme ever suggested in this direction proposes to levy a graduated tax on all wheeled vehicles, varying with their weight and the use to which they are to be put. The heavy trade vehicles, motor buses, vans, etc., are more destructive to the roads than any other form, even the swift and heavy motor car equipped with steel studded tires, which are also very destructive.

Another method of more equitably readjusting the expense of road upkeep would be to set up a national highway department, enlarging the function of the present department of roads at Washington, which should take over the care of the main roads through the several states. The maintenance for these would then be supported largely by the federal government in a way similar to the Routes Nationales of France, and thus through traffic would bear a higher proportion of the expense of through routes.

In the case of the motor vehicles, every motor car to be operated upon the public highways must first pay an annual tax, fixed according to the horse power of the motor and varying from $5 to $25, although commercial cars (motor trucks, omnibuses, and delivery wagons) pay a tax assessed upon vehicles of this type, according to their weight, carrying, and, in the cases of omnibuses, seating capacity. This latest move on the part of the present administration is, therefore, of special interest to motorists generally, as it revives a very important question.

Speaking generally, motor cars are the only vehicles in this state at present which are compelled to pay any tax for the use of the roads, while horse drawn vehicles escape entirely. Whether this proportion of exemption is fair or unfair, or should be increased, is a matter which the legislature will soon have to decide. If the principle is to be adopted of making vehicles which use the roads pay more heavily for that use, it goes without saying that the present scale of motor car taxation will have to be changed and that all vehicles, motor and horse drawn alike, will have to pay their share.

It must be confessed that taxation by weight alone has not proved to be satisfactory, as weight alone is not, probably, a good criterion. As regards a gasoline tax, the authorities have already pointed out good and sufficient reasons why such a proposition would be a difficult one to carry out in practice. To begin with, gasoline is used in many other trades, such as for dyeing and cleaning, and for other purposes, and it would obviously be unfair to tax such trades for a purpose totally unconnected with their industry. Moreover, the only way by which it would be possible to collect such a tax would be by forbidding the sale of gasoline in any form for motor cars except in special packages.

If tires were taken as a basis of motor car taxation great difficulties would present themselves. A broad tire does infinitely less harm to the road than a narrow one, while pneumatic tires are admitted to be less destructive to road surfaces than those of solid rubber, which, in their turn, are better from a road point of view than plain iron or steel rims. It is, therefore, desirable from the point of view of the road to encourage the use of big pneumatic tires and undesirable to put any percentage taxation upon the price of tires, as this would encourage the use of smaller, cheaper, and more destructive tires.

Getting Them Apart.

FLYING NOW

Just Designing the Liberty Engine Wasn't Enough for Former Packard Official.

LIEUT. COL. J. G. VINCENT.

THE automobile world knows that J. G. Vincent, formerly chief engineer of the Packard company, was one of the two designers of the Liberty airplane engine. But few, aside from his more intimate friends, are aware that he is now one of the most expert flyers in the army, and is by way of acquiring a full fledged reputation as a daredevil.

Vincent is a lieutenant colonel now and is in charge of the aviation experimental station at Dayton, O. Not satisfied with having done more to create the Liberty engine than any other individual, he insisted on having first hand information as to how it works in flight, and took the most direct method. In a surprisingly short time he learned to loop the loop, make Immelmann turns and things, and has already made several long intercity flights in record time.

And they talk about Hun efficiency!

Logic.

Mrs. Much—What dreadful language your parrot uses!

Mrs. Nothing—Yes, my husband bought the bird one day and brought it home in his car, and I have always suspected that he had engine trouble on that trip."

By and About the Folks Who Make 'Em and Sell 'Em

HERE'S a paragraph about a good sport—the Dort. It merely happens that they rhyme, but the point is that in a list of fifteen competitors the builders of the Dort were the only ones to send out, through newspaper publicity channels, a complete report of the Los Angeles-Yosemite economy run held recently on the Pacific coast. And the Dort didn't win; it ran sixth, with 24.85 miles per gallon to its credit as against 29.38 for the winner.

The National is winning high favor in France, according to Leonard D. Fisk Jr., a military driver with the One Hundred and Second infantry. "I never saw so many Nationals," he wrote the other day after a trip to one of the larger French towns. "They were almost as thick as Fords."

A brougham shipped to Earl C. Anthony, the Los Angeles Packard dealer, arrived the other day in a closed freight car containing some other merchandise and three hobos. The 'bos disappeared, and so did the car's interior fittnigs. In their place Anthony found this note:

> Packard Motor Car Company: We have just had a delightful demonstration ride in your lovely Packard limousine, and we are delighted with it. While it is true we did not see much scenery, the sides of the box car preventing, the vehicle rode very smoothly, with an unsurpassed degree of comfort, and the next automobile we buy will surely be a Packard. There is just one request we would like to make, and that is, that in the future your company build your limousines about six feet longer, as we found considerable difficulty in three of us sleeping comfortably in this bed at one time.

The price of the Briscoe has been advanced from $825 to $885.

"Triple heated" fuel is being emphasized as a novel feature of the Fulton motor truck. A stove kept hot by the exhaust pipe heats the air before it enters the carburetor; the gas mixture on leaving the carbureter, is conducted through a channel between the hot cylinders to the opposite side of the engine, and then comes the "hot spot" of an exhaust-contact manifold.

The first of the new Doble steam cars to be delivered to buyers will be sent to a few favored cities from the Detroit factory this month. Only a very small production is planned for the present, the plant being devoted largely to the manufacture of trucks and a new kerosene heating plant for houses and larger buildings. The latter, which takes the place of the ordinary firebox in any kind of furnace, will be distributed at points where the shortage of coal is most acutely felt during the coming fall and winter.

HERE'S ECONOMY

Automobile License Plates, Like War Bread, Must Be Made Out of Substitutes.

THERE'S at least one item of motoring equipment that Washington considers definitely nonessential. It's steel license plates.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board, has notified New York state officials that the 500 tons of steel necessary to manufacture the number plates they'll need for 1919 cannot be spared this year and that a substitute must be used. The tags may be made out of zinc or the present ones repainted.

Presumably the same warning will be going soon to all the states. What would you suggest as a suitable material in Illinois?

Enter Alcohol!

Although this country produces about two-thirds of the petroleum of the world and produced more gasoline this year than ever before, investigations are being carried on by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce with a view to exploiting the use of mixtures of alcohol and gasoline in motor vehicles. The production of industrial alcohol on a large scale would help materially to increase the supply of motor fuel.

Alcohol can be produced at the paper pulp mills in this country at a cost of 15 to 20 cents a gallon at the present time, and if all the paper mills suitable for the purpose were equipped with the necessary plants they would have a combined capacity of 15,000,000 gallons a year. Alcohol can be blended with gasoline to produce a suitable fuel that will avoid the difficulties of starting a cold motor on alcohol alone, and without any change in the carburetor or the compression of the engine.

Treat It Kindly.

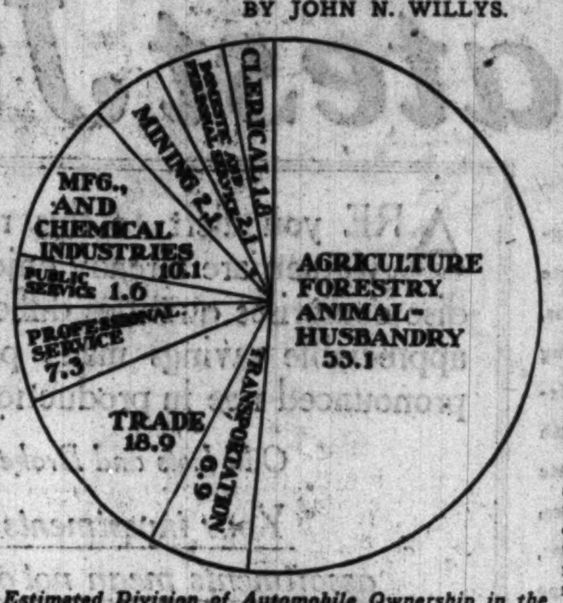
This is the time of year when owners of new cars need to be reminded that more harm may result to the vehicle in the first 500 miles of running than in all the rest of its life. After the car has been run a couple of hundred miles the driver should go over it and take up slack in bolts and bearings. Pistons should have excessive lubrication during the early wearing in period. The universal joints must be kept fully lubricated during the early running of the car. A stitch at this time saves not nine but nineteen.

Carbureter Wisdom.

In making carbureter adjustments, an operation the owner usually performs when the engine is cold, the new adjustment should be given a chance to prove itself before another change is made. That is, after making a change the engine should be run for a couple of miles, even if it misfires at the beginning while it is still cold. It may be that after it has warmed up to normal running temperature, the new adjustment will prove satisfactory. Give each new adjustment a thorough tryout.

Farmers Bought More Than Half of All American Cars Last Year; 90 Per Cent Used in Business

BY JOHN N. WILLYS.



Estimated Division of Automobile Ownership in the United States by Occupations.

DO you know that right now there are 5,000,000 motor vehicles in use, or one to every twenty persons in the United States?

In these cars 25,000,000 people, one-fourth of the population, could be transported 100 miles or more in a single day. Only the first filling of gasoline would be needed for the journey.

Before the war produced unheard of conditions, it is not astonishing that people had paid little attention to these matters and had not analyzed the usefulness of the automobile. The manufacturers themselves believed their sales organizations to have been responsible for their marked sales increases, when as a mater of fact the motor car had come to fill a demand which had existed for centuries.

How then does the automobile fit into the scheme of things? Who uses it? There was only one way to find out definitely and that was to ask the people who owned and operated cars. This was accomplished by getting an expression from every man who purchased an Overland car in 1917, showing the occupation in which he was engaged. This information has been tabulated in classification by trade, as indicated in the diagram, herewith.

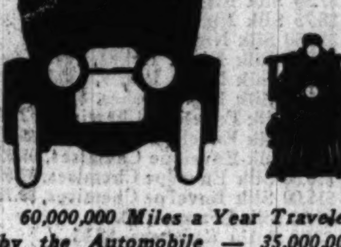
The result of this investigation when charted showed some surprising facts. The first one is that this survey proved that 90 per cent of automobile use is for business purposes.

The next great fact, gained at a glance, was that the men whose business depended upon covering a great deal of ground in a short space of time were its largest purchasers. While these figures apply only to the 1917 production of Overland cars, we feel that we may safely assume that approximately the same divisions by trades are applicable to automobile ownership in general. We have, therefore, assumed this to be the case in our conclusions.

Shall we expect to find automobiles in the city alone?

Look at the first occupational division of the chart. The American farmer, representing 38.2 per cent of the population of the country, bought 53.1 per cent of the automobiles last year. The farmer is buying automobiles because they have done more to lighten labor and change his entire plane of living and doing business than any other invention since the harvesting machine.

The government estimates that it requires five acres of ground to support a horse. On this basis, assuming that each automobile on a farm replaces one horse, the automobiles in use on farms today alone release more than 10,000,000 acres of land—sufficient to support three and one-third million people.



60,000,000 Miles a Year Traveled by the Automobile — 35,000,000 Miles by All Railroads.

In the business of farming the automobile has become invaluable. With it one farmer can raise more products and reach more markets. It helps him to make up for the depleted labor supply, and at the same time aids him in cultivating more acres himself more intensively.

Again, the "trade" classification of the chart shows a large percentage of cars owned and again the cause. For this division is comprised largely of salesmen. This classification embracing 9.5 per cent of the population owns 18.9 per cent of the automobiles. These men have found that with the aid of the motor car they can make themselves much more effective in their work.

That the motor car has been an invaluable aid to men in professional service is shown by the fact that in this classification, representing 4.4 per cent of the population, 7.3 per cent of the automobiles are owned. Here we find the physician called out in the middle of the night, or speeding to save a life by prompt response to an emergency call. The country preacher, too, is going about, using his passenger car in a thousand ways and taking the place of the "circuit rider."

Likewise the lawyer, the judge, the college professor find that the passenger car helps to conserve time in their duties.

The manufacturing industry represents a total of 27.9 per cent of the total population of the country and yet shows only 10.1 per cent of the automobiles owned. Located in the cities, industry is not so dependent upon the automobile.

And yet when sixteen great army cantonments, to house almost a million men, were built in ninety days, one of the largest contractors told me that it could not have been done without the aid of the automobile.

This survey of the automobile and its many uses only serves to strengthen the conclusion that it constitutes the greatest transportation force in the world.

Compare the motor cars with the railroads and we find the automobiles of this country traveling 60,000,000,000 miles a year, as compared with the 35,000,000,000 passenger miles of the railroads. These multipliers of energy are traveling 40,000,000 miles a day, the equivalent of 1,600 times around the earth.

Watch for Leaks.

In summer when the heat causes rapid evaporation of gasoline tiny leaks in the fuel line often escape discovery. In some cases this will be enough to account for a sudden cutting down of the mileage per gallon. So in cases where the relative mileage shows a sudden drop it is well to inspect the fuel line for small leaks.

Notice—

Baton Rouge, La., June 18, 1918.

In accordance with the provisions of Paragraph A, Section 1 of Article 324 of the constitution, and the resolution adopted by the Board of Liquidation of the State debt prior to issuance, the following described bonds of the State of Louisiana are hereby called for redemption:

33 bonds of $1,000.00 each, Nos. 10157 to 10189, both numbers inclusive, and 5 bonds of $100.00 each, Nos. 1001-1005, both numbers inclusive, all dated January 1, 1914, and maturing August 1, 1964.

The holders of these bonds are hereby notified to present them, with all coupons due subsequent to August 1, 1918, attached, either to Hon. Henry Hunsicker, State Treasurer, Baton Rouge, La., or any of the State Fiscal Agent banks in the City of New Orleans, or to Harris, Forbes and Company in the City of New York, who will pay the same at face value, plus a premium of four [4%] per cent.

Interest on these bonds will cease after August 1, 1918.

R. G. PLEASANT,
Governor and President of the Board of Liquidation.

STORAGE FURNITURE

We find it necessary, at short intervals, to offer to the public furniture and household goods of every description. This includes parlor and bedroom suites, pianos, talking machines, ranges, and refrigerators. Also oriental rugs.

Inasmuch as the object of this sale is to realize storage charges on each piece, it follows that the prices are ridiculously low. Each and every article carries a tag, on which the price of same is plainly marked.

Make a visit immediately to our salesrooms before the choicest articles are gone. We want you to see for yourself that, due to our enormous stock, we have the very article you have been looking for.

Executives and Managers.

TO THE MAN WITH PRACTICAL EXPErience covering a number of years, including in his practice the theory and fundamental principles of accounting, we have the following to offer:

Accountant to handle the general records of the company, which will include the supervision of the compilation of costs.

The chances for advancement are exceedingly great, as the institution is to be trebled within the coming year. Furthermore, that work that is not on direct government contract is so essential that it bears preference in that our requirements are protected by priority certificates. Therefore, there is removed the possibility of curtailed production, which has caused and will cause the reduction of forces in the nonessential industries.

The remuneration is sufficient, and to married men with established homes we will make additional concessions.

Our plant is located in the city of Racine, Wisconsin, with a population of 50,000, where all the comforts of a larger city may be had without the smoke, confusion, and other discomforts of the larger.

Your application will be treated in confidence.

In replying to the above take pains to give your phone number or other information necessary to get into immediate communication with yourself.

Address E A 50, Tribune.

DEPARTMENT STORE MAN—

In the uncertainty of these trying times the thinking man is looking into the future. Our organization can absorb a few men who have had selling, buying or merchandising experience in piece goods, general dry goods, ready to wear, notions, stationery or house furnishing lines. We are not interested in a job hunter, but the earnest, serious minded, accurate, careful and moral married man, with family responsibility of children, who now has position but recognizes his present limitation of advancement and would appreciate an unusual opportunity with a fast growing, safely established mercantile concern, in which advancement of salary and position is based solely on merit and profit producing ability. Your letter will be entirely confidential, in which tell your age, number of children, member of what church, whom you have been employed by, length of service and salary. The position is in another city, as our experience has taught us that a changed environment does much to make the man; personal interview will be arranged for selected applicants. Address B D 43, Tribune.

Has the Life Insurance Field Become More Limited?

NOT WITH US.

Our Agents can sell policies on the annual premium plan up to $3,000 to young men and young women as young as age 2. It is surprising how much annual premium insurance for goodly amounts can be placed on the little folks, protective insurance and educational and business start endowment insurance. This extension of the age limit for ordinary insurance down to age 2 helps considerably in these days, and we have other advantages that help still more. Our new business this year is more than 50% larger than the new business for the same period last year. By the way, if your company will let you write our insurance for children as a side line we will. Some are writing as much as $10,000 a month of this insurance as a side line! If you can sell insurance on a straight commission contract, with renewals, but not with advances, write or see OLD COLONY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, 2721 Michigan-av., Chicago.

IF YOU ARE A HUSTLER

let us start you in an independent business without capital. YOU can earn $3,000 to $5,000 a year selling our complete line of groceries, paints, oils, etc., at wholesale direct to farmers and other consumers. Exceptional opportunity for wide awake men. Experience not essential. Write for particulars. Answer by correspondence only. Dept. 12, George Meldrum & Co., Wholesale Grocers, Chicago.

JUNIOR SALESMAN.

We have an unusual opportunity for an active, clean cut, reliable young man, 18 to 23 years, to begin in our sales organization; position at first will require selling the consumer, in connection with extensive educational campaign; must be single, willing to travel, a hard worker, and ambitious to become a successful salesman; selling experience not so essential as determination to succeed; permanent position with salary and traveling expenses; the man we want can in a reasonable length of time develop sufficient ly to become one of our general salesmen. Apply S. W. McKay, The M. K. Fairbank Co., 225 W. 18th-st.

WHEN HUNTING A JOB

YOU want real service, one recognized and valued by the best employers. YOU want the service prepared to offer the best proposition in the way of salary and opportunities for YOUR particular qualifications. YOU want our service, for fifteen years considered by employer and employe alike as the world's best.

WE HAVE PLACED

100,000 high grade men and we can place YOU. For your consideration we offer five hundred of the best propositions handled in our long experience, each one with an A1 firm, such as YOU would deem it a privilege to be connected with.

Here are a few of the five hundred OPEN NOW—one of them is THE job for YOU.

CONSIDER THESE!

EXECUTIVES.

General Merchandise Manager [for motor concern]	$20,000
Secretary and Treasurer [for manufacturing concern]	5,000
Three Sales Managers	$3,000- 5,000
Four Advertising Managers	$1,800- 3,000
Four Sales Correspondents	$2,000- 3,000

SALES.

Some of the best sales propositions—eighty-eight of them—are offered to live wire salesmen by this Department. Only positions paying liberal drawing accounts and a commission are handled, and all are with high grade firms, putting out staple lines. One of the biggest flour concerns in the country is seeking six real salesmen through this Department.

ACCOUNTING.

Comptroller [with manufacturing concern]	$7,500
Office Manager	4,500
Assistant Treasurer	2,400
Cost Accountant	2,000
Statistician	2,000
Manager Cost Department	1,800

Besides, we have orders for some five hundred Accountants and Bookkeepers to whom we can offer salaries ranging from $1,200 to $2,400 a year.

TECHNICAL.

24 Production Men	$1,800-$5,000
4 Shop Superintendents	$2,000- 3,000
Efficiency Engineer	3,000
Four Construction Men	$2,000- 2,500
Testing Engineer	2,500

In addition, we can offer the biggest salaries in our business history to Master Mechanics, Inspectors, Foremen, Machinists, Tool Setters, Screw Machine Operators, Electricians, Motor Testers, Automobile Mechanics, Draftsmen of all kinds—Railway, Map, Architectural, Mechanical, and Car [over one hundred and fifty of them], Tracers, Designers, Metallurgist, Armature Winders, and Foremen for all kinds of shop work.

CLERICAL.

The one hundred and twenty orders in our Clerical Department present excellent opportunities to Stenographers, Stock Record Clerks, Timekeepers, Cost Clerks, Shipping Clerks, and General Office Men. These positions pay the highest salaries we have been authorized to guarantee in fifteen years' business experience.

Every one of the jobs represented above is OPEN NOW. If YOU are THE man for any one of them, it won't take long to connect YOU with a real opportunity.

See one of our PLACING men the first thing tomorrow morning before some other worthy man lands the job YOU want.

Just think—a real job paying a bigger salary and offering greater opportunities with an A1 concern! It is up to YOU. Why hesitate?

If YOU cannot call, write NOW.

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT.

WE WANT MORE LADY AGENTS TO SELL our insurance for children on the annual premium plan. We issue ordinary insurance up to $3,000 to young men and young women as young as age 2. It is surprising how much annual premiums insurance for goodly amounts can be placed on the little folks, protective insurance and educational and business start endowment insurance. It is not a 5 and 10 cent, ring the doorbell fifty-two times a year proposition. It is ordinary insurance for children in the better class families. It is a new proposition which fills a long time want and is meeting with great success. The premiums are for substantial amounts, and so are the commissions. OLD COLONY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, 2721 Michigan-av., Chicago. Calumet 81.

WHEAT!

This is the most favorable time to buy wheat land in the Northwest, and the [illegible] District is the most favorable place. The high price for wheat, oats, and barley is having its effect on land values, and when we market our 1918 crop, which promises to be a bumper, land prices are going to [illegible].
Our proposition is ideal for actual settlers, but nonresidents can own a farm under our plan and we will look after your farming interests. People of moderate means can get a start toward independence. You know that the farmer is getting high prices for everything, and you can increase your income materially by farming yourself.
Don't kick about high prices for food. Get busy and produce some yourself. A card will bring, by mail, full information with a book of fine views of farming in Western Canada.

FLORIDA.
A Self-Sustaining Home.
Are you interested in permanently solving the high cost of living, the coal shortage and in getting away from the severe winters?
Would you like to create an independent income for life which will simplify your financial problems?
It can be done through a 10 acre Commercial Grapefruit Grove at Lakeland, Florida. The grove is cared for perpetually by a scientific co-operative association of grove owners. Your personal attention is not required.
The investment is not large, can be handled on easy terms and all speculation has been eliminated. If you can satisfy us you are able to finance our proposition we will stand the expense of a trip of investigation including a week's entertainment at our Country Club.
Write for further information without obligating yourself.

INDEPENDENCE HAPPINESS

$1,000 YEAR INCOME.

Work in your own berry patch from April 1st to November 1st. Loaf where you want or return to your work in the big city from November 1st to April 1st. Cash income of $1,000 per year and living on your own vegetables and chickens for nine months. No experience necessary. Fruitvale, Michigan, is a natural berry country. Experts to guide you. Five acres complete, $950; small payment down, balance $10 a month; no interest, no taxes, no assessments. House or bungalow built out of the berry profits. Proposition of special interest to working men and women, clerks and professional people who have no other hope of gaining financial independence and life out in the open, in a wonderfully healthy country; equable climate, pure water, general store, school, and community house. Agents wanted everywhere. For full particulars call or address The National Society of Fruitvalers [Co-operative], [founded in 1912], 516 Hearst Bldg., Chicago.

FOOD FAMINE

WE ARE HEADED straight toward a food famine. Food, and more food, and still more food, must be produced. You can have both pockets filled with money, but if you cannot buy anything to eat your money is worthless.

THE UNITED STATES is short millions of beef cattle at the present time. Raw hides are bringing almost as much money today as 2 year old steers brought twenty years ago. Nine-tenths of our 1917 wheat crop is exhausted.

A MOST PROFITABLE thing to do, and patriotic as well, is to raise food. We have the excellent hardwood lands, climate and markets in Kalkaska and Antrim counties, Michigan. Food production for years to come will not equal the demand; so get some of this land now while it is cheap and food prices high. We believe it to be the best all round farming proposition in the country. Our experience of 20 years qualifies us to speak authoritatively.

THESE LANDS are now selling for $15 to $30 per acre in tracts of 10, 20, 40, 60, 80, or more acres. Free farm advisers, free insurance while you are paying for the land, money loaned for improvements, and other advantages told in our large booklet made for your convenience and success. Write for it today.

OUR TERMS, ranging from $10 to $100 down and balance in small monthly payments puts a farm home within the reach of every one.

GET READY for our special excursion of July 9 and 23. Railroad fare will be allowed on your purchase. Offices open every weekday, Monday evenings, and Saturday afternoons.

FARMS

Well located, with good soil, are a mighty good investment. Food production is becoming increasingly important. The section in which we operate, Taylor, Lincoln, Langlade, Marathon, Price, and Clark counties, Wisconsin, is adapted to general farming, although the big industry is dairying. A wonderful dairy country. Luxuriant growth of timothy and clover. Abundant rainfall. Good clay loam soil, rich in nitrogen, with clay subsoil. Many creeks and streams. Barley, rye, buckwheat, oats, potatoes, corn for silage, and all the vegetables successfully raised. Also small fruit. Get data on this section from State Immigration Commissioner, Madison, Wis.

WE ARE OWNERS. We sell on very liberal terms, 10 years to pay. We sometimes take in desirable property in part payment.

We sell live stock on terms.

We have been operating in Wisconsin for more than 40 years. Send for booklet, "Letters from Satisfied Customers."
